The proposed cession to the city of St. Louis for the purpose stated in the resolution, will require the abandonment of the land, with its permanent and fixed improvements, and of the buildings, the value of which amounts to $393,010, and the removal of the rest of the public property. The St. Louis arsenal is the only arsenal west of the Mississippi, and, except that at Pittsburg, the only arsenal in the West where construction and repairs of artillery carriages, arms, accoutrements, and munitions can be carried on to a great extent. It has now good facilities for doing such work, and nearly all the supplies for the West and Northwest are prepared there. It cannot be abandoned, without very great injury to the public interest and service, until another and similar arsenal is constructed in that part of the country to supply its place, and the arms, munitions, and all moveable apparatus at the present arsenal are transferred thither. The cession to the city of St. Louis until after this shall have been done, is, in my opinion, altogether inexpedient. On the other hand, there seems no doubt that since the original location of the arsenal, the extension of the city has brought the two into an inconvenient and disadvantageous proximity for both, and that the removal of the arsenal to a site further from the city is desirable. The erection of proper buildings on the new site, and the removal of the ordnance stores and supplies thither, would cost, it is estimated, $250,000. It means to this extent will be furnished by the city of St. Louis, in consideration of the cession, or by appropriation of Congress for the purpose, the erection of the buildings and the removal of the stores may follow as soon as practicable; and when that is done, I know of no objection to the cession of the present arsenal to the city.

The resolution of the House of Representatives is returned herewith.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. K. CRAIG, Colonel of Ordnance.

HON. JEFF. DAVIS, Secretary of War.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate, as amended, and the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole were concurred in.

Mr. WELLER. I now offer the following amendment, which was rejected in Committee of the Whole:

For the payment of claims adjudicated by the board of Army officers, appointed by the Secretary of War, under the sixth section of the act of August 31, 1852, §129,885 23 1/2.

In regard to this amendment, I have only to say that the amount named in it is the amount of claims favorably passed on by the commissioners. Claims to the amount of over $865,000 were presented, of which $400,000 were rejected or suspended, and $129,000 allowed. A record of their allowances has been transmitted to the Committee of Military Affairs, who have carefully examined the subject, and are entirely satisfied that the allowances are just and proper.

Mr. BRIGHT called for the yeas and nays on the amendment; and they were ordered.

Mr. GWIN. This board of officers was organized under an act passed two years ago. They have been, for two years, engaged in the examination of these claims, and have made an elaborate report upon them. It is well known to those who have investigated the subject, that the board have, with scrupulous care, examined every claim they have passed on; and out of the vast amount presented, $865,000, as my colleague stated, they have only passed this amount. Sir, it is useless to pass laws establishing boards of commissioners, if their awards are never to be carried into effect. I had hoped there would not be a member of this body who would oppose this appropriation. I trust it will be agreed to.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, upon the amendment, resulted—yeas 23, nays 13; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Bayard, Brodhead, Brown, Cooper, Dawson, Dodge of Iowa, Gwin, Houston, James, Johnson, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, Morton, Rusk, Seward, Slidell, Thomson of New Jersey, Tombs, Toucey, Walker, and Weller—23.

NAYS—Messrs. Benjamin, Bright, Chase, Clay, Evans, Fessenden, Fitzpatrick, Hunter, Pearce, Pratt, Rockwell, Stuart, and Sumner—13.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TOUCEY. I now renew the amendment which was offered and rejected in Committee of the Whole, appropriating $90,000 for the purchase of rifles.

Mr. WALKER. In what shape does the Senator renew it. As it was modified?

Mr. TOUCEY. In the same shape in which it was modified.

Mr. MALLORY. Is the amendment for the purchase of three thousand rifles at $90,000—thirty dollars a rifle?

Mr. TOUCEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. MALLORY. I suggest whether it would not be as well to leave the amount, $90,000, without specifying the number of rifles? I am using one of these very rifles myself, and I know their value.

Mr. TOUCEY. I will adopt the suggestion of the Senator from Florida, and offer the amendment in this shape:

For the purchase of the best breech-loading rifles, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, for the use of the United States Army, $90,000: Provided, The Secretary of War, after a fair practical test thereof, shall deem the purchase advisable and proper.

Mr. STUART called for the yeas and nays on the amendment, and they were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 25, nays 8; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Benjamin, Brown, Clay, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Geyer, Gwin, Houston, James, Johnson, Mallory, Morton, Rusk, Sebastian, Seward, Slidell, Stuart, Thomson of New Jersey, Tombs, Toucey, Walker, and Weller—25.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Bright, Chase, Dawson, Evans, Pearce, Pratt, and Rockwell—8.

So the amendment was adopted.

Mr. DAWSON. The Senate has agreed to the amendment appropriating $129,000 as part of the award made by the commissioners appointed under the act of August 31, 1852. I beg now to present the following amendment as an additional section:

SEC.—And be it further enacted, That the board of officers appointed under the sixth section of the "act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending June 30, 1853," approved August 31, 1852, is hereby authorized and directed, in addition to the powers and duties already conferred upon it, to extend its examinations to claims arising from the destruction of property by the troops serving under the command of Lieutenant Colonel John C. Fremont, in California, in the years 1846 and 1847, by his orders, as well as for the destruction of property by the enemy caused by the occupancy of the claimants premises by the said troops: That said board is empowered to examine witnesses under oath, and take testimony, if necessary, in California or elsewhere: That for the payment of claims heretofore favorably reported upon by the board, including that numbered one hundred and ninety-seven, being the claim of Santiago E. Arguello, and amounting to $11,548, and for compensation of the members of the said board for and during their period of service as such, at a rate not exceeding $3,000 per annum for each, deducting therefrom their Army pay, the sum of $159,500 be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. And that the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay to the treasurer of said board, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $9,000 for contingent expenses of said board, including therein office rent, clerk hire, stationery, fuel, the payment of witness fees, duly summoned by the board at a rate not exceeding those paid by the United States district courts in California, or elsewhere, as the case may be, the traveling expenses of said board, not exceeding sixteen cents per mile to each member, and other incidental expenses.

Mr. President, in 1852 we passed a law requiring the President of the United States to appoint a board of commissioners to investigate these claims. The President appointed Colonel Smith, Colonel Thomas, and Major Lee, and they were required to sit in this city. They have done that, and have reported to Congress that they have allowed $129,885 of these claims; and rejected or suspended $411,998. There are then about $300,000 more of claims which they have not pretended to make any report upon, from the fact that the testimony was not satisfactory. The whole amount of claims presented to them was $865,803, as claims against the Government arising out of the defense of California by Colonel Frémont and his men during the Mexican war.

Now the question is, what are we to do with these commissioners? They cannot discharge their full duties here, unless the Government risks a great deal by sending to California for witnesses to come here, and thereby increasing the expense. For the purpose of continuing the board, this amendment has been presented, authorizing them to go to the State of California and hear the testimony in relation to the claims. If we do not now do something of this sort, the board will be dissolved, and at the next session of Congress we shall have to proceed in some course or other. These gentlemen, as far as they have gone, have discharged their duty most ably, and have rejected a large amount of claims. I trust that while we have these claims now under investigation, we shall adopt this amendment, and let them go to the State of California, and report to the next Congress what should be done in relation to them. The passage of the $129,000 appropriation makes it necessary for us to go on in this matter, and I do not know that we can adopt any better plan than to intrust the rights of the Government in the hands of these gentlemen. If the amendment be adopted, they will go to California, hear the testimony, come back at the next Congress, and report to us what they have done, and then we may bring the whole thing to a close. If the board be now allowed to be dissolved, the claims will be brought before us at the next session of Congress, and we shall have to adopt a similar mode; for the Committee on Military Affairs cannot investigate them, unless they send to California to bring witnesses here, which would increase the chances against the Government several hundred thousand dollars, in our opinion. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. STUART. I wish to ask the Senator whether this amendment is reported from the Committee on Military Affairs?

Mr. DAWSON. Yes, unanimously reported from them. The committee could see nothing better to be done than this, and they thought this board of officers, composed of intelligent and honest men, could investigate the subject much better than a committee, and that money would be saved to the Government by this course.

Mr. STUART. I only wish to say, in a very few words, why I cannot consent to vote for this amendment. The Senator states that this board has completed its duty, and made this report. He gives you a statement of what the board has allowed, and what it has rejected, and what there was insufficient evidence in relation to. The office for which the board was instituted has been accomplished. Now, what is proposed? Why, sir, it is that the Government of the United States shall take upon itself all the extra expenses necessary to enable individual claimants in California to make their proof. Is it done anywhere else? All over this Union, individuals having claims against the Government of the United States are obliged to come here, year after year, urging them—many have been here for fifty years—at their own expense, endeavoring to get their claims acted upon by Congress. Now, it is proposed here to renew this commission, to pay the immense expenses that must attend a commission in California—for nobody can live there without very great expense—to pay for witnesses, and to send this commission to the very doors of the individual claimants. I submit that it is not done elsewhere in this Union.

Mr. DAWSON. I will tell the Senator why it is proposed to be done. There were presented to the board claims to the amount of $865,000, of which there were suspended or rejected $411,998, withdrawn $147,800, rejected $152,933, and allowed $129,000. The suspended claims are now before us, and they were suspended because the testimony was not satisfactory to the commissioners; but they had no authority to send to California to get testimony. It will be a great saving of expense to send the commissioners there and obtain testimony, rather than to keep the commission here, and to send for witnesses there. The board have only allowed $129,000 of claims, and suspended the remainder, with the exception $153,000, which they absolutely rejected. Claims to the amount of over $411,000 are still undecided and at the next session of Congress they will come before us. How are we to get rid of them? The Senators from California will tell you that if the commissioners go there and have witnesses brought before them, there can be no doubt the fact will be established that many of these claims are spurious, and the witnesses who testify to them can be disproved there, but not here. I merely submit this statement of facts to the Senate.

Mr. WELLER. The testimony which it is proposed to obtain in California is more important to the Government than it is to individuals. It is to protect the Treasury against frauds; for, as I said before, there is no place short of California where these frauds can be established. If I looked alone to the interests of claimants in California, I should desire this commission never to go there; for I know that officers who were under the command of Colonel Frémont have told me of individual cases where they knew claims were presented to three times the amount to which the parties were entitled; and there have been claims presented before this board for the same property, in the name of the different persons. These facts can only be established in California. The papers, prima facie, on their face, are all right; and if a man were to judge from the papers alone, he would be disposed to allow the amount. Therefore, if this commission be allowed to go to California, in my judgment they will be enabled to detect many fraudulent claims which would otherwise be passed.

Now, if you allow parties in California to take their proofs, and come here, as the Senator from Michigan says other claimants come, I am afraid they will be allowed claims for a much larger amount than they are justly entitled to; for I believe, in some cases, there have been perjuries committed. I wish to protect the Treasury.

The board, as it was originally organized for the purpose of passing on these claims, have not discharged their full duty. They have suspended upwards of $400,000 of claims, because they were not satisfied upon the proof. Now they desire to obtain additional testimony, not for the purpose of showing that the claims are right, but they have suspicions that there is some fraud about them, and they desire to obtain proof of that fact. By looking at the report of that board, you will find that, in fixing the value of property in California, they have put it down to the lowest point at which it could be put. For instance, they allow thirty or thirty-five dollars for horses. That is a very low price; but claims were presented to the board for horses at $100 ahead, and I suppose they are now worth $200 or $300 ahead; but they assessed the value at the time the property was received by Colonel Frémont.

I believe the argument which the Senator from Michigan has presented to-night is the same one that was presented here at the time of the original organization of the board. Colonel Frémont estimated these claims to amount to between $700,000 and $800,000. It seems that he was very accurate in that, for the claims presented amount to about $800,000—in the neighborhood of his estimate. The only question is, whether the board shall be continued in existence. I stake my reputation now upon it, that it is the cheapest way of settling these claims.

Mr. ADAMS. I have voted for a sufficient number of amendments to this bill with the name of Colonel Frémont upon them. If this question shall come up at the next session, I do not know how I may vote; but I will not vote to put Colonel Frémont's name on this bill any more.

The amendment was rejected.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time; and the bill was read a third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. WEBSTER, his Secretary, transmitting a report from the Secretary of State, with the accompanying documents, in answer to a resolution of the Senate of the 5th ultimo, relative to the seizure of the bark Griffin by the Brazilian authorities; which was read, and ordered to be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a report of the Secretary of the Navy, in compliance with a resolution of the Senate of the 1st March, 1854, calling for information in relation to the application of surface or fresh water condensers to steam vessels belonging to the United States; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed.

CIVIL AND DIPLOMATIC BILL.

Mr. HUNTER, from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending the 30th June, 1855, reported that they had met, and, after full and free conference, had agreed to recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate do concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives to the forty-fourth, fifty-seventh, seventy-fifth, eighty-third, one hundred and fifth, one hundred and twenty-seventh, one hundred and sixty-eighth, and one hundred and seventy-fifth amendments of the Senate.

That the Senate do recede from its twenty-third amendment, and concur in the original item, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out the words, "thirty six thousand nine," in line twenty-four, page seven, of the bill, and in lieu thereof, insert "forty-one thousand seven."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the forty-second, one hundred and second, one hundred and fifteenth, one hundred and fifty-fifth, one hundred and sixty-first, and one hundred and sixty-fifth amendments of the Senate, and agree thereto.

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the ninety-seventh amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out all of the Senate amendment, and in lieu thereof, insert "for extinguishment of private claims for the possession of the whole or any part of the custom-house lot at San Francisco, California, $10,000."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the one hundred and forty-four and a half amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto, with an amendment, as follows: Strike out all after the word "provided," in line eight, to and including the word "direction," in line eighteen, on page fifty-eight of the original bill, and in lieu thereof insert, "that any officer of the Army or Navy who has been, or may be appointed hereafter, to disburse the money which is now, or may hereafter be appropriated for the erection, alteration of any of the edifices, structures, or works for which appropriations are made in this act, shall be subject to all the pains, penalties, and liabilities contained in the provisions of the act entitled, 'An act to provide for the better organization of the Treasury, and for the collection, safe-keeping, and disbursement of the public revenue,' approved 6th of August, 1846."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the one hundred and forty-sixth amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto with an amendment as follows: In line two of said amendment, strike out the words "seventy-five," and in lieu thereof insert "fifteen."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the one hundred and sixty-fourth amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto with an amendment, as follows: Strike out all after the word "enacted," in line one of said amendment, to the end thereof, and in lieu thereof insert, "That the Librarian of Congress shall receive $1,800, the Assistant Librarians, $1,500 each, and the messenger $1,200 per annum, and the money is hereby appropriated to pay the same."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the one hundred and seventy-seventh amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto with an amendment, as follows: Add at the end thereof the words: "Provided, That the said sum shall be in full of all compensation to be received by said chaplains."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the thirty-third amendment of the Senate; and the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives to the thirty-fourth amendment of the Senate."

The forty-fourth amendment of the Senate was to increase the appropriation for compensation of the Superintendent of Public Printing, and the clerks and messenger in his office from $6,595 to $9,595, and to add to the clause this proviso:

Provided, That the joint resolution approved the 20th July, 1854, shall be so construed as to embrace the Superintendent of Public Printing, and the clerks and messenger in his office.

The House had agreed to this amendment with an amendment to strike out the proviso, in which amendment of the House the committee recommended concurrence.

The fifty-seventh amendment of the Senate was to increase the appropriation for rent of, and warming rooms in, the building on northwest corner of F and Seventeenth street, from $21,875 to $32,375, and to add:

And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to lease said building, or some other, for a term not exceeding five years, at the rent herein authorized, if in his judgment the same shall be for the public interest.

The House amended this amendment by retaining the original appropriation and inserting, in lieu of the addition, proposed by the Senate:

Provided, That the Secretary of War be authorized to purchase the said building at a sum not exceeding $200,000.

In this amendment of the House the committee recommended concurrence.

The seventy-fifth amendment of the Senate was to add to the appropriations for the Mint at New Orleans the following:

For rebuilding portions of the walls and complete repairs of the building of the branch Mint at New Orleans, $55,000.

The House amended the amendment by reducing the amount from $55,000 to $37,000, in which the committee recommended concurrence.

The eighty-third Senate amendment was to insert:

For the compensation and expenses of commission to frame a code of laws for the Territory of Washington, $2,500.

This the House amended by adding:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be authorized to settle and pay the commission to frame a code of laws for the Territory of Washington at the same rate per diem as has been allowed a similar board in Oregon.

To this amendment of the House, the committee propose to concur.

The one hundred and fifth Senate amendment was to insert:

For buildings for the use of the courts of the United States at Pontotoe, Mississippi, $4,000.

This the House amended by adding:

Provided, Said sum shall complete said buildings. And also the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated to enable the Secretary of the Interior to make a contract with the proper authorities for furnishing a suitable building for the permanent use and accommodation of the United States district court in holding its session at Marietta, Georgia, which contract the said Secretary is hereby authorized to make: Provided, It can be made for the sum aforesaid or less: And provided, Said contract shall be made with sufficient guarantees to secure to the said court a suitable building for holding said court so long as its sessions may be held at that place, without further charge on the United States.

In this amendment concurrence is proposed.

The one hundred and twenty-seventh amendment of the Senate was to insert:

To enable the Secretary of State to defray the expense of releasing from captivity among the Indians of Queen Charlotte's Island the crew and passengers of the American sloop Georgiana, $2,500, or as much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment of the House to this amendment was to strike out $2,500, and insert $15,000; in which the committee recommended concurrence.

The one hundred and sixty-eighth Senate amendment was to insert:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the accounts of the public printers, and the certificates of the Superintendent of Public Printing thereon, so far as the same relate to the printing for the Executive Departments, shall be subject to the examination and control of the accounting officers and Secretary of the Treasury, in like manner as other public accounts; and those which relate to the printing for the Senate and House of Representatives shall be subject to the examination and control of the respective Houses in like manner as other expenditures for said Houses.

The House amended it so as to make it read:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the accounts of the public printers, and the certificates of the Superintendent of Public Printing thereon, shall be subject to the examination and control of the accounting officers and Secretary of the Treasury, in like manner as other public accounts.

In this amendment of the House concurrence is recommended.

The one hundred and seventy-fifth amendment of the Senate was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That from and after the 30th of June, 1854, in lieu of the clerks heretofore authorized by law for the office of the assistant treasurer at New York, he be authorized to appoint, with the approbation of the President of the United States, one chief clerk, at a salary of $2,100, one clerk at $2,000, two clerks at $1,800 each, two clerks at $1,500 each, one clerk at $1,200, one messenger at $900, and two watchmen at $550 each, per annum. In case of the sickness or unavoidable absence from his office of the assistant treasurer, he may authorize the said chief clerk to act in his place, and to discharge all the duties required by law of the assistant treasurer; [and in case of the death, resignation, or inability to act of the assistant treasurer, the said chief clerk shall act as such assistant treasurer until the inability be removed, or until a successor be appointed and duly qualified; and all the acts of the said chief clerk in such cases shall be as valid as if performed by the assistant treasurer in person.]

The amendment of the House to this amendment was to strike out the words between [brackets,] commencing with "and in case of the death" to the end of the section; in which concurrence is proposed.

The one hundred and twenty-second Senate amendment was to strike out "for salary of consul at Beirut, $500," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That the consul at Beirut, Syria, is hereby created a consul general, with a salary of $2,000 per annum, from the 1st of July, 1853; said consulate shall comprehend both Syria and Palestine, and $4,000 is hereby appropriated for the salary of said consul.

The House amended it so as to make it read:

That the consul at Beirut, Syria, is hereby created a consul with a salary of $2,000 per annum; said consulate shall comprehend both Syria and Palestine, and $2,000 is hereby appropriated for the salary of said consul.

As the committee of conference propose to amend it, it will read:

That the consul at Beirut, Syria, is hereby allowed a salary of $2,000 per annum, and the said consulate shall comprehend both Syria and Palestine, and $2,000 is hereby appropriated for the salary of said consul.

The one hundred and forty-third Senate amendment was to insert:

For repair and renewal of the gas pipes through the Capitol, and fixtures necessary for the lighting of such committee rooms therein as need it, and lighting East Capitol street from the Capitol to Third street, $7,000.

For painting and repairs inside of the Capitol, new furnaces under the Senate Chamber and Supreme Court room, &c., $5,000.

The House so amended it as to make it read:

For painting and repairs inside of the Capitol, new furnaces under the Senate Chamber and Supreme Court room, $5,000.

For furnishing and putting up new furnaces, repairing old furnaces, rebuilding and ventilating air chambers of the House of Representatives, $4,500.

As proposed to be amended by the committee of conference, it reads:

For painting and repairs inside of the Capitol, new furnaces under the Senate Chamber and Supreme Court room, $5,000.

For furnishing and putting up new furnaces and repairing old furnaces, rebuilding and ventilating air chambers for the House of Representatives, $4,500.

For repair and renewal of the gas pipes through the Capitol, $3,500.

The one hundred and sixty-second amendment of the Senate was:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the third section of the act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the Government, for the year ending the 30th of June, 1854, providing for the classification of the clerks in the Treasury, War, Navy, Interior, and Post Office Departments, as amended by the act of April 22, 1854, shall be, and the same is hereby, further amended as follows, to wit: In the office of the First Comptroller there shall be two additional clerks, of class three; and in the office of the First Auditor there shall be one clerk taken from class three and placed in class four, and four additional clerks allowed, of class three; and in the office of the Second Auditor there shall be one additional clerk, of class one; and in the Third Auditor's office five clerks shall be taken from class three and placed in class four, and twenty-seven temporary clerks shall be placed in class one, and one temporary clerk in class four, and four temporary clerks in class two; and in the office of the Fourth Auditor there shall be one additional clerk, of class three; and in the Sixth Auditor's office one clerk shall be taken from class three and placed in class four, and there shall be added to the clerks in this office ten of class one; and in the Register's office two clerks shall be taken from class three and placed in class four, and two additional clerks added of class one; and in the Treasurer's office one clerk shall be taken from class two and one clerk from class three and placed in class four, and two additional clerks allowed to class one; and in the General Land Office the principal draughtsman shall be classed and paid as a clerk of the third class, and the assistant draughtsman as a clerk of the second class; and in the office of the Secretary of War there shall be added one clerk of class four; in the office of the Adjutant General there shall be one additional clerk of class one; and in the office of the Topographical Engineer one scientific draughtsman as a clerk of class four; and for the superintendency of the building on the corner of F and Seventeenth streets, the Secretary of War is authorized to appoint some one clerk of his Department other than the disbursing clerk for that purpose, who shall be allowed, in addition to his salary as clerk, $300 per annum; and in the office of the Postmaster General there shall be seven additional clerks, viz: four of class two, two of class three, and one of class four; and in the office of the Attorney General, in lieu of the clerks now authorized by law, there shall be one chief clerk, at a salary of $2,200, one clerk of class one, two of class two, one of class three, and one of class four. And the President of the United States is hereby authorized, whenever it may, in his judgment, be necessary, to cause counsel to be employed to assist in the prosecution or defense of causes which may be pending in the Supreme Court in which the United States are interested, and to allow to such counsel such compensation as he may deem reasonable. And in the Department of State, instead of the clerks now authorized by law, there shall be four clerks of class one, three of class two, seven of class three, and four of class four, one clerk of class four to be designated to superintend the northeast Executive Building, and to disburse all moneys belonging to the service of said Department, not otherwise provided for, who shall give bonds as required by the independent treasury act, and receive an additional compensation therefor of $200 per annum. There shall be one chief of the diplomatic, and one chief of the consular branch of the public service; and one examiner of demands for indemnity preferred by citizens of the United States against Governments and of the latter against the former, who shall also perform such other duties as the Secretary of State may designate, each of whom shall receive an annual salary of $2,000; and the chief clerk of said Department shall be allowed compensation of $2,200 per annum. No clerk not now employed in the State Department shall hereafter be appointed until he has been examined by a board to consist of three examiners, to be selected by the Secretary of State, and found qualified in certain particulars, to be prescribed by the said Secretary in fixing beforehand a general standard of qualifications for the clerks to be employed in his Department.

The House amended it so as to make it read:

And be it further enacted, That there be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum sufficient to pay to the clerks and employees of the Government, for the year ending 9th June, 1855, such additional compensation as they may be entitled to receive under the act of 22d April, 1854, entitled "An act to amend the third section of the act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the Government for the year ending 30th June, 1854, and for other purposes," and whose additional compensation is not otherwise provided for: Provided, That all laborers in the employment of the Executive departments of the Government in the city of Washington shall receive an annual salary of $480 each: Provided further, That the Postmaster General be allowed, in addition to his present number, three clerks of class two, and two of class three; that the Attorney General be allowed, in addition to his present number, one clerk of class one, two of class two, and one of class three; that the Secretary of the Treasury be allowed in the Sixth Auditor's office, in addition to the present number, seven clerks of class one, one shall be taken from class three and put in class four; and in the Treasurer's office one clerk shall be taken from class two and one from class three and put in class four; and that the money necessary to pay the compensation, and increased compensation under this section be, and the same is hereby, appropriated.

The amendments of the committee of conference make it read:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That there be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum sufficient to pay the clerks and employees of the Government for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855, such additional compensation as they may be entitled to receive under the act of 22d April, 1854, entitled "An act to amend the third section of the act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending 30th of June, 1854, and for other purposes," and where additional compensation is not otherwise provided for: Provided, That all laborers in the employment of the Executive Departments of the Government in the city of Washington shall receive an annual salary of $480 each: Provided, further, That the Postmaster General be allowed, in addition to his present number, three clerks of class two, and two of class three; that the Attorney General be allowed, in addition to his present number, one clerk of class one, two of class two, and one of class three; that the Secretary of the Treasury be allowed in the First Auditor's office, in addition to the present number, two clerks of class one; in the Sixth Auditor's office, in addition to the present number, seven clerks of class one, and one shall be taken from class three and put in class four; and in the Treasurer's office one clerk shall be taken from class two and one from class three, and put in class four; and that the Secretary of State be allowed, in addition to his present number of clerks, two at an annual salary of $1,200 each, one at an annual salary of $1,400, and one at an annual salary of $1,600; and the money necessary to pay the compensation and increased compensation under this section be, and the same is hereby, appropriated.

The twenty-third amendment of the Senate, from which it is proposed to recede, was to increase the appropriation for the watchmen of the north east Executive Building from $2,250 to $2,400; but the receding is on condition that the appropriation for salary of the Register of the Treasury, and the clerks and messengers in his office, be increased from $36,950 to $41,750.

It is proposed that the House recede from their disagreement to the following Senate amendments, and that they be adopted:

For the preservation of the collections of the Exploring Expedition:

For compensation of keepers, watchmen, and laborers, $2,980;

For contingent expenses, $100.

One hundred and second: Increase the appropriation for annual repairs and fixtures of custom-houses, from $30,501 59 to $43,001 59.

One hundred and fifteenth: Increase the appropriation for salaries of keepers and assistant keepers of light-houses on the Pacific coast, from $16,200 to $21,600, and to allow them each $800 instead of $600 per annum.

One hundred and fifty-fifth. Insert:

For grading done by order of Ignatius Mudd, late Commissioner of Public Buildings, in reservation 17, between Third street east and New Jersey avenue, $484 89.

One hundred and sixty-first. Insert:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to cause to be constructed the following buildings:

At New Orleans, Louisiana, a marine hospital, to cost not more than $248,000; and when said hospital shall have been completed, the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the old hospital at New Orleans to be sold, and the proceeds thereof to be placed in the Treasury of the United States.

At Detroit, Michigan, a marine hospital, to cost not more than $75,000.

At Pensacola, Florida, a marine hospital, to cost not more than $20,000.

At Burlington, in the State of Iowa, a marine hospital, to cost not more than $15,000.

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That the several sums mentioned in the preceding section as the cost of the buildings therein authorized to be constructed, together with ten per cent. thereon, to cover the compensation of architects, superintendence, advertising, and other contingent expenses, and so much as may be required to purchase suitable sites for said buildings, be, and the same are hereby, appropriated for the purposes aforesaid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That no money hereby appropriated shall be used or applied for the purposes mentioned, until a valid title to the land for the site of such buildings, in each case, shall be vested in the United States, and until each State shall also duly release and relinquish to the United States, the right to tax or in any way assess said site, or the property of the United States that may be thereon, during the time that the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof.

One hundred and sixty-fifth. Insert:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That the collections of the Exploring Expedition, now in the Patent Office, be placed under the care and management of the Commissioner of Patents, who is hereby authorized to employ one principal keeper of said collections, at an annual salary of $900, one assistant keeper at an annual salary of $750, one night watchman at an annual salary of $600, and two laborers at an annual salary each of $365.

The ninety-seventh amendment of the Senate was to insert:

For the completion of the custom-house at San Francisco, California, including all expenses of filling in, piling, sewers, drains, pavements, inclosure, gateways, the extinguishment of private claims for the possession of the whole or any part thereof, and contingencies incident thereto, $163,386 09.

The committee of conference propose that the House recede from its disagreement to this amendment, and agree to it, provided it be so modified as to read:

For extinguishment of private claims to the possession of the whole or any part of the custom-house lot in San Francisco, $10,000.

The one hundred and forty-fourth and one half amendment of the Senate, was to strike out the following proviso, which occurred immediately after the appropriation for the Capitol extension:

Provided, That each and all persons who have been, or may be appointed hereafter, to disburse the money which is now, or may hereafter be, appropriated for the building or repair of any of the edifices or structures for which appropriations are made in this act, and are not now required by law to give bond and security, shall give bond, with good securities, in sufficient penalty, to be approved of by the head of the Department under which such disbursement may be made, or the President of the United States, when the work shall be specifically under his direction.

The committee propose that the House recede from its disagreement to this amendment, and agree to it, if it be amended so as to read:

Provided, That any officer of the Army or Navy who has been, or may be, appointed hereafter to disburse the money which is now, or may hereafter be, appropriated for the erection, alteration, or repair of any of the edifices, structures, or works for which appropriations are made in this act, shall be subject to all the pains, penalties, and liabilities contained in the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the better organization of the Treasury, and for the collection, safe-keeping, transfer, and disbursement of the public revenue," approved 6th of August, 1846.

The one hundred and forty-sixth Senate amendment was to insert:

For completing the bridge over the Potomac river, near the Little Falls, $75,000.

The committee propose that the House recede from its disagreement to this amendment, and agree to it with an amendment reducing the amount from $75,000 to $15,000.

The one hundred and sixty-fourth amendment of the Senate was to insert:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That from and after the 30th of June, 1853, the pay of the librarian of Congress shall be $2,000; the pay of the two principal assistants, each $1,800; and that of the third assistant, $1,200; and that of the messenger, $1,200.

It is proposed that the House agree to this amendment, by modifying it so as to read:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That the librarian of Congress shall receive $1,800, the assistant librarians $1,500 each, and the messenger $1,200 per annum, and the money is hereby appropriated to pay the same.

The one hundred and seventy-seventh amendment of the Senate was to insert:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That from and after the 30th of June, 1853, the annual salary of the chaplains to Congress shall be $750, and such sum additional to that elsewhere provided as may be required to pay the same to the 30th of June, 1855, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The House disagreed to this amendment, from which disagreement it is proposed they recede, on condition that the amendment be amended by adding to it:

Provided, That the said sum shall be in full of all compensation to be received by said chaplains.

The one hundred and eighty-eighth amendment of the Senate was to insert:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That whenever it shall become necessary for the head of any department or office to employ special agents, other than officers of the Army or Navy, who may be charged with the disbursement of the public moneys, they shall, prior to entering upon duty as such, give bond in such form and with such security as the head of the Department or office employing said agent may approve.

The House amended it by striking out the words "other than officers of the Army or Navy," from which it is proposed they shall recede.

The thirty-third Senate amendment (from their disagreement to which, it is proposed that the House shall recede) was to increase the appropriation for compensation of Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and clerks and messengers in his office, from $27,800 to $29,900.

The amendment of the House to the thirty-fourth Senate amendment (from their disagreement to which it is proposed the Senate shall recede) was to reduce the appropriation for compensation of the Commissioner of Pensions, and the clerks and messengers in his office, from $108,200 to $97,800.

The amendments from which it is proposed the Senate shall recede without qualification, are as follows:

The eleventh, which was to strike out: *

For compensation of librarian, two assistant librarians, and messenger, $4,500.

And in lieu thereof insert:

For compensation of librarian, three assistant librarians, and messenger, $8,000;

Sec. —. And he it further enacted, That the provisions of the second section of the act of 22d of April, 1854, entitled "An act to amend the third section of the act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending the 30th of June, 1854, and for other purposes," be, and the same are hereby, repealed. And from and after the 1st day of July, 1854, the annual salary of the stamp and blank agent for the Post Office Department shall be the same as clerks in the Departments of the second class; and that of the clerk in the office of the Commissioner of Public Buildings the same as clerks of the first class; and the Secretaries of State, Treasury, Interior, War, and Navy, Postmaster General, and Attorney General, be authorized to employ one principal messenger each, at an annual salary of $900, in lieu of those now so employed, and the salary of all other messengers and assistant messengers, including the packers in the General Land Office, now authorized by law to be employed in the Executive Departments in Washington, the messenger in the office of the Commissioner of Public Buildings, doorkeeper and assistant doorkeeper at the Executive Mansion, and keeper of the western gate, Capitol square, and the keeper of Lafayette square, shall be $750 per annum; and the annual salary of the watchmen employed at the Capitol, President's House, and the Executive Departments, and the Auxiliary Guards, and the watchmen of the Capitol extension, shall be $750; and the public gardener shall receive $1,400 per annum; and the captain of the police of the Capitol shall receive $1,600, and each of his assistants $1,300 per annum; and all laborers in the employment of the Executive Departments in the city of Washington shall receive an annual salary of $480 each; and for the payment of the excess of the sums herein required to be paid over and above those elsewhere contained in this act for said payment, there shall be added thereto respectively such further sums as, together, will equal the amounts herein authorized, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The one hundred and sixty-sixth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That all persons claiming any interest in, or portion of, any grant of land derived from the Spanish or Mexican Governments in Upper California, where such original grant has heretofore been presented to the board of land commissioners within the time specified in the thirteenth section of the act of the 3d of March, 1851, but who have failed to present to the said board the evidence of their derivative title to said interest or portion from the original grantee, be, and they are hereby, authorized to present the same; and the said commissioners are hereby directed to adjudicate the said interest or portion in the same manner as if it had been presented within the time originally prescribed by the aforesaid act of the 3d of March, 1851, entitled "An act to ascertain and settle the private land claims in the State of California."

The one hundred and sixty-ninth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint or employ in his official household the following officers, to wit: one secretary to the President, at a yearly salary of $2,500, who shall take charge of such official papers as shall be confided to him, and perform such other duties as may be directed by the President; one clerk, at a yearly salary of $1,600; one steward, at a yearly salary of $1,000, who shall, under the direction of the President, have charge of, and be responsible for, the plate and furniture of the President's Mansion, and shall discharge such other duties as the President may assign him; one messenger, at a yearly salary of $900; and one assistant messenger, at a yearly salary of $750. And for the payment of the compensation of the said officers, during the present fiscal year, the sum of $6,750, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The one hundred and seventieth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That a yearly appropriation be made for the purchase of stationery, binding public documents, and other contingent expenses of the Executive office, to be expended by the secretary to the President, under the direction of the President; and for that purpose, during the present fiscal year, $650 is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The one hundred and seventy-first, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the authority given by the eleventh section of the act approved March 3, 1853, entitled "An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending the 30th of June, 1854," to the treasurer of the assay office in New York to issue his certificate of the net value of any bullion or coins deposited in said office is hereby suspended, and shall not be exercised except at such time or times, and during such periods as the Secretary of the Treasury shall be of opinion that the interests of the public, or of those making such deposits, or the condition of the Treasury, render it expedient or convenient to issue such certificates. And whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall deem it expedient, he may authorize the issuing of the said certificates. The receipts directed by the aforesaid section to be given by the treasurer of the assay office for any gold or silver bullion, in dust or otherwise, or for any foreign coin to be deposited in the said office, shall be payable at the option of the depositor, to be expressed in the receipt either in coins of the same metal as that deposited, (to be paid as soon as such bullion or coin can be assayed, or the value thereof ascertained either at the office of the Assistant Treasurer of the United States in New York, or at the Mint of the United States, as the depositor shall prefer,) or in bars, discs, or ingots, either of pure metal or of the standard fineness, or made from the identical metal deposited without refining—but in all cases such bars, discs, or ingots, shall bear a stamp of such form and device as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, accurately designating their weight and fineness; and all gold or silver deposited in the assay office, either to be struck into coin at the Mint, or to be refined or assayed, shall be subject to the charges prescribed by law for such operations at the Mint or branch Mints of the United States.

The one hundred and seventy-second, which was to insert:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the fifth section of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending the 30th of June, 1854," and approved 3d March, 1853, be, and they are hereby, extended to the branch mints and the assay office in New York, respectively.

The one hundred and seventy-third, which was to insert:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to employ private establishments, or to contract with individuals for refining gold bullion, if he shall deem it expedient so to do: Provided always, That the said refining shall not subject the depositors to any greater wastage per ounce, nor to any greater charge for labor, materials, and alloy, or for other cause, than is now made, or would hereafter be incurred, on deposits at the Mint, the branch Mints, or assay office in New York, respectively, nor to any greater delay than is now experienced; and that said refining shall be subject to such regulations as the said Secretary shall deem proper and sufficient to secure the skillful and prompt performance thereof, and to prevent any loss of metal other than wastage, as aforesaid.

The one hundred and seventy-fourth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, at his discretion, to cause advances to be withheld on deposits of gold bullion, made after the first day of January next, at the Mint, the branch Mints, and the assay office in New York, respectively, unless such deposits be metal of standard fineness, and suitable for coinage without any further refining; and upon the coinage of such deposits so refined by private enterprise, and suitable for that purpose, the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, may charge a seigniorage of not more than one half per centum, nor less than one fourth per centum, upon the value thereof.

The one hundred and seventy-sixth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That so much of the act of the 7th of June, 1844, restricting the employment of inspectors, gaugers, weighers, measurers, and markers in the custom house to the number then in service, as may be applicable to those employed at the ports of New York and New Orleans be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

The one hundred and seventy-eighth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the county of El Paso, in the State of Texas, and the Territory of New Mexico, be, and they are hereby, made a collection district by the name of El Paso del Norte, and Frontera shall be the place or port of entry for said district, and a collector shall be appointed to reside thereat, with such other officers as shall be necessary. The compensation of the collector shall be $2,000 per annum, including the fees of his office.

The one hundred and seventy-ninth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the "Act making appropriations for the improvement of certain harbors and rivers," approved the 30th of August, 1852, be, and the same hereby is, amended by striking from the clause in which they occur the following words: "by the construction of a breakwater across Croatan sound."

The one hundred and eightieth and one hundred and eighty-first, which were to add:

And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint a commissioner, at the compensation of not exceeding $4,000 per annum, to ascertain the nature, character, extent, and value of all valid claims arising in Washington and Oregon Territories, under the treaty with Great Britain of June 15, 1846; and should said claims, or any part thereof, be deemed of sufficient public and political importance to justify or require the measure, the President is hereby authorized to direct said commissioner to agree with the claimants and the Hudson's Bay Company for the relinquishment of their claims on a just and fair valuation, and to pay over the amount so agreed upon, on a full and entire surrender and relinquishment of all right, title, claim, interest, and demand, therein and thereto, to the United States: Provided, That none of the lands acquired under this section shall be subject to donation or preemption, but shall be sold at public auction, unless in cases where, in the opinion of the commissioner, the sum bid for any particular parcel or piece shall be less than a fair price therefor, to be ascertained by the commissioner aforesaid; said sales to be made for cash, at such times and places, and with such postponements, as may be directed by the said commissioner; and for carrying into effect the provisions of this section in case of a purchase, a sum not exceeding $300,000 is hereby appropriated: Provided, That the amount to be paid for all the said claims, rights, and interest, shall not exceed the sum herein appropriated; and for defraying the expenses of the commission, the further sum of $500 is also appropriated, payable out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That in case it should be deemed inexpedient to sell said lands and improvements immediately, or any part thereof, the President shall be, and he is hereby, authorized, on the extinguishment of the title as aforesaid, to direct the commissioner to take possession of the same, for and in the name of the United States, and to lease the same on such terms and conditions, and for such sum or sums, as he may deem proper and right, subject, however, to sale, when in his opinion it may be proper, after the United States surveys have been extended over the same.

The one hundred and eighty-second, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be authorized and directed to appoint two persons to investigate and collect proof, under the instructions of the Department of the Interior, on the depredations upon private property by the Indians in Florida, subsequent to the 25th December, 1835, the report and testimony to be submitted to Congress at its next session.

The one hundred and eighty-fourth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the second section of the act of July 3, 1852, entitled "An act to establish a branch of the Mint of the United States in California," be so amended as to allow to the clerks authorized to be employed therein $3,000 per annum each, to take effect from and after the 1st day of July, 1854. And such additional sums as, together with these elsewhere provided in this act, will equal the respective salaries authorized by this and the preceding section of this act, are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated for the payment thereof.

The one hundred and eighty-fifth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That all appointments of clerks and assistants authorized to be employed in the offices of the assistant treasurers of the United States, and in the offices of the Mint and branches thereof, and the assay office in New York, shall respectively be made, with the approbation of the President, by the assistant treasurer, director, superintendent, and treasurers of the Mint and assay branches, and assay office, as the case may be, whose bonds are held at the Treasury Department in trust for the proper and faithful performance of their respective duties.

The one hundred and eighty-sixth, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That the district judges for the State of California, while in the discharge of the duties imposed by the act of the 3d of March, 1851, entitled "An act to ascertain and settle the private land claims in the State of California," be allowed at the rate of $22,000 per annum each, in addition to their salaries as district judges for the State of California, which shall be in full for their services.

And the one hundred and eighty-seventh, which was to add:

SEC. — And be it further enacted, That so much of the act passed 26th February, 1853, being "An act to regulate the fees and costs to be allowed clerks, marshals, and attorneys of the circuit and district courts of the United States, and for other purposes, as fixes the compensation to be allowed for expenses while employed in endeavoring to arrest, under process, any person charged with or convicted of a crime, the sum actually expended not to exceed two dollars per day in addition to his compensation for service and travel," so as to read "for expenses while employed in endeavoring to arrest, under process, any person charged with or convicted of a crime, the actual necessary expenses in addition to his compensation for service and travel."

Mr. MALLORY, (before the reading of the report was concluded, said:) I move to dispense with its further reading. We cannot understand what the amendments are by merely hearing their numbers read.

Mr. WELLER. I do not ask for the reading of the report; but every Senator must see what is the practical effect of this course of proceeding. We are called upon now to take that report of the committee without knowing what it is. There are not more than two Senators on this floor who know what we have given up, or what we have gained; so that the effect of it is, that two Senators have had the whole legislation of this great civil and diplomatic bill in their hands.

The report of the committee of conference was concurred in.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. RUSK. The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855, beg leave to report that they are unable to agree upon the disagreeing votes between the two Houses, and report back the bill, and recommend that the Senate insist upon their amendments, and ask for another committee of conference.

The Senate proceeded to consider their amendments to the bill, and it was Resolved, That they insist upon their amendments, and ask a further conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That the committee of conference on the part of the Senate be appointed by the President pro tempore.

And Mr. MORTON, Mr. WALKER, and Mr. SEBASTIAN were appointed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McKean, Chief Clerk, announcing that they had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill "making appropriations for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works heretofore commenced under the authority of law."

Mr. SEWARD. I move that the Senate recede from their amendments to that bill.

Mr. CLAY. I ask for the yeas and nays on that motion.

Mr. STUART. I ask to have the amendments read.

Mr. ADAMS. I suggest to the Senator that it is not necessary to read the amendments. All of them, I understand, have been disagreed to by the House. Every Senator knows what they are.

Mr. STUART. After the experience which we have had in the Senate for the last two days about mistakes, I mean to know what I am going to vote on. I have a right to have these amendments read, and when they are read, I shall then know whether they are correct or not.

The amendments of the committee were read.

Mr. GWIN. I think this is the best bill for a committee of conference that I have seen come up here yet. The House made clean work of it, and disagreed to every amendment of the Senate; they did not leave us a single amendment. I think we ought to have a committee of conference on the bill. There are a great many of those amendments which ought to have been considered by the other House, but it seems they have been overruled entirely, and they have struck them all out in a lump. I hope we shall have a committee of conference on this bill.

Mr. SEWARD. It is very certain that there is no prospect of the House agreeing to our amendments. They have been engaged in the consideration of them all day, and have refused concurrence. I therefore hope the Senate will recede, so that we may secure the passage of the bill as it is.

Mr. GWIN. That will be giving up everything to the House on all those bills. Now, let us make a fight on this bill. We have given up everything else. Now, let us have a committee of conference on this bill, and see whether the House will not agree to something we propose.

Mr. STUART. I shall ask to have the question divided on these amendments, and I will state in a few words, why I cannot consent to recede from at least two of them, and I think there are three on which we ought to insist. There are two amendments which were reported from the Committee on Commerce which should be insisted on at all events. One of them is indispensably necessary to make an appropriation of the bill available; I refer to the appropriation for Newark. Unless you add to that the words which the Committee on Commerce of the Senate recommended, and which the Senate adopted, the appropriation cannot be used. That is the testimony from the Engineer Department. The whole appropriation will be a nullity, unless you add the words which were inserted by the Senate, defining the place where the money shall be expended. I cannot consent to recede from that amendment, and I think if the Senate will reflect for a moment on what we have been doing here for the last week, they will insist upon it.

In the first place, we put into the civil and diplomatic bill a provision which was to make an appropriation of the last Congress available in North Carolina, and the House have stricken it out, and it is out of the bill. We have put into the Army appropriation bill which we have just disposed of, another provision which is contained in this bill also, in order to make an appropriation for the Red river raft available. The House will undoubtedly strike that out of the Army appropriation bill. Now, sir, if we consent to recede from these amendments to this bill which are indispensable to carry out the appropriations, we do, in the first place, great injustice to the particular localities, and, in the next place, we subject ourselves, hereafter, to having such provisions put upon the appropriation bills where they have certainly no pertinence.

Then again, sir, there is a proviso to the last section of the bill, as it came from the House, which the Senate struck out. That proviso makes it necessary that every Army officer engaged in the expenditure of any of these funds, shall give bonds. I have a communication, which it would take half an hour to read, from an Army officer, showing not only the impropriety, but the manifest injustice of such a provision. He does not get a cent for disbursing the money; and he is called upon, under this provision, to give bonds to five or ten times the amount of what he is worth. His friends are to come in and give security for him in respect to a matter for which he gets no pay.

Mr. BAYARD. Let me suggest to the Senator that the object of that proviso is not to make the officers give security, but to prevent an officer from superintending these works.

Mr. STUART. That will not bring about civil superintendency, because it is expressly provided that the money shall be expended under the direction of the War Department; and we all know that Army officers will be appointed by that Department. Now, the question is, whether the Senate will insist on an amendment indispensably necessary to carry out an appropriation, and without which it would be worthless, and whether they will recede from an amendment of this character, which would inflict gross injustice on the officers of the Army? Why should we do so? The Senator from New York says that the House have had the bill under consideration all day. Sir, I have heard of a good many things being done in the House to-day, and some, in my opinion, that ought not to have been done; but, as I understand it, the House have only had this bill under consideration during the last hour. I know of no reason why the Senate should refuse to insist upon such amendments as are proper.

Mr. WELLER. I do not know what they are.

Mr. STUART. The Senator says, he does not know what they are. I mentioned the appropriation for the harbor of Newark, New Jersey. Unless you add to that appropriation the words which the Committee on Commerce recommended, which carries the expenditure below that point, the engineer officer has written to the committee to say, that the work cannot be carried out. The same thing is true of New York, as to the appropriation for Hell Gate. There is a case where money has been advanced by individuals, and unless you add the words proposed by the Committee on Commerce, there is no authority to refund that money. This is a species of injustice which I think we are not called upon to do; but let us make an effort to see whether the House will not recede from its disagreement to these necessary amendments. As to the amendments making additional appropriations I care nothing about them.

Mr. WELLER. I desire to ask the Senator from Michigan if, at the commencement of the discussion of this bill in the Senate, he did not make earnest appeals to the friends of the bill not to suffer any amendments whatever to be made to it? I so understood him.

Mr. STUART. I will answer the Senator. I did not. That question has been asked me several times, and I can say that I made no such appeals to the Senate. On the contrary, I reported three amendments from the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. WELLER. I was grossly mistaken, and I was here all the time.

Mr. BENJAMIN. The Committee on Commerce reported no amendment to increase any amount of appropriation. They reported some verbal amendments to make the bill more perfect.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. And objected to all others.

Mr. BENJAMIN. Yes, sir, and objected to all others.

Mr. STUART. I did not.

The PRESIDENT. Did the Chair understand the Senator from Michigan to ask for a division of the question on the amendments?

Mr. STUART. Yes, sir, I ask for a division.

The PRESIDENT. Then the question will be on receding from the first amendment.

Mr. RUSK. I think the proper course is to take the vote on insisting.

The PRESIDENT. The motion made by the Senator from New York is, that the Senate recede.

Mr. RUSK. I heard a long discussion once on this subject, and I think it was decided that the proper question to be put was on insisting.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair decides that the question is to be put on the motion to recede, that motion having been made. The first question is, on receding from the amendment increasing the appropriation "for the removal of the Des Moines rapids, in the Mississippi river," from $18,000 to $100,000.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, on receding from this amendment, resulted—yeas 18, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS.—Messrs. Bayard, Benjamin, Bright, Chase, Cooper, Fessenden, Foot, Geyer, Gillette, Johnson, Jones, of Tennessee, Pratt, Sebastian, Seward, Stidell, Stuart, Sumner, and Wade—18.

NAYS.—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Brodhead, Brown, Butler, Clay, Dawson, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Gwin, Houston, Hunter, Mallory, Morton, Rusk, Thomson of New Jersey, Toombs, Toucey, Walker, and Weller—21.

So the Senate refused to recede from this amendment.

The second amendment was to insert in the appropriation "for the removal of the rocks at Hell Gate and Diamond reef, New York harbor" the words "including the amount expended prior to August 30, 1852."

The question being taken upon receding from this amendment, the Senate refused to recede.

The third amendment was to insert after the appropriation of $50,000 "for continuing the re-opening of a communication between Albemarle Sound, in North Carolina, and the Atlantic ocean," the words, "in addition to the sum of $50,000 appropriated by the act of August 30, 1852; and this sum, as well as the former appropriation, may be used for a breakwater, or such other works as the Secretary of War may deem best adapted to accomplish the object."

The question being taken on the motion to recede from this amendment, it was decided in the negative.

The fourth amendment was to insert; "For the improvement of the Brazos river, in the State of Texas, $44,000."

The Senate refused to recede from this amendment.

The fifth amendment was to insert after the words, "improvement of the harbor of Newark," the words, "and Passaic river, below the town of Newark, and Newark bay."

The Senate refused to recede from this amendment.

Mr. BENJAMIN. There is no necessity for taking the vote separately on the other amendments.

The PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the vote will be taken upon all the other amendments together. The question is, will the Senate recede from the remaining amendments to this bill?

The Senate refused to recede.

So it was resolved that the Senate insist on their amendments to the said bill.

Mr. SEWARD. I move that the Senate request a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

Mr. GWIN. I was about to make that motion myself.

Mr. SEWARD. Very well.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion by Mr. GWIN, it was ordered that the committee be appointed by the President pro tempore; and Messrs. GWIN, BENJAMIN, and RUSK were appointed.

A message was soon afterwards received from the House of Representatives, announcing that they insisted upon their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and had appointed Mr. JOHN WENTWORTH, Mr. ORR, and Mr. JOHN PERKINS, jr., managers at the same on their part.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McKean, Chief Clerk, announcing that they insisted upon their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855; agreed to the further conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses; and had appointed Mr. OLDS, Mr. CHANDLER, and Mr. BOCKOCK managers at the same on their part.

Also, that the Speaker had signed an enrolled bill to incorporate the Pioneer Manufacturing Company of Georgetown; which was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

MAIL STEAMER BILL.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill from the House of Representatives, "making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855."

Mr. BRODHEAD. I move to strike out the third section in the following words:

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the arrangements now subsisting for the transportation of the mails from New York to Liverpool, from New York via Southampton to Bremen, from New York via Cowes to Havre and back, from New York to New Orleans, to Charleston, Havana, and Chagres and back, from Panama to California and Oregon and back, and from Charleston to Havana and back, be terminated as soon as, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, it may be done consistently with the public interests; and that the Postmaster General shall give notice of such termination accordingly: Provided, That, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy, and the Attorney General of the United States, the same may be done without the violation of any contract now legally binding on the United States, and that the transportation of the mails on these lines be let to the lowest responsible bidders after public advertisement.

I object to this section for several reasons. I move to strike it out because it refers to the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Attorney General, a question, the decision of which properly appertains to the Senate and House of Representatives. I believe the object of it is to compel the Government to purchase these worn-out vessels for war steamers. A vessel depreciates in value about ten per cent. every year. These steamers have been in service about five years, so that they are half worn out. Under existing laws, if we discontinue the service of these mail steamers, we are bound to take them at a certain price. Again, we shall be obliged to enter into other contracts. Gentlemen who want these contracts, it seems to me, ought to wait until the present ones expire. It appears, however, that they cannot wait any longer, but they must appeal to the Government to take their old steamers, and compel the Government to pay for the transportation of the mails besides; so that we shall pay nearly the same price for transporting the mails, and we shall have these steamers on our hands altogether worthless for war purposes. These are my objections to the section.

Mr. RUSK. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to a provision in the first section of this bill directing the Secretary of the Navy to give notice on the 31st day of December next of the discontinuance of the extra allowance to the Collins line of steamers. That is a violation of the law as it stands. The law making that additional allowance declares that after the 31st day of December, 1854, Congress may give notice of the discontinuance of that service.

Mr. SEWARD. Will the Senator allow me to read that provision of the law to him?

Mr. RUSK. Certainly.

Mr. SEWARD. It is in these words:

"Provided, That it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance herein provided for, upon giving six months' notice."

Mr. RUSK. I contend that, according to the plain meaning of this language, it is not in the power of Congress to act upon the subject until the 31st day of December next. What would be the result, in practical operation, of the proviso contained in the first section of this bill? It would be a discontinuance of this service by the Executive officers. Congress meets before the 31st of December next, and will be in session immediately afterwards. According to the plain construction of the law, Congress has no power over the subject until that time. The acceptance of that law by the contractors made it a contract with these persons, and Congress has no right to interfere with it until after the 31st of December next, and then it may give six months' notice. That is a question for decision at the next session of Congress.

Aside from its being entirely out of the power of Congress, in my judgment, under that law to take any action towards giving the notice at this time, it would be, in my opinion, an improper act if the power were fully vested in Congress. If you desire to surrender the whole monopoly of the transportation of the mail between our ports and those of Great Britain, into the hands of Great Britain, it would be well to terminate this contract. I know that this bill goes on in a subsequent section to provide that the Secretary of the Navy and the Postmaster General shall issue proposals, and let out the contract to the lowest bidder. Whenever that would be accomplished, it would be a dead weight upon the Treasury to no earthly purpose, for no lowest bidder could come in and take this contract, and compete with the Cunard steamers. The Collins steamers have surpassed them. No one who would come in and obtain a contract as the lowest bidder would be able to compete with the Cunard steamers. The result would be that your steamers from New York to Liverpool would be thrown back from ten to twelve days, as they are now, to fifteen or sixteen days, and there would be no mail matter sent on such slow steamers. The other provision which I understand the Senator from Pennsylvania to move to strike out, is the third section in reference to the contracts between this and California.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I move to strike out the third section.

Mr. RUSK. I thought the Senator moved to strike out the notice in the first section, and the whole of the third section.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I cannot move both. We can first try to strike out the third section.

Mr. RUSK. The third section provides that the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Attorney General, shall determine whether or not they can set aside the mail steamer contracts without violating any laws. It is devolving on them a very onerous, and, I suppose, a very disagreeable duty. It is for Congress to determine that question. I believe a committee of the House of Representatives, reported the other day that such a proceeding would not violate the law. That is what I understand, though I have not read the report. But what will be the practical effect, even supposing some of the contracts have been violated and they can be set aside? We should be in danger of the very thing of which the Senator from Pennsylvania has suggested; we should have to take these ships when they were pretty well worn out, and pay the contractors for them. What use have you for them when you have obtained them? Then what would be the next step? A competition between three or four different rival routes between this and California, with a view of encouraging improvements outside of our own Territory. I am opposed to making any more contracts which will at all interfere with the great necessity and duty which devolves on us of making a road between this portion of the country and California over our own territory. Here are various rival routes. Here is the Panama route, passing through a country which is almost in revolution, and a few days ago, I believe, the travel across the Isthmus was very unsafe, and doubtless would be rendered entirely so in the case of a revolution. Then there is the Nicaragua route, with the celebrated Greytown on it, with a set of scamps there who live by robbing, and very frequently add murder to it. Then there is another rival route across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, through a country which is just about on a par, so far as law and order are concerned, with the other two. Under such circumstances, I am not in favor of extending these contracts or vesting interest in any of these pass-ways which shall at all interfere with the project of making a railroad across our own territory to our possessions on the Pacific.

Mr. HUNTER. This amendment is confined, I understand, to striking out the third section. I have no doubt that, if we have authority to put an end to these contracts, as proposed in that section, it would be very much to the advantage of the Government to do so, and would also facilitate the mail service to California. I believe, so far as cheapness and superior mail service are concerned, we could have it much cheaper and a better service, even if we were to buy these ships at valuation, (for it is to be remembered that they are to be bought at valuation,) and were to put the contracts out to the lowest bidder. But, sir, there is a question behind that, which I have not had time to examine to my satisfaction; and that is as to the authority to do so. If I felt perfectly clear that we had the authority to do so, I should, with great pleasure, vote for the section as it has been sent to us by the House. That is the only doubt which rests upon my mind.

Mr. ADAMS. As I have the honor of belonging to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, and differed from my colleagues on that committee, in regard to the notice to the Collins line, I desire simply to say that I have no doubt of the power and of the right of Congress at any time to provide for the giving of the notice after the day fixed in the contract, by which Congress reserved to itself the right of giving notice. I do not understand that the time fixed for the giving of the notice, limits the action of Congress. Congress may, in anticipation of that time provide for and direct the notice to be given at the expiration of the time. I differ from my colleagues on the committee upon that subject. Congress, in my opinion, is just as competent now to order notice to be given at the time limited in the contract, as it will be after the time shall have arrived. As to the other questions involved, I believe, with the Senator from Virginia, that the sooner we give the notice, and get rid of the existing contracts, the better it will be for the country.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Pennsylvania has moved to strike out the third section of this bill. I was not here at the time the motion was made, nor did I hear the arguments which he offered in support of it, but I came in towards the conclusion of his remarks, when he was telling the Senate that the effect of the passage of this section of the bill would be to throw upon this Government a considerable number of vessels which were really worthless. Now, Mr. President, you will allow me to say that the provision in this section of the bill is, that if, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy and the Attorney General of the United States, these contracts may be set aside without any violation of the rights of the parties, it shall be done. Now, suppose the Government were compelled to take these vessels. They take them at an appraisal of their value for naval purposes; and I undertake to say, that for naval purposes the appraisal would not be very extravagant. There are few of these steamers which would be appraised at over $150,000 or $200,000 for naval purposes. These vessels were originally to have been constructed so as to be convertible into armed steamers, or steamers for naval purposes in time of war. Very few of them, in my judgment, have been so constructed; and all that the Government would now be compelled to pay, if we should see proper to abrogate the contracts, would be the value of these steamers for naval purposes. The Senator from Virginia said the other day that we were compelled to pay $730,000 for the transportation of a mail semi-monthly to California. I undertake to say now, that there are parties here who are abundantly able to give ample security that they will carry the mail weekly for $500,000 a year.

Mr. BENJAMIN. If the Senator from California will permit me, I will state that the price we are now paying is more than he has mentioned. It is $835,000 a year.

Mr. WELLER. Eight hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars, then, is paid for the transportation of a semi-monthly mail to California. If the existing contract be abrogated, we can obtain a weekly mail to California for $500,000. There is the question now presented to the Senate. The contract has some six years to run, and the only point is, whether it is expedient now, if, in the opinion of the Attorney General, the Postmaster General, and the Secretary of the Navy, these contracts can be set aside without a violation of the rights of these parties, to do so? My only anxiety is to get a mail, and get it just as often as we can obtain it. I prefer a weekly, of course, to a semi-monthly mail; and if, by abrogating the contracts on just and fair terms, if, by taking these vessels at what they may be appraised to be worth for naval purposes, I can obtain a mail weekly for $500,000, I consider that it is to the interest of this Government to do so.

Now, then, what is the ground on which the Senator from Pennsylvania stands? He says that we shall be compelled to take these vessels. I am perfectly willing to take them, and make a fair remuneration to the parties, by paying for them whatever they may be worth for naval purposes. These steamers are only valuable as transports in time of war. Your side-wheel steamers cannot be used for any other purpose than for transporting troops and supplies from point to point. I am willing to take them. I do not desire you to violate the rights of any of these parties; but when the fact stares me in the face, that I can get a weekly mail for $500,000, I prefer that to a semi-monthly mail at $835,000.

Mr. MALLORY. Allow me to ask my friend from California a question. How many of these steamers, under the abrogation of these contracts, shall we have to take? What is the number?

Mr. WELLER. I really cannot answer that question, but I suppose it would be some seven or eight.

Mr. HUNTER. I will ask the Senator from California, if he does not think it would be practicable to get the new contractors to take these steamers at valuation?

Mr. WELLER. I have no doubt they would take them at their actual value for naval purposes. Anybody will take them at that price. But they are more valuable for the transport of passengers, of course, than for naval purposes. There is not the least doubt in the world about the right of the Government to abrogate the contract upon the conditions specified in the original law; and it is, therefore, purely a question of expediency. I think, now, the Federal Government can take these vessels without any loss or danger. They can sell them for whatever they are appraised at, and give California a weekly mail for $500,000.

Mr. SEWARD. This contract expires, I think, in 1858, and there will be another session of Congress on the first Monday of December next. Now, I hold, in the first place, in regard to the contract for the steamers between New York and Liverpool, that nothing can be plainer than that Congress has not the power to interfere with that contract at all at the present session. The language is explicit. It is a contract entered into between the Government by the passage of the act of 1852, and the carriers of these mails; and the contract contains this proviso: "That it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance herein provided for, upon giving six months' notice." That must be six months' notice given after the 31st of December.

Mr. WELLER. The Senator will allow me to say, that I said nothing in regard to the Collins line of steamships, not because I deny the right of the Government now to pass a law on the subject, but it would be exceedingly inconvenient to anticipate; and it is always folly, in my judgment, to decide a question until the necessity arises; and Congress will be in session again before the time fixed by the original contract will have arrived.

Mr. STUART. The question is on striking out the third section.

Mr. SEWARD. I do not care to address myself to that question.

Mr. MALLORY. Mr. President, when the subject of increased compensation to the Collins line of steamers was before us, you will recollect that one of the main arguments brought in support of that additional compensation was the eligibility and fitness of those vessels for naval purposes. I had the honor then to state my own views on that subject to the Senate; and I predicted that when these vessels should be perfectly worthless and worn out, they would be sold to the Government, or an attempt made to sell them. I said, then, that they were never fit for naval purposes, if by that term was meant fighting the battles of the country on the high seas. They are only fit, as has been remarked by the Senator from California, for transports, to do the duty of transports. We all know that after one of these immense steamers has been used for a short time, the expense of repairing her increases in an increased ratio with her age; and these vessels now, if transferred to the United States, would be worth no more than the material and the engine would sell for. As for naval purposes, or any other purposes of nationality, they would be a perfect drug on the hands of the Government, entirely useless.

Why, sir, the British Government, no longer ago than last year, having some of the finest paddle-wheel steamers afloat, in its navy, called together a board, composed of naval officers and civilians, and, after a most mature and thorough examination, condemned them all for naval purposes. Such steamers cannot be used in any respect except as transports, in time of war; and unless we could employ steamers of this kind as transports, we should have no use for them. We have on hand, at this moment, steamers which are useless to us, which cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Princeton, at Philadelphia, is perfectly useless; and I could mention others. I trust no law will be passed here which will sanction the Government taking these immense steamers after they have been half worn out, on any terms whatever.

The Senator from California says we should only be compelled to take them at the price at which they would be appraised as their value for naval purposes. Now, who are to be the appraisers? The Government stands on one side, and on the other stand individuals. I ask you when it was ever known in this country that there was an appraisement of the fair value of anything when the Government was a party? There has been no such thing in the world. The Government has no use for these vessels at all. No matter what they might be appraised at, they would be worth no more to the Government than the material and the engine.

Mr. SEWARD. The discussion goes on upon both branches of the subject; and I may as well now say a few words in regard to the Collins line. I will detain the Senate only a very few minutes.

Mr. STUART. Suppose we take the vote first on this amendment?

Mr. SEWARD. Both questions are being discussed by others. Sir, the Collins line of steamers has done all that it was promised it should do in regard to giving an increased amount of postages for the benefit of the Government. The increase for the year 1853 over the year 1852, according to the report of the Postmaster General, was thirty-four per cent. In 1852 the amount of postages received from this line was $339,164. In 1853 it had risen to $469,804. Assuming this percentage of increase to be the criterion, the postage for the present year—1854—will be $650,000, and for 1855 it will be $901,056—exceeding the amount of annual appropriations required by the contract.

Mr. HUNTER. Does the Senator from New York say that the receipts from the Collins line exceed the sum annually paid to them?

Mr. SEWARD. That they will, next year, at the same rate. The increase was thirty-four per centum last year; and, assuming that for this year, it will amount to $650,000, and next year $901,000, exceeding the appropriation. The increase of postage on the Cunard line during the same period has been at the rate of twenty-nine per centum. Ours, by the Collins, is at the rate of thirty-four per centum. The postages by the Cunard line in 1852 were over $658,000, in 1853, $845,553, which is about the amount of our present appropriation for the Collins line. Now, allowing the British postages to increase at twenty-nine per centum for this year and the next, the result will be, that for 1854 the postages by the Cunard line will amount to $1,090,000, and in 1855 to $1,407,000. In this we participate with the British Government by treaty; but if the Collins line be withdrawn, the treaty will be terminated. The line will be withdrawn whenever we give the notice to Mr. Collins. Then what will be lost to us will be our share of what will go as the postages on the whole communications between Liverpool and New York; and upon the basis of the estimates which I had given, it will be this: The Collins postage which we shall lose for 1854, or which will go to the British Government, will be $630,578; and for 1855, $901,069. The British postage in 1854 will be $1,090,000, and in 1855, $1,407,000. Total in two years, $4,049,000 of postage both ways upon correspondence between Europe and this country by both lines, which will be earned and enjoyed by the British. I leave the subject with these remarks, assured that there is no necessity for troubling the Senate further.

Mr. GWIN. The Senator from Florida has referred to his vote on increased compensation to the Collins line. He says he voted against it, and, at the time, made various predictions. I voted for it, and I have never regretted that vote from that day to this. The Senator from Florida talks about the ships being worn out. Why, sir, they are new enough and staunch enough to run around ten times any steamship in the United States Navy; and my honest conviction is, that in time of war, one of these steamers, with a single gun, could ship any steamship in our Navy. Of course, the gun should be a big one. A ship which can run fifteen or seventeen miles an hour is not in much danger from those making six, eight, or nine knots an hour, and that is the rate of our vessels in the Navy. I look upon the Collins steamers as an honor to the nation; and so long as I am here, I shall sustain them. Instead of being worn out, I regard them as in fine condition for the service of carrying the mails. I do not wish the Government of the United States to take them at all. I agree with the Senator as to that, and we shall probably vote together on that point. But I am decidedly of opinion that the notice proposed to be given in the first section of this bill is unlawful, and ought not to be given.

Mr. HUNTER. The provision of law in regard to the Collins steamers is:

"It shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance herein provided for, upon giving six months' notice."

It only requires that the arrangement shall not be terminated until after the 31st day of December; but I apprehend it may be terminated on any day after the 31st of December, if six months' notice be given previously. There is a difference of opinion in regard to that. I do not think the provision of the law as to the 31st of December applies to the notice, but to the time within which the arrangement may be terminated. See, sir, the arrangement of the language: "Provided, That it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854"—to do what? To give notice? No, sir, but to "terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance herein provided for."

Mr. RUSK. How terminate it?

Mr. HUNTER. "Upon giving six months' notice." We may give the notice before the time in order to terminate the arrangement afterwards. I have no doubt Congress may give the notice beforehand, provided they do not terminate the arrangement until that day.

Now, sir, in regard to the expediency of terminating that arrangement. The Senator from New York tells us all the predictions of its friends have been verified in regard to it. I think not. I think it was predicted, at the time Congress made the allowance, that we were to be repaid in the postages, and I know at that time there were some very fallacious statements made in regard to the returns from the Collins line; for they added to the actual receipts from the Collins line, which ought to be confined to the ocean postage, the inland postage after the letters reached here. I do not know how far the statistics of the Senator from New York (for I have not time to examine them now) would bear him out in his statements. Certain it is that the Collins line has never, as yet, paid, and does not now pay, the sums we are giving it. But suppose it did, it is a service which either will, or will not pay. If it does not pay, we ought not to be lavishing money upon a particular petted scheme. If it will pay, let us throw it open to free competition, and we shall find enough who will be ready to undertake the service. But, sir, I only rose to say that, so far as the legal authority is concerned, it seems to me that we have the right now to give the notice, provided we do not terminate the arrangement until after the 31st day of December next.

Mr. STUART. I did not propose to say anything upon this question until it should be properly before the Senate. The amendment now pending is to strike out the third section, and I have always seen that to discuss a question before it is properly under the consideration of the Senate, only amounts to a double discussion, for it will be discussed just as much when it is legitimately before the Senate. But, sir, as that has seemed to be the course of the debate, I wish to state, in a few words, why I cannot vote for the provision in the first section, requiring notice to be given to the Collins line of steamers. In respect to the measure before the Senate, the third section of this bill, I have not sufficient knowledge to enable me to discuss it.

As to the provision for giving notice to the Collins line of steamers, I do not believe that if it were a question between individuals, there would be any two opinions about it. Congress is empowered by law to terminate the contract. How?

By giving notice. When? After the 31st day of December, 1854. If the English language had been searched for the purpose of employing terms so plain that there could be no dispute about them, the matter could not have been made clearer.

Now, sir, look at the practical mode of doing this thing. Congress is to give the notice. How? By a law, or by a joint resolution, which shall declare that the notice provided for in a certain law—referring to it—is hereby given? When are you authorized to do that? The law says expressly you may give that notice after a certain time; that is to say, you may terminate the contract after that time by giving the notice. Then, I ask, by what authority can you give the notice sooner?

Now, let me show the manner in which this would operate in a business point of view. Suppose Congress to-night should declare, in the language of this bill as it now stands, that it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Navy to give the notice, I should like to know if, at the next session of this Congress, before the 31st of December next, we could not repeal it? Will any Senator deny that? It is only contended by the Senator from Virginia that the notice is to be effective after the 31st day of December. Then, I ask him, if Congress to-night gives the notice, may not Congress on the 10th of December repeal the act giving the notice? That shows at once that giving the notice in this way is of no effect; but if Congress gives the notice after the 31st day of December next, the contract is instantaneously terminated by law, and any subsequent action by Congress short of making a new contract, would be of no avail. There can be no doubt about that.

I am not prepared to say, sir, that Congress may not direct the notice to be given by the Secretary of the Navy, or by any other officer. That I should not deny, because it might be construed to be a notice given by Congress, appointing the Secretary of the Navy as our agent to give it. The plain language of the law is, that it is to be the notice of Congress. Then, when may Congress give it? The answer is found in the language of the law—"after the 31st day of December, 1854."

I know that this matter was put to a practical test in the House of Representatives at the time the arrangement for the additional allowance was made. I do not know whether anything was done in regard to it in the Senate. All sorts of propositions were offered in the House of Representatives to provide for giving the notice then to take effect at a subsequent day, but it was steadily voted down, and with great propriety. The opinion of Congress to-day may not be the opinion of Congress after the 31st day of December next. It does not follow at all, that, if Congress now deems it best to give this notice to terminate the contract, that would be the determination of Congress after the 31st of December. But, sir, certainly it is not important to reason in respect to the causes which should operate to induce the giving of this notice, for now the question is as to the power to give it. There is one thing I desire the Congress of the United States shall adhere to, and that is strict, plain justice, and avoid all attempts at exercising a disputed authority. Where we hold the power, the power of Congress is arbitrary; and in many instances it will be exercised here arbitrarily. In this case it is disputed, and disputed by sound men, whether the notice can be given before the time mentioned in the law. Sir, what becomes of a great and powerful Government, the party on the one side, and a company owning these mail steamers on the other? It is for the Government not to exercise a doubtful authority; and that is the best phase that can be put upon this subject. Whether Congress can exercise this authority now or not is doubtful, because it is doubted by disinterested and sound men.

Mr. ADAMS. If the Senator will allow me, I beg leave to call his attention to the provision in this bill. It is that the Secretary of the Navy "is hereby directed, immediately after the 31st day of December, 1854," to give the notice.

Mr. STUART. I understand that, and it is the very thing I object to. It is that Congress tries to evade the plain provision of the law, by providing now that an officer of the Government shall, after the 31st day of December, give the notice. I say the plain provision of the law is, that Congress is to terminate this contract by giving notice; and where may Congress terminate it? Congress cannot give the notice, Congress cannot direct anybody else to give the notice, until after the 31st of December next. Why, sir, to carry this doctrine further, the next day after we entered into the contract, Congress might have passed a law directing the Secretary of the Navy, or any other officer, to give the notice immediately after the 31st of December, 1854; but does anybody suppose that was the contemplation of Congress? Did we know then how the contract would operate, what would be its resulting benefits to the country, or anything at all about it? We are short of that knowledge now. Hence the propriety of adhering to the literal reading of the law. In addition to the question of propriety, it is a matter, in respect to which, if we hold the power, it is a disputed power, in relation to its present exercise, honestly and bona fide disputed. That being so, we should not seek to give an interpretation to the law which is fairly disputed by members of Congress, and also by the mail steamer company. For myself, I will never consent to such a thing. As to the interest of the mail steamer company, it is a matter of no consequence to me individually, but I never will consent that the Government of the United States, by my vote and action, shall undertake to turn peddlers and stick at devices for the means of avoiding a plain business provision of law.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I consider this an abstraction at the present time. Evidently a majority of the Senate is disinclined to concur in that provision of the House bill, and I shall not, therefore, consume the time of the Senate in replying to the position taken on the other side, though I think I could successfully maintain the right of Congress at this time to provide, as the bill provides, for the giving of the notice at the period fixed in the contract. I merely wish to notify the Senate that so soon as we shall have disposed of this bill, I desire that they shall take up and pass a most valuable little bill which has passed the other House, known as the graduation bill for the benefit of settlers on the public lands, and I hope we shall have a vote on this question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on striking out the third section.

Mr. MALLORY. On that question I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the calling of the roll was commenced, and Mr. ADAMS answered to his name.

Mr. BENJAMIN. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to a matter which seems to have escaped general notice. I noticed it myself before, but I was called out on a committee of conference, and did not bring it to the attention of the Senate. The third section, which it is moved to strike out, includes both the Collins and the California lines. I believe Senators generally are of opinion that it only includes the California lines. It includes the Collins line also; and the question ought to be divided in relation to it, because we have different opinions in relation to those lines.

Mr. HUNTER. I was not aware that it included the Collins line.

Mr. BENJAMIN. I know the Senate generally are under the same impression.

Mr. WELLER. It can be reached by a motion to reconsider, and then a division be demanded, as there are two distinct propositions.

Mr. CHASE. By unanimous consent, the call can be dispensed with, as there is evidently a misapprehension in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. BRIGHT.) If there be no objection, the call will be considered as withdrawn. There was no objection.

Mr. BENJAMIN. Now, I call for a division of the section, and I ask that it be read.

It was read, as follows:

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the arrangements now subsisting for the transportation of the mails from New York to Liverpool; from New York, via Southampton to Bremen; from New York, via Cowes, to Havre, and back; from New York to New Orleans, Charleston, Havana, and Chagres, and back; from Panama to California, and Oregon, and back; and from Charleston to Havana, and back, be terminated as soon as, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, it may be done consistently with the public interests; and that the Postmaster General shall give notice of such termination accordingly: Provided, That, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, with the concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy and the Attorney General of the United States, the same may be done without the violation of any contract now lawfully binding on the United States; and that the transportation of the mails on these lines be let to the lowest responsible bidders after public advertisement.

Mr. SEWARD. Before the question is taken on striking out that section, I move to amend it by striking out the words "from New York to Liverpool; from New York, via Southampton, to Bremen; from New York, via Cowes, to Havre and back;" so that it shall read: "That the arrangements now subsisting for the transportation of the mail from New York to New Orleans," &c., so as not to apply to the European steamers.

The question being taken on this motion to strike out, resulted—yeas 16, nays 17; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Benjamin, Brodhead, Brown, Foot, Geyer, Gwin, Houston, James, Morton, Rusk, Seward, Stuart, Thomson of New Jersey, Wade, and Weller—16.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Clay, Cooper, Dawson, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Hunter, Johnson, Mallory, Pratt, Sebastian, Slidell, Sumner, Toucey, and Walker—17.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to strike out the third section.

Mr. CHASE. The Senator from Pennsylvania moved to strike out the entire section. I understand that the question was divided, and that we have just voted on striking out part, and, therefore, the question must now be on striking out the residue.

Mr. BRODHEAD. My motion was to strike out the entire section.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A division of the question was called for, and the vote was taken on striking out a part of it.

Mr. STUART. The motion of the Senator from New York was to strike out part, but that did not affect the other question.

Mr. BRODHEAD. Have I not a right to move to strike out the entire section?

Mr. GHASE. I ask for a division, so as to confine the striking out to the portion on which we have not voted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is in order to move to strike out the whole section.

Mr. BRODHEAD. That is my motion.

Mr. CHASE. Is it not in order to divide it?

Mr. ADAMS. A motion was made to strike out the entire section. A motion was then made to divide that, and it was rejected; and now the motion to strike out the whole section is renewed. I submit that a division cannot again be called for.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate refused to strike out part of the section; the question now is on the motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania to strike out the whole section.

The question being taken by yeas and nays on that amendment, resulted—yeas 14, nays 19; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Benjamin, Brodhead, Foot, Geyer, Gwin, James, Mallory, Morton, Rusk, Seward, Stuart, Thomson of New Jersey, and Wade—14.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Bright, Chase, Cooper, Dawson, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Houston, Hunter, Johnson, Pratt, Sebastian, Slidell, Sumner, Toucey, and Weller—19.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. RUSK. I now move to amend the bill by striking out all of the first section after the word "dollars." That section now reads:

For transportation of the mails from New York to Liverpool and back, $853,000; and that the Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed, immediately after the 31st day of December, 1854, to give the notice provided in the first section of the act entitled "An act to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1853," approved the 21st day of July, 1852, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance for the transportation of the United States mail between New York and Liverpool, in the Collins line of steamers, as therein provided.

My motion is to strike out the whole of this section after the appropriation, commencing with the words "and that the Secretary of the Navy."

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, I hope the amendment of the Senator from Texas will prevail, for two reasons. The first is that it is at least questionable whether you are not committing a breach of faith when you give the notice before the 31st day of December. I am inclined to the opinion that it is a direct violation of your own engagement with these parties. That engagement, according to the fair construction of the law is this: "We will pay you this sum until the 31st of December, 1854, and after that time we will continue to pay it to you until we give you six months' notice that we desire to stop the arrangement." That is the stipulation of the law, as I read it. I will not say that it is free from doubt, I will not say that another construction cannot be put upon it; but I say that I believe this is its natural and legal construction. If it be so, you are violating the faith of the country when you give the notice before the 31st of December. On a question of that kind I think the Senate should pause.

The other ground on which I am in favor of the amendment is, that even if you have the right, without breach of faith, to give this notice, it is, I think, at least of questionable propriety. I mean to ask for the yeas and nays on this question, at all events; for I think hereafter gentlemen will regret it, by their votes, they destroy this Collins line; because, in destroying it, you must throw the entire postal communication between this country and Europe into the hands of Great Britain. It is vain for gentlemen to talk about free trade, and about opening the carrying of these mails to competition, when the British Government is paying $900,000 a year to the Cunard line. It is impossible that any fine of steamers, of equal power and capacity, can be got up against them while the British Government are in the arena, and paying money to sustain them. It cannot be expected. Then, as a matter of course, if you establish an inferior line, and give the carrying of your mails to that, they will carry no letters at all, because people will send their communications by the fastest line, and you will receive nothing. There has been an evident increase of the receipts from postages on this line, a regular and progressive increase, since its first establishment; and if you let it alone during the term of the contract, the probability is that, before the contract expires, the receipts from postage will pay the expense of your appropriation for this line.

In addition to that, it certainly has reflected great credit on the character of our country as a commercial people. We have a number of naval steamers, and there is no one of them which has gone to sea that has not been obliged to put back and be placed in order directly. These vessels have been unexcelled by any that we have known for speed and for safety. Take the statement, either of an American captain, of well-known reputation—Commander Lynch—or take the statement of a British captain of high reputation—their equals as sea-going steamers are not to be found in the world. I think their authority is tolerably strong. I think, at least without some strong evidence, we should not withdraw the compensation which we have allowed to this line, on the faith of which those valuable vessels were built, particularly when it will necessarily result in putting an end to the line; for it is impossible to run it at the expenditure at which it is run, without the compensation which Congress allows, when the British Government is paying more than that sum to an opposite line of steamers.

A great deal more might be said on this subject, but I will not detain the Senate. I hope the amendment will prevail. I have no feeling in reference to this, or any other of these lines, but a feeling of national pride, and I confess I have that strongly. I think this line has reflected great credit and honor on the country. Gentlemen may destroy it here, but they will live afterwards to regret it. I shall ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. WELLER. I think the proviso in the act in reference to the Collins line of steamers was intended to read in this wise, and I will state it as I think it was intended to read, in order to show what I consider to be the true meaning of the act. By transposing a few words, it reads thus: "Provided, That it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854, upon giving six months' notice, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance herein provided for." That, I think, is the true intent and meaning of this proviso of the act of 1852, that the six months' notice should commence from and after the 31st day of December. It is true you have the power, if you choose, to legislate on the subject; but the six months will not commence until the 31st of December next, and on the 1st of December, when Congress meets, it will be in the power of Congress to abrogate that provision. We shall, therefore, gain nothing by giving notice now, if the construction which I have given to the law be the correct one, and I think no lawyer can put any other construction upon it.

Mr. SEWARD. It is very clear the termination of the arrangement and the giving of six months' notice are all to be after the 31st of December.

Mr. WELLER. The 31st day of December is the day fixed on which you will determine whether to give six months' notice.

Mr. SEWARD. That day, or afterwards.

Mr. WELLER. Yes, sir.

Mr. RUSK. The proviso in the act of 1852 is: "Provided, That it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854, to terminate the arrangement herein provided for, upon giving six months' notice." Now, I ask the attention of the honorable Senator from Mississippi [Mr. ADAMS] to this matter, because I know he is a good lawyer, and he has been a judge. The proviso is "that it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854." It is in the power of Congress to do something after that day. Now, is it consistent with any legal or fair construction to say, that it is in the power of Congress to do it before that day arrives? Sir, it is as plain as the nose upon a man's face; and if I felt no pride over this line, I should certainly feel a pride in the reputation of Congress on this subject, and I should not wish to go directly in the teeth of our own enactment. The provision is expressly that it shall be in the power of Congress to give the notice after the 31st of December, 1854. Now, it is proposed that Congress shall exercise a power on the 3d day of August, 1854, which they have declared they will not exercise until December, 1854. That is the whole matter.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, I have no doubt that Congress can give the notice now. The language of the act read by the Senator from Texas is merely directory. The object was that the notice should not take effect before the 31st day of December, and that six months should be given for that before the service should be stopped. The language of the act is merely declaratory. What harm is done to the Collins line by giving this notice now? The construction put upon the latter part of it by the Senator from California is undoubtedly correct. It will be six months from that time before the service will stop. The object was to secure them a certain length of time, and it is just as well secured by giving the notice now as it would be by giving it after the 31st day of December next. The language of the act is merely directory. It is not obligatory upon Congress at all to wait until that time, and give the notice afterwards. It may do it at any time.

Mr. CHASE. I should vote very cheerfully to retain this section as it stands, if I were not persuaded that the construction placed by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. COOPER] upon the language of the law is not the true one. The contract between the Collins line and the Government, as it now stands, is evidently this: that they shall have an opportunity to run their boats, and exhibit the benefits of their line until the 31st of December; but after that time, it shall be in the power of Congress, if they see fit, to terminate the contract upon giving them six months' notice. Until that time, in my judgment, Congress ought not, in good faith, to act upon it, inasmuch as up to that time the line is to have the opportunity to display the benefits of the contract to the country, and thus bring to bear upon Congress all the reasons growing out of such exhibition in favor of the continuance of the contract. Before that time it would not be fair to give the notice.

Mr. ADAMS. I shall not detain the Senate. Congress shall give notice. What is meant by that? That the individual members of Congress shall give the notice? Or that Congress shall pass a resolution declaring that this contract shall cease? Or does the doctrine obtain that whatever Congress does by its authorized agent it does by itself? What is contemplated by this? That Congress shall give the notice in any other than the ordinary mode? Or does it not mean that it shall give the notice through its own selected channel? Of course that was what was contemplated. Then this bill provides, that after the time fixed in the contract, the Secretary shall give the notice. Congress does that act, and does it after the time authorized in the contract, to give the notice. It is contended, however, upon the other side, that Congress cannot pass the necessary resolution to give the notice until after the expiration of the time. Take the case of two individuals. A and B make a contract. One of the parties reserves to himself the right to abrogate it by giving a certain notice. Is it necessary that he should give it in person? Of course not. He can authorize another to do it; and whatever he does by an agent properly authorized, he does by himself. He makes up his mind, determines, and gives a letter of authority to his agent to give the notice, after the expiration of the time, but gives the letter prior to the time. Would it be said, when the agent gives the notice, you have no authority to give it because your letter of authority is dated prior to the time at which the notice was to be served? May the party not anticipate and give the direction to his agent before the time? And would not the giving of the notice by his agent be his own act? Now, if we provide, as is proposed to be done by this bill, to give the notice at the time authorized by the contract for it to be given, and the agent appointed by the Government does it by that time, is it not, to all legal intents and purposes, done by Congress within the terms of the contract? To my mind it is clear. There is no violation of the faith of the Government in it. There is no violation of any contract made with this party. If the Government should always be as faithful in its contracts as it will be in this, no Senator would have any good ground to blush at what Congress may do in any of its transactions.

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, it seems to me that there is a misunderstanding on the part of Senators, or at least that we do not exactly understand each other. It is clear to me that it would be a violation of faith to give this notice now. That does not touch the question whether the notice would not be valid. I do not deny that its validity, as between individuals, might be carried out; but you must look at this transaction as it occurred. The Congress of the United States have to decide for themselves whether these steamers would justify the public expenditure of the additional sum allowed by the remuneration of the postages. If the argument on the other side were true, it would not be a breach of faith on the part of Congress, (when they passed the law, saying to these parties, we will give you so much additional until December 31, 1854, and after that, unless on six months' notice we determine it,) if they gave the notice before the 31st of December. Then, of course, they might have given the notice immediately after the day on which the law was passed. Sir, the effect of passing the provision in this bill will be, that Congress will not hold to their own determination that they would give to these parties a period of time to show what would be the remuneration to the Government, before they, Congress, would determine upon the question of the notice. That is the want of faith. If you pass this now, it is imperative; the notice must be given; you now, five months before the time expires, when they might show you that the postages accumulating would be sufficient to meet the expenditure, authorize the notice to be given. Is not that a breach of faith? Unquestionably it is, in my judgment, a breach of faith unworthy of a great nation, whether the power exists or not.

Mr. RUSK. The honorable Senator from Mississippi, [Mr. ADAMS], for whose intellectual acumen I have a very high respect, involves himself in this matter. He asks me, if we are expected to go and give this notice ourselves? Nobody ever supposed that we were. He asks if the notice is given by a constituted agent of the Government, whether it is not sufficient? Nobody will dispute that either; but who is to give this notice? Can the Secretary of the Navy or any agent of the Government, of his own motion, give any notice? I apprehend the Senator will not pretend that he can. He must derive his authority from an act of Congress. It is a power reserved to Congress in the contract. It is a power which they reserve to themselves the right to exercise. They, therefore, are the parties, in reality, who give the notice by whatever hands they may choose to serve it on the parties. When does their power to give that notice begin? The act of Congress says, "Provided, That it shall be in the power of Congress," &c. When? Now? Then, sir, you change the language, and there is no court in Christendom which, between two individuals, would force such a construction upon any such language "That it shall be in the power of Congress, at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance herein provided for"—upon a condition. Congress has no power to touch the arrangement until after the last day of December, 1854; and then the condition is upon giving six months' notice afterwards. If there is any meaning in the English language, or if I have the slightest capacity to understand it, it is as clear as the noonday sun, that such is the reading of the law, and neither the Senator from Mississippi, nor the Senator from Pennsylvania, sitting in a court of justice, in a case between individuals, would place any other construction upon it.

Mr. GEYER. I shall probably vote with the Senator from Texas [Mr. Rusk] for striking out this clause; but I shall not do it, because I think the act, as it now stands, requires the notice to be given after the 31st of December. I cannot concur with him in his interpretation of the act of April, 1852. I do not intend to occupy much time; but I will refer, to show the rule of interpretation, to an act of Congress passed in 1807. The ninth section of the first article of the Constitution provides:

"The migration or importation of such persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year 1808."

On the 2d of March, 1807, Congress passed an act, the first section of which provides:

"That from and after the 1st day of January, 1808, it shall not be lawful to import or bring into the United States, or the Territories thereof, from any foreign place or country, any negro, mulatto, or person of color, with intent to hold, sell, or dispose of said negro, &c., as a slave, to be held to service or labor."

That is a practical interpretation of words of the same import as are used in the law to which reference is now made. The words of the Constitution are, "that the migration or importation," &c., "shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the year 1808." According to the interpretation sought to be put upon the act of 1852, if the same words are to have the same interpretation in the act passed in 1807, Congress could not have passed the act which they did pass on the 2d of March, 1807. I suppose that the act of 1852 was designed to give to the proprietors of the Collins line six months' notice after the 31st day of December, 1854, and that Congress might, at any time, prescribe prospectively for putting an end to that contract, but they were required to give the notice, and no matter at what time it was given, the line was to have six months after the 31st day of December, 1854. That is the interpretation I give to it.

Mr. SEWARD. It seems to me that if Senators will take up this proviso and read it, its meaning will be manifest in fixing the time. "Provided that it shall be in the power"—something shall be in the power of Congress. It shall be in the power of Congress to do what they can do at a certain time; and what time is that? At any time after the 31st day of December, 1854. Congress has power to do this thing at any time after the 31st day of December, 1854.

Mr. WELLER. With six months' notice.

Mr. SEWARD. Certainly; the discontinuance of the arrangement for the additional allowance was provided for upon giving six months' notice after the 31st day of December, 1854.

Mr. DAWSON. Has not Congress the right, under the law, to terminate the contract by a notice on the 31st day of December? Is not that one of the days upon which they can give the notice? You admit that. How can Congress, sir, by legislation, give the notice which she has to give precisely on that day? Suppose Congress had said that the President of the United States, in the same language, shall have the power to give the notice, could he not have given it on the 31st of December? No gentleman will deny that. Congress, then, can only act by a declaration made by both branches; and when she makes that declaration, (it is immaterial when it is made,) it is legal. It is contended that we could not pass a bill to give the notice until after the 31st day of December. If that be true, Congress, then, cannot exercise the right, under this construction, to give the notice on the 31st day of December, if they could not pass the law on that day. Suppose, Mr. President, that this contract ought to be terminated on the 4th day of July, 1855, would it be contended that Congress had not the right of passing a law to give that notice on the 4th day of July, 1855, when we know that, under the Constitution, we must adjourn on the 4th of March? Why, sir, it seems to me very clear that Congress is not violating the contract by authorizing the giving of this notice. She is merely making arrangements to place herself in a position to exercise all the rights which belong to her under the contract.

Mr. BENJAMIN. I suppose, as every lawyer in the Senate is giving his opinion upon this subject, I may be allowed to say one or two words upon it. I concur thoroughly in the construction given by the Senators from Delaware and Ohio. I think they have touched the precise point before the Senate. No doubt this act would be legally binding if passed now. Take the case which the Senator from Texas proposes, of a contract between two individuals. Suppose I contract with a farmer to cultivate my farm, and agree that the contract shall last until the 31st of December, 1854, after which, I may put an end to it by giving six months' notice. Unquestionably I can instruct my agent a year in advance, that when that day comes he shall give to the farmer the six months' notice. That is what Congress meant here—that it could instruct its agent in advance when the time comes to give the notice. The notice, therefore, as required by this act, would undoubtedly be a legal and valid one; but then there lies behind that the question suggested by the Senators from Delaware and Ohio. Would it be good faith towards these contractors to exercise the power now? Is that what was anticipated at the time between the contracting parties? Congress reserved the power to give this notice at any time after the 31st of December, 1854; but was it not the understanding at the time between Congress and these mail carriers, that the lapse of time up to December 31, 1854, was to be given to them in order that they might have an opportunity of satisfying Congress as to the advantage of making such a contract? Or in other words, did not Congress imply the agreement with them, that it would not exercise that discretion, or make up its mind on the subject until the 31st of December, 1854, arrived? That is the point. I think that Congress ought fairly to observe all contracts of this kind. The contractors have no court of justice to appeal to. We ought to carry out our contracts with the utmost equity, fairness, and good faith.

Now, although we may have the legal power to give a valid notice in the way we are now providing, although it may be perfectly competent for us legally now to direct our agent when the time shall come at which we shall be at liberty to give the notice—to give it, I say, there still remains the question, whether we shall be acting in good faith in doing so, and not giving the contractors a full opportunity of 'satisfying us as to what a proper discretion on the subject will lead to. It is on that ground, I think, we ought not to pass this. I believe the Senators from Delaware and Ohio placed the matter in its true legal aspect, and at the same time pointed out the equitable rights of the contractors.

On a call for the yeas and nays, no quorum voted.

Mr. CHASE. I move that the Senate take a recess until eight o'clock. [Morning had some time since dawned.]

Mr. HUNTER. I hope not. I understand the House will soon send over the naval appropriation bill. Let us wait for the message.

Mr. JOHNSON. There is a quorum about the Chamber. The Sergeant-at-Arms can bring Senators in.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I appeal to the sense of justice of the Senate to take up and pass House bill No. 1, to graduate and reduce the price of public lands to actual settlers and cultivators.

Mr. HUNTER. That cannot be done until this bill is disposed of.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. It can by unanimous consent.

Several Senators came in and recorded their votes, and the result was announced—yeas 17, nays 15; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Benjamin, Bright, Brodhead, Chase, Foot, Geyer, Gillette, Gwin, Houston, James, Rusk, Seward, Stuart, Thomson of New Jersey, Wade, and Weller—17.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Brown, Cooper, Dawson, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Hunter, Johnson, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, Pratt, Slidell, and Sumner—15.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I move again to strike out the third section; and on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The amendment was rejected—aye eight; noes not counted.

The bill was then ordered to a third reading, and was read a third time, and passed.

HON. JARED W. WILLIAMS.

Mr. BROWN. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to take up a House bill for the relief of J. C. Buckles, of Louisville, Kentucky. It can be passed in three minutes.

Mr. BAYARD. I rise to a question of privilege. The Committee on the Judiciary yesterday reported on a question of privilege affecting the right of a member of this body, [the Hon. JARED W. WILLIAMS] to retain his seat on this floor. That report is now printed, and in the hands of Senators. It is our duty to determine it at this session. I think that is the first business in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. BRIGHT.) It is a question of privilege.

Mr. BAYARD. I move that the report be taken up.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAYARD. I move that the Senate concur in that report. It concludes with a resolution.

Mr. BUTLER. It does not conclude with a resolution. It is in response to a resolution of the Senate. It had better be read. It is particularly guarded. The resolution was referred to the committee, and the report is in response to that.

Mr. BAYARD. The report concludes as follows:

In response to the resolution of the Senate, the committee are of opinion that "the right of representation, under the appointment," has expired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report.

The motion was agreed to.

J. C. BUCKLES.

Mr. BROWN. I now ask the Senate to take up the bill for the relief of J. C. Buckles, of Louisville, Kentucky.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, preceded to consider the bill.

It proposes to direct the Postmaster General to pay to J. C. Buckles, out of any money appropriated for the transportation of the mails, $3,006.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

SENATE DEBATES.

Mr. BROWN. I have a resolution to which I suppose there will be no objection:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate pay from the contingent fund of the Senate, to the proprietors of the Union, National Intelligencer, and Sentinel, for publishing the debates and proceedings of the Senate for the last and present Congress, up to the close of the present session, at the rate of $4 50 per column: Provided, That neither of the said journals which may have already been paid for any portion of the above service shall be again paid for the same.

Mr. ADAMS. That goes to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. SLIDELL. I object to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It goes over.

Mr. BROWN. How long?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One day.

Mr. BROWN. I have offered it, and I want it to come up between now and twelve o'clock to-morrow.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had agreed to some and disagreed to other amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855, and had agreed to the eighth amendment of the Senate with an amendment.

Also, that they insisted on their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate, and on their amendment to the eighth amendment of the Senate, and asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, and that they had appointed Mr. PHELPS, Mr. PARKER, and Mr. BOCK, managers of the same on their part.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was ordered that the Senate insist on their amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the committee of conference on the part of the Senate be appointed by the President pro tempore; and Mr. NORRIS, Mr. MALLORY, and Mr. SLIDELL, were appointed.

GRADUATION BILL.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. We have provided for almost every class of individuals, as well as corporations. Now let us provide for another and a different class of citizens, who are eminently entitled to the consideration of this body. A bill has been sent to us from the House, granting preemption rights to actual settlers upon public lands. It is called a bill to graduate and reduce the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators. I move that it be taken up for consideration.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of the bill.

It proposes to direct that all of the public lands of the United States which shall have been in market for ten years or upwards, prior to the time of application to enter them, under the provisions of the bill, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at the price of one dollar per acre; all that shall have been in market for fifteen years or upwards, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at seventy-five cents per acre; all that shall have been in market for twenty years or upwards, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at fifty cents per acre; all that shall have been in market for twenty-five years and upwards, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at twenty-five cents per acre; and all that shall have been in market for thirty years or more, shall be subject to sale at twelve and a half cents per acre; but the provision is not to be so construed as to extend to lands reserved to the United States, in acts granting lands to States for railroad or other internal improvements, or to mineral lands held at over one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre.

Upon every reduction in price, the occupant and settler upon the lands is to have the right of preemption at such graduated price, upon the same terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations, upon which the public lands are now subject to the right of preemption until within thirty days preceding the next graduation or reduction that shall take place; and if not so purchased, shall again be subject to the right of preemption for eleven months, as before, and so on, from time to time, as reductions take place; but it is not to be so construed as to interfere with any right which has or may accrue by virtue of any act granting preemption to actual settlers upon public lands.

Any persons applying to enter any of the lands are to be required to make affidavit, before the register or receiver of the proper land office, that they enter them for their own use, and for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, or for the use of an adjoining farm or plantation owned or occupied by them, and, together with that entry, they have not acquired from the United States, under the provisions of the bill, more than three hundred and twenty acres, according to the established surveys; and if any persons taking such oath or affidavit shall swear falsely in the premises, they are to be subject to all the pains and penalties of perjury.

Mr. BRODHEAD. This is a very important bill; and I beg to suggest to my friend from Alabama the propriety of not acting upon it until the next session, after we shall see what the House of Representatives does with the land bill which we sent to them. I am in favor of graduating and reducing the price of the public lands. I shall go for this bill when I can ascertain that the House of Representatives either refuse to act upon the bill which we have sent them, or reject it. We ought to retain the power in our hands. If the House pass the other bill, it would be quite unnecessary to pass this, because it contains the same thing as is contained in that bill. It is a more comprehensive bill than this; and certainly while that is pending before the House of Representatives, we should not act upon this. We can lose nothing by pursuing the course which I suggest. We may gain by it.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I will say to my friend from Pennsylvania, that the bill to which he refers is more comprehensive than this, and makes appropriations of all the public lands. I will say, in addition, that there is a necessity for the passage of this bill to protect a meritorious class of citizens. It does not interfere with the bill which is before the House. It will not impede its progress, or affect it in the least. It provides for a class of citizens who now require protection at the hands of the Government—a class settling upon the public lands, and who, unless it is passed, will remain unprotected until the next session of Congress. I trust my friend from Pennsylvania will not interpose objection to it. The bill which is before the House I trust will become a law. It not only makes a disposition of a portion of the public lands, but it disposes of the whole of them. This is partial, I admit, and is required to be partial, because it is confined to actual settlers. They are not able to help themselves, and they appeal to Congress to shield and protect them. If I believed that this bill would defeat the other, I should by no means urge it; but it will not do that.

Mr. CHASE. I desire to offer an amendment to the bill.

Several SENATORS. Oh, no.

Mr. CHASE. The amendment which I propose to offer, and which I have sent to the Secretary's desk, is the homestead bill. The House has signalized its action this session by passing two great measures in respect to the disposition of the public lands. One is the homestead bill; the other is the graduation bill. The homestead bill affords to every industrious settler an opportunity to acquire a home upon any part of the public lands without exception. This bill undoubtedly has some merit, but it is a merit of an inferior degree to the homestead bill; for the homestead bill enables the industrious settler to acquire a home anywhere upon any part of the public lands, except, of course, the reserved portions. This bill proposes to confine them to refuse lands, lands which have been in the market for many, many years. Now, sir, I have already said that I do not wish to detain the Senate a moment, at this late stage of the session. There are provisions in that bill which are objectionable to me; there are provisions which are objectionable to other Senators; but it is the bill which the House has agreed upon; and I prefer to take that, and to take both measures together. I hope the Senate will agree to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. BRIGHT in the chair.) The Chair is under the impression that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. CHASE. For what reason?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For the reason that it is contrary to all parliamentary law and usage to put one bill as an amendment upon another. An amendment may be moved to strike out and insert, but not in this form.

Mr. CHASE. I certainly take an appeal from the decision of the Chair. I should not do so if the Senate, at this very session, and at this very sitting, had not determined that question the other way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is very true; but it is contrary to what the Chair believes to be the rule.

Mr. CHASE. But the Senate determined it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?

Mr. SEWARD. I ask for the yeas and nays on that question.

Mr. BUTLER. I move that the whole subject lie upon the table; for at this time, I appeal to my friends to know whether it is fair to have legislation of this magnitude, when, by implication, no such measures ought to be taken up. When my friend from Alabama made his motion, I knew it would lead to these other amendments.

Mr. CHASE. I rise to a question of order. An appeal is pending, and while that is the case, I suppose no motion that the subject lie on the table can be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That motion takes precedence of any other.

Mr. FITZPATRICK called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered, and taken as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Bayard, Bright, Brodhead, Butler, Dawson, and Foot—6.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Benjamin, Brown,

Chase, Clay, Cooper, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Geyer, Gwin, Houston, Johnson, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, Morton, Pettit, Rusk, Sebastian, Seward, Slidell, Stuart, Sumner, Wade, Walker, and Weller—27.

So the motion that the subject lie upon the table was not agreed to.

Mr. COOPER. I move that the Senate take a recess until nine o'clock.

Mr. CHASE. Is that in order, while this question is pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No motion is in order except to adjourn, until the appeal is disposed of. The question is on the appeal.

Mr. BROWN. I move that when the Senate adjourn, it be to meet at ten o'clock.

Mr. PETTIT. We want an Executive session. Nominations are to be received and acted upon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion cannot be entertained while the other question is pending.

Mr. DAWSON. I move that the Senate take a recess until ten o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is not in order.

Mr. DAWSON. I move that the Senate adjourn until ten o'clock.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is not in order. The hour of meeting is already fixed by a resolution.

Mr. DAWSON. Then I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was not agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama moved that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the graduation bill. The order was made. The Senator from Ohio moved, as an amendment to that, the homestead bill. The Chair decided it not to be in order as an independent proposition, and contrary to the rules of the Senate. From that decision the Senator from Ohio appealed. If offered as a substitute, it would be in order, but not as an independent proposition.

Mr. CHASE. The Chair, I understand, decides that it is contrary to the rules of the Senate. I want to know if there is a rule of that sort?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, sir.

Mr. CHASE. I ask for the reading of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair decides that it is contrary to parliamentary law and usage to offer one bill as an amendment to another.

Mr. CHASE. I wish to say a word on that question. The subject pending before the Senate is the disposition of the public lands. A bill has been taken up providing for the disposition of the public lands to actual settlers for a limited price. I move to amend that bill by adding certain sections, providing for the granting of those lands without price. It is a part of the system of disposition. Now, sir, in the House of Representatives, and here, there is nothing more common, and there has been nothing more common from the commencement of my service in this body up to this time, than to amend a bill precisely in that form; and if the Senate now determine this to be out of order, it will reverse its whole practice.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. WEBSTER, his Secretary, announcing that he had this day approved and signed an act to constitute Pilatka and Bayport, in the State of Florida, ports of delivery respectively, and Keokuk and Dubuque, in the State of Iowa.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. McKean, Chief Clerk, announcing that the House had passed the bill from the Senate, to change the name of the American-built brig Glamorgan to that of Wizard.

Also, that they had passed a joint resolution making appropriation for the payment of those entitled to the benefits of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed August 3, 1854, voting extra compensation to pages, folders, and others, in which they requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to some, and disagreed to other amendments of the Senate to the bill making approprition for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855, asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, Mr. McDougall, and Mr. WALLEY, the committee on their part.

The Senate proceeded to consider their amendments, amended and disagreed to by the House of Representatives to the bill; and, on motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was ordered that the Senate insist on their amendments, amended and disagreed to by the House, and agree to the conference asked by the House, and that the committee of conference on the part of the Senate be appointed by the President pro tempore. Mr. BRIGHT, Mr. WELLER, and Mr. SEBASTIAN, were appointed.

GRADUATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the graduation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, whether the decision of the Chair in regard to the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio, shall stand as the judgment of the Senate.

Mr. CHASE. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SEWARD. I wish to inquire whether the House of Representatives did not send the homestead bill here, and whether that was not amended by adding sections to it embracing the graduation principle?

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. It is not worth while to try to pass this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is not debatable.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I will speak until twelve o'clock, if this thing is forced upon us at this time.

The yeas and nays were taken, with the following result:

YEAS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Brown, Clay, Cooper, Douglas, Fitzpatrick, Geyer, Gwin, Houston, Hunter, Johnson, Mallory, Morton, Pettit, Rusk, Sebastian, Stuart, and Weller—19.

NAYS—Messrs. Chase, Dodge of Iowa, Foot, Gillette, Jones of Tennessee, Seward, Sumner, Wade, and Walker—9.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is not a quorum voting.

Attempts were made to obtain a quorum by bringing in absent Senators.

Mr. ATCHISON. The habit which the Senate has of bringing in Senators after the roll is called, is against the rules of the Senate. No one is entitled to vote, unless he is in the Senate Chamber when the roll is called.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I recollect a case distinctly in which we sent out and coerced members to come in by an order of the Senate.

Mr. ATCHISON. You can do that; but they cannot vote after you bring them in.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I do not understand how that rule is. It is the every-day practice to receive such votes.

Mr. ATCHISON. I know it is; but still it is not the rule.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Let us see the rule.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Nothing is more common than for the Senate, when no quorum is present, to compel absentees to attend.

Mr. DAWSON. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the only motion which the Chair can entertain.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I move to amend, by adding: "to meet at nine o'clock." The House has adjourned to meet at that hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That can only be done by unanimous consent.

Several SENATORS. Agreed; but say eight o'clock.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I will so modify it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is moved that the Senate take a recess until eight o'clock.

Mr. STUART. That cannot be done without a quorum. I object to it.

Mr. BROWN. I want to make this suggestion. Unless we adjourn, it is one continuous day, and the 4th of August on which we have agreed to adjourn sine die never comes. Now, when will the Secretary commence to make up his Journal for the 4th of August, unless we adjourn? We must adjourn.

Mr. STUART. I will be bound that the Secretary will make up the Journal right. I have no fear about that. No motion is now in order, there being no quorum here, except to adjourn.

Mr. DAWSON. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. HUNTER. When do we meet?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania moves to adjourn until eight o'clock.

Mr. STUART. I object to that.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate accordingly, at half past five o'clock, a. m., Friday, adjourned to meet at eight o'clock, a. m.

IN SENATE.

FRIDAY, August 4, 1854.

The Senate met at eight o'clock, a. m., pursuant to adjournment from five, a. m.

THOMAS JORDAN.

On motion by Mr. WELLER, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of House bill "authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to settle the accounts of Thomas Jordan, assistant quartermaster in the United States Army."

It proposes to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to audit and settle, upon the principles of equity and justice, the accounts of Thomas Jordan, assistant quartermaster in the United States Army, arising out of his disbursements as disbursing officer of the quartermaster's department at the city of Vera Cruz, Mexico, from August 10, 1847, to August 1, 1848.

Mr. WELLER. I think this is one of the most remarkable cases I ever knew. This gentleman was a disbursing officer in the Mexican war, and disbursed money to the amount of $4,300,000. He was stricken down by the yellow fever, and a little fraud was practiced on him by his clerk, having paid a draft that was presented, amounting, perhaps, to some $2,000. This is to authorize the settlement of that amount. I do not know the man; but I think it a very remarkable case.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

CASH AND ELLIS.

Mr. MORTON. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of House bill "for the relief of David C. Cash and Giles U. Ellis," two soldiers. The amount is inconsiderable. The bill has passed the House, and has been referred to the Committee on Military Affairs of this body, and unanimously reported back. I hope it will now be passed.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It proposes to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to David C. Cash, late lieutenant, and Giles U. Ellis, private, in the Seminole war in Florida, whatever may be due them on the muster-rolls for military services in that war.

Cash and Ellis served in the war with the Seminoles in Florida, the former as a lieutenant, and the latter as a private. They were deputed, with the concurrence and approbation of their respective commanders, to assist the regimental quartermaster and commissary of subsistence, Richard R. Crum, in the receipt and disbursement of supplies; the former at Fort Crane, and the latter at Fort Gilliland. They received supplies from time to time from the acting quartermaster of the Army and the acting commissary of subsistence, and placed the same in the public storehouses of their respective stations, signing receipts and vouchers for the same, David C. Cash signing as "acting assistant commissary," and Giles U. Ellis as "assistant quartermaster at Fort Gilliland." Although signing receipts in this form, they considered themselves as acting merely in the capacity of agents of Crum, and responsible to him alone.

They well and truly discharged their duties as agents of Crum, receiving the supplies, and disbursing them, upon regular requisitions, to the troops in service, and (in pursuance of law) to the suffering inhabitants; and, at the expiration of the performance of their duty, they accounted to R. R. Crum, the regimental quartermaster, delivering to him all the receipts, invoices, requisitions, and other vouchers covering their issues, and which vouchers were made out in his name. They had not supposed themselves liable for the property to any one other than Crum, alleging that they had received no authority whatever to act in their own names as agents of the Government, either in the quartermaster or commissary's department. And yet, when, after the war, they applied for the pay due them on the muster-rolls for their military services, they were met by an offset of this very public property, which, years before, they had disbursed under orders from a regularly recognized quartermaster, and to whom they had fully accounted.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

COASTING TRADE.

Mr. TOOMBS submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary inquire into the existing laws concerning navigation and the coasting trade, and report at the next session, by bill or otherwise, whether any, and if any what, changes in them may be necessary to cheapen the transportation of commodities, and to promote the general interest of the country.

IRA CALL.

Mr. CHASE. I ask the Senate to take up the bill from the House of Representatives for the relief of Ira Call, of Huron county, Ohio. He is a very old man, and this is to give him a small pension.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to direct the Secretary of the Interior to place Ira Call's name on the list of invalid pensioners, at the rate of eight dollars per month, from the 1st of March, 1854.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, was read a third time, and passed.

F. A. WHITNEY.

Mr. PETTIT. The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom the subject was referred, have directed me to make a report, accompanied by a bill, authorizing the title of the United States to lot No. 20, in square 116, Washington city, to be conveyed to Foliet A. Whitney.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I hope that bill will be now put upon its passage. It is to grant a title to a lot to one of the pages of the Senate, for which he has already paid the sum of seventy-five or one hundred dollars.

There being no objection, the bill was read a first and second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to direct the Commissioner of Public Buildings to convey to Louis F. Whitney, in trust for his son Foliet A. Whitney, a minor, the title of the United States to lot 20, in square 116, in the city of Washington, upon his paying therefor twenty-five dollars.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

GARDINER'S MILITARY DICTIONARY.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I submitted a resolution yesterday, proposing to purchase some copies of Gardiner's Dictionary of the Army. I ask the Senate, if there be no objection now, to proceed to the consideration of that resolution.

Mr. ADAMS. I object.

JOHN RICE JONES.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. There is on the table a House bill for the relief of the legal representatives of John Rice Jones, deceased, which has heretofore passed this body five or six different times, but has never become a law. I ask the Senate now to proceed to its consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It is to authorize the legal representatives of John Rice Jones, deceased, to locate, in legal divisions and subdivisions, not less than one hundred and sixty acres, an area of three thousand four hundred and eighty-five acres, on any of the public lands which shall have been offered at public sale, and may be subject to private entry; which location shall be in full satisfaction of the claims of Jones, which are entered as numbers 1285 and 1286, in the report dated January 4, 1813, of the Kaskaskia commissioners; and, on a proper return being made to the General Land Office, from the district land office, of a location in conformity to the act, a patent shall issue; but no location shall be made upon mineral land or lands reserved for the use of schools, or for military purposes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

LAND GRADUATION BILL.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I understand that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. CHASE] has withdrawn his objection to the House bill "to reduce and graduate the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators," and that there is not now any Senator who will object to that bill. I should not ask for its consideration at this time if there was. But, sir, it is a question upon which we have passed and repassed, and there is scarcely a man, even the most hostile to the new States, and the most desirous of perpetuating the system of tyranny and oppression which has existed in your public land system, who is opposed to this graduation bill. Everything else which has been asked for the West has been defeated, and the last I ask for them now is, that the Senate shall take up this bill and pass it.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of the House bill "to reduce and graduate the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators."

The PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio withdraw the appeal which he took yesterday from the decision of the Chair?

Mr. WELLER. I withdraw it for him.

Mr. STUART. It is the understanding that he withdraws his amendment.

The PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio withdraw his amendment?

Mr. CHASE. Under the existing circumstances which surround us, I do.

No amendment being proposed, the bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

NORTH AMERICAN FISHERIES.

Mr. TOOMBS submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be, and he is requested, to procure and submit to both Houses of Congress, a commercial and statistical report of the sea fisheries of New England and the British North American Provinces, and their influence and bearing on the foreign trade and home business of the United States, together with a topographical description of the fishing grounds of the said British Provinces, especially of those now frequented by fishermen of the United States, and others to which they may resort hereafter, with other information, as well scientific as practical, that may be useful in the prosecution of the fisheries, and which will tend to advance that important branch of business in any department.

UNSURVEYED LANDS IN MINNESOTA.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I appeal to the Senate now to take up House bill "to extend the right of preemption over unsurveyed lands in Minnesota, and for other purposes." It is one which has been long in my hands. I reported it back from the Committee on Public Lands some time ago, and the Delegate from that Territory feels a deep interest in it. I hope the Senate will take up the bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, considered the bill. It provides that the provisions of the preemption act of September 4, 1841, and the acts amendatory thereof, shall be extended to the lands in Minnesota Territory, whether surveyed or not; but in all cases where preemption is claimed on unsurveyed land, the settler shall file his declaratory statement within three months after the survey shall have been made and returned, and make proof and payment before the day appointed by the President's proclamation for the commencement of the sale of the lands.

Mr. PRATT. I do not know whether it is very proper at this hour of the morning to pass a bill which seems to make some disposition of all the lands within the limits of Minnesota. I do not know exactly what it does with them.

Mr. BENJAMIN. I will suggest to my friend from Maryland that I have run my eye over the bill, and it merely provides for a preemption right.

Mr. PRATT. I am satisfied.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

JACOB BAKER.

On motion by Mr. CHASE, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of the House bill for the relief of Jacob Baker, of Sandusky City, Ohio.

It proposes to require the Secretary of the Interior to place his name on the pension roll, and pay him eight dollars a month during his natural life, payment to commence from June 27, 1854.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

PAY OF THE RANK AND FILE OF THE ARMY.

Mr. PETTIT. I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of House bill for the relief of Thomas C. Green.

Mr. JOHNSON. I hope the Senator will allow us to take up the Calendar in regular order.

Mr. PETTIT. I wish to dispose of some House bills which have been reported on favorably by the Committee on Private Land Claims.

Mr. JOHNSON. How many?

Mr. PETTIT. Three or four.

Mr. PRATT. Let each member get up one bill at a time.

Mr. PETTIT. Very well; but let this be passed first.

Mr. WELLER. I have an appeal to make to my friend from Indiana. The House of Representatives passed a bill to increase the pay of the rank and file of the Army, and to encourage enlistment. It will be recollected that we passed a bill to increase the pay of the officers, as well as the rank and file. The House of Representatives refused to pass that bill, but sent us this, which increases the pay of the rank and file. The Committee on Military Affairs have not reported this bill heretofore, with the hope that they might be able to obtain their own bill by an amendment on the Army appropriation bill. Now, at the last hour, when we have failed in that, I ask to report this bill back, and put it on its passage.

Mr. PETTIT. If it create no debate, I will yield to this bill.

Mr. WELLER. It will not, of course, lead to debate.

Mr. PETTIT. Then I withdraw my motion.

Mr. WELLER. I am instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs to report back, without amendment, House bill "to increase the pay of the rank and file of the Army, and to encourage enlistments," and to ask that it may now be considered.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It proposes to increase the pay of the non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates of the Army at the rate of four dollars per month, to continue for the terms of three years from the 1st of January next, and until otherwise fixed by law. Every soldier, who, having been honorably discharged from the service of the United States, shall, within one month thereafter, reenlist, is to be entitled to two dollars per month in addition to the ordinary pay of his grade, for the first period of five years after the expiration of his previous enlistment, and a further sum of one dollar per month for each successive period of five years, so long as he shall remain continually in the Army; and soldiers now in the Army, who have served one or more enlistment, and been honorably discharged, are to be entitled to the benefits herein provided for a second enlistment.

Soldiers who served in the war with Mexico, and received a certificate of merit for distinguished services, as well those now in the Army as those that may hereafter enlist, are to receive the two dollars per month to which that certificate would have entitled them, if they had remained continuously in the service.

Non-commissioned officers who, under the authority of the seventeenth section of the act of March 3, 1847, were recommended for promotion by brevet to the lowest grade of commissioned officer, but did not receive the benefit of that provision, are to be entitled to the additional pay authorized to be given to such privates as received certificates of merit.

Provision is also made for the promotion of non-commissioned officers.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

THOMAS C. GREEN.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of House bill for the relief of Thomas C. Green. It requires the Commissioner of the General Land Office to issue a patent to Thomas C. Green for the southeast quarter section of section thirty-three, in township eleven north of range three west, in the military tract of Illinois, which patent is to recite the fact that the former one was filled out erroneously for the southwest quarter, and has been lost, and therefore a new patent has been issued to the grantee.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

EXTRA COMPENSATION.

Mr. JOHNSON. I move that the Senate now take up a resolution which was submitted a few days ago by the Senator from Iowa, in regard to the extra compensation to our reporters—the annual tribute which is here paid to their services.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution:

Resolved, That there be paid, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to each of the reporters of the Congressional Globe for the Senate, the same sum which was paid them at the last session of Congress.

Mr. SEWARD. It will be remembered that at the commencement of this session, the Globe and Union both reported the debates of the Senate, and that the Union withdrew from the contract. It is but right, therefore, that the reporters for the Union should be embraced in that resolution, for the period that they continued to report. I move to amend the resolution by inserting a provision for the payment of the reporters of the Union, for the time they were employed.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. That is certainly just, and I will modify the resolution by inserting "and to the reporters of the Union for the time they were employed, pro rata."

Mr. JOHNSON. I move to amend the resolution by inserting after the amendment, which has just been accepted, the words "and to the Superintendent of Public Printing, and the clerks and messengers in his office, the same extra compensation as was paid to them at the expiration of the last session of Congress." The Senate will recollect that a short time since we put an amendment into the civil and diplomatic bill to this effect, upon this ground: When a joint resolution was passed, increasing the compensation of the legislative employees, it was decided that these officers belonged to the executive departments, and when a bill was passed which increased the compensation of the executive clerks, it was decided that they belonged to neither. Under those circumstances, this class of our clerks were cut out of any extra compensation at all. This amendment merely proposes to give them the extra compensation which is usual, and it does not reach the amount that their regular increase would, under either of the propositions to which I have referred.

Mr. BENJAMIN. I would suggest to the Senator from Arkansas that that requires the concurrent action of both Houses.

Mr. JOHNSON. No, sir, the amendment merely proposes to pay out of our contingent fund the same extra compensation which was allowed to these officers at the last session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. BRIGHT in the chair.) The Chair is of opinion that the report made by the select committee, graduating the scale of salaries to be paid the officers of the Senate, and which was adopted by the Senate, forbids anything of this sort.

Mr. TOOMBS. That was my understanding at the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is, therefore, clearly out of order.

Mr. JOHNSON. I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that these clerks were excluded from the increase of compensation allowed to the clerks in the executive departments on the ground that they did not belong to that class. When increased compensation was allowed to the legislative clerks, they were excluded from that on the ground that they did not belong to the legislative class of clerks. Thus they have been cut out from both increases. They were allowed at the last session, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, the usual extra compensation. It is, therefore, now certainly in order to propose to make them the same allowance; and if it should be allowed, they will not receive as much as the regular compensation to which they would have been justly entitled, if, by the decisions of the Department, they had been allowed to come in, either as legislative or executive clerks. If the Senate is averse to granting this extra compensation, it can vote down the amendment; but I submit that it is clearly in order.

Mr. PRATT. I wish to make a single remark that may be applicable to other cases which may be brought before us.

Mr. JOHNSON. There is no other case that I know of.

Mr. PRATT. The persons included in this amendment are not connected with the Senate in any way. Now, how our contingent fund can be properly expended for the purpose of paying persons who have no connection, officially, with the Senate, I am at a loss to ascertain.

Mr. TOOMBS. I believe the Chair rules the amendment to be out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Such is the decision of the Chair.

Mr. JOHNSON. Well, sir, I am so clear in my own mind that the amendment is in order that I am compelled to appeal from the decision. I must state to the Senator from Maryland, who, I am sure, is not disposed to do injustice, that these clerks draw their pay from us entirely, and all their accounts are settled and adjudicated here. Their connection is with the legislative department. They are clerks of the Senate, in reality, and are not clerks of any of the Departments. The amendment provides only for those who do not receive the regular increase allowed by the joint resolution, under which this amendment has been ruled out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, "Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?"

Mr. FITZPATRICK. If this decision shall be sustained, these clerks will not be compensated at all. It seems, in the first instance, they were assigned to the executive departments; but when the extra compensation was allowed to the clerks of those departments, they were excluded, and it was then said that they belonged to the legislative department. The compensation of the clerks of every other department, legislative and executive, has been increased; but these clerks have received no extra compensation. Now, I appeal to the Senate, and particularly to the Senator from Georgia, not to refuse an increase of compensation to these meritorious clerks, when all other employees in every department of Government have had their compensation increased.

Mr. JOHNSON. An amendment to provide for them was put by the Senate into the civil and diplomatic bill, but it was cut out by the committee of conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It could not be objected to as an amendment to the civil and diplomatic bill, for there it was proposed to make it a law; but, as the Chair before stated, the select committee appointed for the purpose of reporting a proposition graduating the pay of officers of the Senate, provided by resolution, which the Senate adopted, that no further appropriation should be made to pay officers of the Senate except by law. The amendment, therefore, cannot be received, as taking out of the contingent fund of the Senate money to pay extra compensation to officers of the Senate. It is on that ground that the Chair decides the amendment to be out of order.

Mr. WALKER. Was that report concurred in by the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was.

The question being taken, "Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?" it was decided in the affirmative; so the amendment was ruled to be out of order.

Mr. WALKER. I wish to ask for information, whether the decision of the Chair would not equally reach the reporters mentioned in the original resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair does not recognize reporters as officers of the body; and, therefore, his decision does not apply to them.

Mr. WALKER. I have an amendment to offer, which I will appeal to the honorable Senator from Iowa to accept as a modification of his resolution. It is to add:

And that the usual compensation to the enrolling and engrossing clerks be paid to them out of the same fund.

These clerks have been more pressed, I will venture to say, at the close of this session, than they ever have been for a large number of years past. The amount which this amendment would give them would be very small, and I think, myself, that justice, as well as generosity, requires that it should be adopted.

Mr. TOOMBS. Were they not allowed an increase of twenty per cent. under the joint resolution which we passed not long since?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are they clerks of the Senate?

Mr. WALKER. They are enrolling and engrossing clerks, temporary clerks in the employment of the Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. TOOMBS. That is expressly forbidden. They got the increase, and cannot be allowed this amount.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inquire whether they are regular clerks of the Senate?

Mr. WALKER. The Secretary can inform the Chair.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. The object of the Senator from Wisconsin is to pay fifty dollars to each of the enrolling and engrossing clerks, who have been employed during the last four or five days. It has been allowed to them heretofore.

Mr. WALKER. I have no objection to modify the amendment by saying "temporary enrolling and engrossing clerks."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If they be temporary clerks, the amendment will be in order.

Mr. WALKER. I will modify it by inserting the word "temporary."

Mr. CASS. There would be great objection to giving to clerks who have only been at work two or three days, $250.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. It is only fifty dollars.

Mr. CASS. Then suppose the amendment is fifty, it is unjust that one who has worked for six months as a temporary clerk, and one who has worked but for one day, should get the same sum.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I hope, if there be any objection, the Senator from Wisconsin will withdraw his amendment, so as not to embarrass the resolution.

Mr. WALKER. I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the resolution of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I move to amend it by adding "and to John Brown, Robert Carter, and Harry Dodson, the sum of fifty dollars each." These are men of color, employed in the stables and retiring room, and this is to give them the usual allowance.

Mr. JOHNSON. Is not that out of order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has a right to make an appropriation out of the contingent fund to anybody not officers of the body. These are not officers of the body.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MORTON. My attention has been drawn, in connection with an amendment which I had prepared, to a joint resolution passed in June last, in respect to the compensation of the employees of the legislative branch of the Government. I find, however, that a resolution has passed the House of Representatives giving the pages of that House $200 extra compensation out of the contingent fund of the House. The joint resolution provides that those who receive the twenty per cent. "shall not hereafter receive the usual extra compensation." The pages in the House have received about $200 extra compensation; and, therefore, to avoid the technicality of the joint resolution, if I may use the expression, I have prepared an amendment to add "that the pages, folders, and other employees of the Senate receive $105 extra compensation." That sum adding the twenty per cent. would place them upon an equality with the pages of the House of Representatives.

Mr. EVANS. How much do the pages get now?

Mr. COOPER. Two dollars and fifty cents a day.

Mr. DAWSON. Will the Senator from Florida be kind enough to tell me what is the amount of money received by one of these pages during the session?

Mr. MORTON. It requires a little arithmetical calculation, and I presume the Senator from Georgia is quite as much qualified for it as I am. I think their compensation is $2 50 per diem.

Mr. DAWSON. And twenty per cent. on that?

Mr. MORTON. I see the joint resolution is very guarded, and provides that the pages of the House shall receive the same compensation as pages of the Senate. The rule should work both ways, and the pages of the Senate should receive as much as those of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator offer an amendment?

Mr. MORTON. Yes, sir; to add "and $105 extra compensation be paid to the pages, folders, and other employees of the Senate."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is clearly out of order.

Mr. MORTON. Is it in violation of the joint resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Certainly.

Mr. TOOMBS. It seems to me that this comes within the decision of the Chair, made a short time ago. The pay of the pages was raised by the joint resolution, and they are, therefore, clearly excluded from extra compensation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Clearly so.

Mr. MORTON. I will not appeal from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. WALKER. I think the laborers in the Capitol grounds should be embraced in this resolution. They have been cut down to a rate of wages lower than any other employees of the Government in this city, and at the same time they bear more of the heat and burden of the day than anybody else; and if we are to pass an extra compensation resolution I should be in favor of amending it so as to include them. They need it more than any others that I know of.

Mr. TOOMBS. As there seems to be no end to amendments, I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I hope not; I hope we shall have the question on the resolution.

Mr. TOOMBS. If we can take the question I have no objection, and will withdraw my motion.

Mr. CASS. I would inquire whether the compensation of the pages has been increased. If not, the joint resolution which has been referred to does not embrace them, for it only embraces those whose compensation was increased by it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They are clearly embraced.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That there be paid, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to each of the reporters of the Congressional Globe for the Senate, the same sum which was paid them at the last session of Congress; and to the reporters of the Union for the time they were employed pro rata; and to John Brown, Robert Carter, and Harry Dodson, the sum of fifty dollars each.

PATRICK GASS.

Mr. CASS. My attention has been drawn by a member of the House to the bill of the House for the relief of Patrick Gass, and I have a motive for asking the attention of the Senate to it, because I happen to know the man. This is the Patrick Gass who wrote the first account of the expedition of Clarke and Lewis. He was a soldier who volunteered in that service; he served many years in a service of great danger and difficulty. He frequently passed over the Rocky Mountains, and crossed to the Pacific. He discharged his duty faithfully. I understand that he is now very poor. The bill is to give him three hundred and twenty acres of bounty land; and I move that the Senate proceed to its consideration. I trust there will be no objection to it.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It proposes to require the proper officers of the Government to issue to Patrick Gass a warrant for three hundred and twenty acres of land, to be located on any of the public lands of the United States subject to private entry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

JONATHAN PEARCE.

Mr. SUMNER. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions to report back the House bill for the relief of Jonathan Pearce, and to ask that it may now be put upon its passage.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to require the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of Jonathan Pearce, of Muskingum county, Ohio, upon the pension rolls, and cause to be paid to him eight dollars per month, so long as he lives, commencing January 1, 1854.

It appears that Pearce was a private in Captain James Brown's company, of Colonel Miller's regiment of Ohio militia, as substitute for his brother, who was drafted in August, 1812, at Zanesville, Ohio, and served six months, when he was honorably discharged. The original certificate of discharge is on file in the Pension Office in an application for bounty land. Pearce was one of a company dispatched on an expedition against the Indians, and was absent eight days, and had food for five days only. In consequence of lack of food and exposure he took sick, and remained so for six weeks, then partially recovered, and served out his time. Soon afterwards his disease settled in his limbs, producing chronic rheumatism, and he has suffered from it ever since. For the last twenty or twenty-five years he has hobbled round on crutches; he is now aged sixty-three; incurable, and a man of good character.

No amendment being proposed, the bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, was read a third time, and passed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

On motion by Mr. RUSK, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of Executive business; and after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened.

CLERK TO JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

Mr. BAYARD submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to continue the employment of a clerk during the recess of Congress, for the purpose of obtaining certain information in reference to the judiciary of the United States.

Mr. BUTLER. My colleague on the committee, the Senator from Georgia, [Mr. Toombs,] has had this matter under consideration, and has collected a good deal of information, but not enough for the action of the committee in relation to the matter, and a horizontal scale of salaries cannot be adopted, unless further information is obtained. Hence it is necessary to get that information in relation to marshals and district attorneys; and he cannot obtain it without a clerk to do the correspondence.

Mr. JONES, of Iowa. I want a clerk for the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. BUTLER. Oh, no!

Mr. JONES, of Iowa. What is the reason? He has more work to do than the clerk of any other committee.

Mr. BUTLER. The resolution is not put on that ground at all. Either the Senator from Georgia will have to open the correspondence, or somebody else must do it.

Mr. TOOMBS. I should myself be opposed to the resolution, if it were amended according to the suggestion of the Senator from Iowa. It would be wrong. If the Senate thinks it is proper that some person should carry on the correspondence in regard to this vast subject, extending to every State in the Union, our resolution is right; but I am against the amendment, and against the resolution, if amended; for our intention is not to create a pension office.

Mr. WALKER. I think that the work which will be done will be about this. A letter will be written in a form to elicit the information sought for. Thirty-one copies of it will be struck off in German text, signed by the clerk, and sent to the different States to elicit the answers to it. That will be the extent of the work.

The resolution was agreed to.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WELLER, from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855, reported that, having met, and, after full and free conference, they have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses, as follows:

That the Senate recede from their first, ninth, eleventh, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, and nineteenth amendments, disagreed to by the House.

That the House agree to the third amendment of the Senate, with the following amendment: Strike out "ninety-three thousand four hundred and eighty-five," and insert "thirty-three thousand nine hundred."

That the House agree to the tenth amendment of the Senate, with the following amendment: Strike out "fifty-two thousand four hundred and seventy-five dollars and sixty-eight cents," and insert "twenty-five thousand dollars."

That the House agree to the twelfth amendment of the Senate, with the following amendment: Strike out all of the amendment after the word "appropriated," in line eight.

That the House agree to the sixteenth amendment of the Senate, with the following amendment; at the end thereof add: "Provided, That such party shall not receive a pension during coverture."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the fifth, eighth, seventeenth, eighteenth, twentieth, and twenty-first amendments of the Senate, and agree to said amendments.

The amendments from which the committee recommend the Senate to recede were as follows:

The first, which was to amend the clause "For subsistence in kind, $1,028,497," so as to make the appropriation $1,285,621 25.

The ninth, which was to insert:

For the construction of a military road from the Rio Grande, near El Paso, to the river Colorado, and for sinking wells therein, $12,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The eleventh, which was to insert in the following section the words "and properly:"

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to examine into and ascertain the amount of expenses incurred, and now actually and properly paid, by the State of California in the suppression of Indian hostilities within the said State prior to the first of January, Anno Domini 1854, and that the amount of such expenses, when so ascertained, be paid into the treasury of said State: Provided, That the sum so paid shall not exceed in amount the sum of $924,259 65; which amount is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The thirteenth, which was to insert:

Sec. —. And be it further enacted, That the same allowance in respect of rations be hereafter made to the military commandant of the Schuykill arsenal, in the Quartermaster's Department, as to the commandants of the arsenals in the Ordnance Department.

The fourteenth, which was to insert:

Sec. —. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the first section of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending 30th June, 1851," approved September 28, 1850, granting extra pay to the officers and enlisted men of the Army serving in Oregon and California, be extended to the officers and men composing the garrison of the post of Fort Laramie on the Oregon route, for the same period of time as was allowed by the sixth section of the act of third of March, 1853, to the officers and men of the two companies of regiment of mounted riflemen that garrisoned Fort Laramie, and that the provisions of the same section of the same act be also extended to the officers and men composing the escort to the Mexican Boundary Commission, while they were serving as such escort.

Fifteenth, which was to add to the bill several sections, commonly called the retired list bill, which has heretofore passed the Senate. It will be found at length in the proceedings of yesterday.

Nineteenth, which was to add the bill which had already passed the Senate, for the increase of the pay of the officers and men of the Army, and which will be found in the proceedings of yesterday.

The third amendment, which the committee recommend the House to agree to, with an amendment, was to insert:

For purchase of a site and construction of an arsenal at Benicia, California, $93,485.

The amendment which the committee recommend to that amendment is to strike out "$93,485" and insert "$33,900."

The tenth amendment, which the committee recommend the House to agree to, with an amendment, was to insert:

For completing the Mendota and Big Sioux river road, in accordance with the estimates of the Secretary of War, $52,475 68, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The amendment to it, which the committee recommend, is to strike out "$52,475 68," and insert "$25,000."

The twelfth amendment was to insert:

Sec. —. And be it further enacted, That the amount which may be found necessary to pay, under the act of 27th March, 1854, to the widows and orphans of the United States troops who perished by the recent disaster to the steamship San Francisco, be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. And the proper accounting officers of the Treasury Department be, and they are hereby, authorized and directed to cause the balance due on the books of the Treasury on account of advance of payment of the United States Army, whose widows and children may be entitled to the benefits of the second section of the said act of the 27th March, 1854.

The committee recommend the House to agree to it with an amendment, to strike out the words printed in italics.

The sixteenth amendment was to add:

Sec. —. And be it further enacted, That the act approved September 28, 1850, entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," the act approved March 23, 1852, entitled "An act to make land warrants assignable, and for other purposes," and the act approved February 23, 1853, entitled "An act to continue half pay to certain widows and orphans," shall not be so construed as to deprive any widow of the benefits therein granted for the services of the husband, though she may have married again: Provided, That the applicant is a widow at the time of making the claim.

The amendment with which the committee recommend the House to agree to it, was to add at the end:

Provided, That such party shall not receive a pension during coverture.

The amendments, from their disagreement to which the committee recommend the House to recede, were the following:

Fifth, which was to insert:

For the payment of claims adjudicated by the board of Army officers appointed by the Secretary of War under the sixth section of the act of August 31, 1852, $129,885 23.

Eighth, which was to insert appropriations to carry out various treaties made with Indian tribes since the passage of the Indian appropriation bill.

The seventeenth, which was to add:

And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to receive, and cause to be placed on the files of his Department, such additional muster-rolls of the battalion of volunteers commanded by Lieutenant Colonel J. C. Fremont, in California, duly authenticated by the proper officers, as have not heretofore been received and filed, and to cause such corrections of the muster-rolls to be made in regard to the periods of enlistment and terms of service, and the omission of names of the members of said battalion, as upon satisfactory proof he may deem right and proper, and, as far as practicable, to correspond with the pay-rolls of Major P. B. Reading, paymaster of said battalion, with respect to the period of service, so that all who have served in the military service of the United States in California during the late war with Mexico, whether under command of naval or military officers, may be entitled to all the benefits of all the acts of Congress providing for the enrollment of volunteers in the Mexican war, provided that no payment shall be made in consequence of this section beyond the sum heretofore appropriated.

The twentieth, which was to add:

And be it further enacted, That in the event that the Secretary of War shall deem it inconsistent with the interests of the military service to furnish a sufficient portion of the military buildings at Fort Leavenworth for the use of the territorial government of Kansas, the sum of $25,000 shall be, and in that contingency hereby is, appropriated for the erection of public buildings for the use of the Legislature of the Territory of Kansas, to be expended under the directions of the Governor of said Territory.

The twenty-first, which was to add:

And be it further enacted, That the sums appropriated by the act of March 3, 1849, for the removal and subsistence of the Menomonee, and for the establishment of a manual labor school, &c., for them, and now remaining in the Treasury, together with the sums for pay of a miller, heretofore appropriated, be paid to or expended for the benefit of said Menomonee Indians, according to the stipulations of said supplementary and amendatory articles.

The report was concurred in.

PRINTING SENATE DEBATES.

Mr. BROWN. I now ask the Senate to take up the resolution which I introduced yesterday, in reference to the publication of the proceedings of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the resolution will be taken up.

Mr. CHASE. I object.

The PRESIDENT. The resolution is as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to the proprietors of the Union, National Intelligencer, and Sentinel, for publishing the debates and proceedings of the Senate for the last and present Congress, up to the conclusion of the present session, at the rate of $4 50 per column: Provided, That neither of the said journals which may have already been paid for any portion of the above service, shall be again paid for the same.

Mr. CHASE. I object to the consideration of that resolution.

Mr. BROWN. On what ground?

Several SENATORS. It is in order to take it up.

Mr. CHASE. If it is in order, I, of course, cannot object.

Mr. BROWN. The resolution was introduced yesterday—that is, the congressional yesterday; for this congressional day commenced at eight o'clock. It was introduced before the last adjournment.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair is of the opinion that it is in order.

Mr. CHASE. I will ask the Senator from Mississippi to explain to me the resolution. Does it provide for the payment for the publication of any speeches printed at any time?

Mr. BROWN. It does not provide for the payment of those which have already been paid for. It does not provide for double payment, of course.

Mr. CHASE. These papers have not been the regular reporters of the Senate. They have printed such speeches of Senators as they thought fit to print; and the proposition of my friend from Mississippi is to pay them so much per column for what they thought fit to print. That being the case, I move to insert the words "National Era," which paper has given a much larger circulation than the others to the speeches of Senators; and upon the amendment, I ask for the yeas and nays.

On the question of ordering the yeas and nays, only six Senators rose in the affirmative.

Mr. CHASE. I wish to say a word in respect to the amendment. The proposition presented by the resolution is to pay three of the political papers of this city for the printing of such speeches as they have thought fit to publish from time to time. Whatever speeches of members of the Senate those papers have published are to be paid for at $4 50 per column. They have given a circulation of some two or three thousand to those speeches. The National Era has a circulation of over twenty-five thousand subscribers, and the speeches which it has published have gone to that number of people. If there is any reason whatever for paying any paper of this city for printing the speeches of members of the Senate, it applies doubly to that paper. All that I ask—and I trust the Senate will give us at least that open expression of their determination—is the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered and taken—yeas 9, nays 26; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Chase, Fessenden, Fish, Foot, Gillette, Rockwell, Seward, Sumner, and Wade—9.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Bell, Benjamin, Bright, Brodhead, Brown, Butler, Cass, Dawson, Dodge of Wisconsin, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Evans, Geyer, Houston, Hunter, Jones of Iowa, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, Norris, Pettit, Stuart, Toombs, Toucey, and Welles—26.

So the amendment was rejected, and the question recurred on the resolution.

Mr. ADAMS. I cannot vote for that resolution. I am not disposed to consume the time of the Senate in giving my reasons why I cannot. I only wish to say this: The resolution proposes to go back to the last session of Congress and pay for any speeches that may have been published in these papers during the last session, as well as this. I make it a rule that no man shall make me his debtor without my consent, nor shall he make this Government his debtor, so far as my vote is concerned, without the consent of the authority authorized to bind the Government. These papers have published a portion of the proceedings, a portion of the speeches, doubtless the most interesting, and such as they thought proper to select; but, sir, if you go back and pay them, why not pay every other paper in the United States which has published any of the speeches or proceedings of Congress? All the other papers of the country are publishing a portion of them; would there not be as much propriety and as much justice in paying other papers which receive nothing from the Government, as to pay those which are receiving large contracts and large benefits from the Government? I cannot see the justice of the resolution, and shall not vote for it.

Mr. BRIGHT. The price proposed to be paid by the resolution is very low. It will be money well expended; but I shall not occupy time by talking on it.

Mr. ADAMS. I ask for the yeas and nays upon it.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TOOMBS. This is the most extraordinary proposition I have ever known in this body. Here are papers in the city of Washington which print what speeches they like for party uses, and leave out the rest, and the Senate is called on to pay them. It is absolutely outrageous.

Mr. SEWARD. Each of the papers prints the speeches which it likes; and as they are different in tastes, most of the speeches get printed; and if we had adopted the amendment of the Senator from Ohio, we should have had the whole of them. But I am for the resolution even without that amendment. The seat of Government is away from any commerce. There is no business but the public business to support a newspaper. The resolution is proper.

Mr. CHASE. I proposed to insert the National Era for the purpose of testing the principle, not because I intended to vote for the resolution, if it was so amended. I agree with the Senator from Georgia in his estimate of the character of the proposition.

Mr. TOOMBS. I ask to have my name recorded in favor of the Era. If you give to one, give to all.

Mr. BROWN. Let it be done.

Mr. TOOMBS. I want to vote to put the Era on the list.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair will observe that the rule requires unanimous consent to do that.

Mr. ADAMS. I object.

Mr. BROWN. The resolution, though submitted by myself, was drawn up by the Senator from Maryland, [Mr. PEARCE,] now absent, who was compelled to leave the Chamber last evening. He put the resolution into my hand, and asked me to offer it, which I did. I approved it to this extent, at least, that it seemed to me to be just towards all parties, taking in the Sentinel, Union, and Intelligencer. I think if one ought to be paid, all ought to be paid.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Allen, Bell, Benjamin, Bright, Brodhead, Brown, Cass, Douglas, Fish, Foot, Houston, Hunter, James, Pettit, Rusk, Seward, Toucey, and Welles—18.

NAYS—Messrs. Adams, Atchison, Bayard, Chase, Clay, Dodge of Wisconsin, Dodge of Iowa, Evans, Fessenden, Fitzpatrick, Geyer, Gillette, Jones of Iowa, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, Mason, Rockwell, Slidell, Stuart, Sumner, Toombs, and Wade—22.

So the resolution was rejected.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MALLORY, from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855, reported:

That they had met the conferees on the part of the House of Representatives, and, after full and free conference, had been unable to agree, and they report the bill, with the amendments, back to the Senate.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, the Senate insisted on their amendments, and asked another conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was

And Mr. MALLORY, Mr. BRIGHT, and Mr. GEYER were appointed.

ROSALIE CAXILLO.

On motion by Mr. ADAMS, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill from the House of Representatives for the relief of Rosalie Caxillo.

It proposes to direct a warrant to be issued to her for a quarter section of land, to be located on any land of the Government subject to private entry in the Augusta land district, Mississippi.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

BOUNTY LANDS.

House bill to repeal the first proviso of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act granting bounty lands to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," approved September 28, 1850, was read, and ordered to a second reading.

Mr. CHASE. Let that be considered now.

The bill was read a second time by unanimous consent, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. STUART. I will ask the Senator from Iowa if he knows what is the substance of that proviso?

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I do, for I have examined the law. It prohibits any member of Congress, who was such in 1850, when the law was passed, from taking the benefits of the act. There were a great number of colonels, majors, and generals in the Congress of 1850, when the law was passed, and they wished to be very patriotic, and they excluded themselves from the benefits of it. This allows them to take its benefits.

Mr. STUART. I think it is right. They are the poorest paid persons that we have under the Government.

Mr. BRODHEAD. This bill is entirely right; but I want to add two other sections to it for the extension of the bounty land laws.

Several SENATORS. Oh, no!

Mr. BROWN. The bill will be lost if we do that.

Mr. BRODHEAD. Gentlemen were so anxious to pass them some time ago, that I thought I would give them an opportunity to do it now; but I hear "Oh, no!" "Oh, no!" all over the Chamber.

Mr. STUART. It will cause the bill to be lost.

Mr. BRODHEAD. They would pass the House; but, if it is contrary to the sense of the Senate to offer them, I shall not do it.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

SOUTHERN BOUNDARY OF NEW MEXICO.

The bill from the House of Representatives declaring the southern boundary of New Mexico, was read, and ordered to a second reading.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I ask for its consideration now.

The bill was read a second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to direct that, until otherwise provided by law, the territory acquired under the Gadsden treaty, shall be incorporated into the Territory of New Mexico, and be subject to all its laws.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

EXTRA COMPENSATION.

The joint resolution from the House, making appropriation for the payment of those entitled to the benefits of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed August 3, 1854, voting extra compensation to pages, folders, and others, was read twice, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WALKER. I move to amend by adding an additional resolution:

And be it further resolved, That there be paid to the laborers in the Capitol ground, for the present fiscal year, twenty per cent upon the amount now allowed them by law in addition thereto.

Mr. STUART. I hope the Senate will not agree to the amendment. It seems to me we had better let the House take their own subjects by themselves.

Mr. JONES, of Iowa. These men stand out in rain and snow. They do hard work, and are exposed to every kind of weather. I hope the Senate will agree to the amendment.

The amendment was rejected—ayes eight, noes not counted.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

A. S. LAUGHERY.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of House bill for the relief of A. S. Laughery.

It proposes to direct that upon its being made to appear to the Commissioner of Pensions by sufficient proof, to be judged of by him, that Laughery served as a clerk in the Commissary Department of the United States Army in Mexico, during the late war with that nation, it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Pensions to issue to him a land warrant for such an amount of acres (according to the time of the service proved) as he would have been entitled to under existing laws, if he had served the same time in the Army of the United States in that war.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

HON. JARED W. WILLIAMS.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I rise to a privileged question. It will be remembered that this morning, some hours since, the report which had been made from the Committee on the Judiciary upon the right of the gentleman from New Hampshire to his seat as a Senator from New Hampshire was acted upon. That Senator, in feeble health, left the body last night, but before doing so, consulted with me upon the subject as to the possibility of the question coming up. I told him that I thought there was no possibility of it whatever. He left with me the request to state, if it should come up, that he desired to be heard upon it. I now move a reconsideration of the vote in that case. I think it is but fair that we should reconsider it, to give him an opportunity to state the grounds upon which he claims the seat. Surely no more courteous member has ever occupied a seat in this body than he is, and I trust the motion will prevail.

Mr. SEWARD. I desire to inquire whether the motion is made with the expectation of considering the subject now?

Mr. COOPER. There is not time enough for that.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. That will be a matter for the Senate to decide. I could not have discharged my duty and obligation to my friend, after what I stated to him, unless I had made the motion.

Mr. BRIGHT. I hope it will not be regarded as discourteous to object to that motion. We have less than an hour and a half of time to do a great deal of business in. Fifteen minutes are worth a great deal to the Senate. I hope the Senate will not reconsider the vote.

Mr. BAYARD. I made the motion to consider the report last night, after consultation with several members of the committee, under what I conceived a sense of duty to the Senate. Having performed that duty, if it is the wish of the Senate to reconsider the vote, if they think it proper that the gentleman who represents the State of New Hampshire should be heard, I have no objection to interpose. I have performed my duty. I am perfectly satisfied with any disposition of the matter the Senate chooses to make.

Mr. WALKER. Suppose this vote should be reconsidered, is there the least probability that the Senate will reverse a decision made as solemnly as it was in the case of Mr. Phelps? I think not. The motion to reconsider, therefore, will only procrastinate the period when the same decision must inevitably be had; and at this late period of the session, without entertaining any but the most kindly feeling for the honorable gentleman from New Hampshire, I should regret to see the vote reconsidered.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I apprehend that there are different facts in this case from those in the one indicated by the Senator from Wisconsin. I trust the motion to reconsider will prevail, and that we shall, at least, allow our friend who is about to leave us to be heard.

Mr. WELLER. The Senator from New Hampshire desires to be heard upon this question. I shall be prepared to vote to reconsider, because I do not believe in passing judgment against him at three or four o'clock in the morning, without allowing him an opportunity to be heard. As the Senator from Iowa says, he desires to be heard, and I shall certainly vote for the reconsideration.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I desire for him that he should state the grounds upon which he claims a seat as a Senator from New Hampshire. I am sure he desires to do so.

Mr. BRIGHT. The grounds have already been stated by the Judiciary Committee very ably in their report.

Mr. BUTLER. The report had better be read.

Mr. BRIGHT. It would be a useless waste of time.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. That report has never been seen by Senators. It was printed very late last night, or certainly it had not been laid upon our tables before.

Mr. BUTLER. It was printed yesterday morning.

The PRESIDENT. Does any Senator desire the report to be read?

Several SENATORS. Oh, no.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa, called for the yeas and nays on the motion to reconsider; and they were ordered.

Mr. MASON. I shall vote for the motion to reconsider, although I have entire confidence in the Judiciary Committee. I, for one, must admit I have not seen their report. I have no doubt it will reach the case; but the business which has pressed upon us for the last twenty-four hours has precluded me from examining it. The honorable gentleman was a Senator, and represented the State until the report was made; and it is enough for me that he asks for the reconsideration, so that he may be heard.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 19, nays 16; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Atchison, Bayard, Bell, Brodhead, Butler, Chase, Dawson, Dodge of Wisconsin, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Evans, Fitzpatrick, Houston, Johnson, Jones of Iowa, Mallory, Mason, Norris, and Weller—19.

NAYS—Messrs. Allen, Benjamin, Bright, Cooper, Fish, Gillette, Hunter, James, Jones of Tennessee, Pratt, Rockwell, Seward, Stuart, Thompson of Kentucky, Toombs, and Wade—16.

So the motion to reconsider was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WELLER in the chair.) The report is now before the Senate.

Mr. PETTIT. In view of the shortness of the session, and the necessity of passing a few private bills, and one especially which my friend from Iowa has here, I move to postpone the further consideration of the subject until December next.

Several SENATORS. No! no!

Mr. PETTIT. Senators say "no! no!" and, under other circumstances, I should say no; but I would rather we should be at the expense of the gentleman coming here next year, than consume time now with hearing his speech, which will occupy the residue of the session. I make the motion to postpone.

Mr. CHASE. I wish simply to say that I voted for the reconsideration because some of the gentlemen in charge of the report voted for it. The Senator who is in charge of it thinks the public interest will not suffer by extending the courtesy to a gentleman who has been associated with us in this Chamber, and I should be one of the last to fail to give him that courtesy.

Mr. PRATT. I am willing to let them assume the responsibility of the probability of defeating some of the appropriation bills by the extension of a courtesy to our friend; but I cannot assume it.

Mr. CLAY. I will state to the Senate that they need not be apprehensive of losing any of the appropriation bills, unless the House should conclude not to pass them at all, for I am very sure that they will either not pass any, except the civil and diplomatic bill, or the session will have to be extended. On behalf of the Committee on Enrolled Bills, I now say that it will be impossible to compare the bills by twelve o'clock. We have just finished the civil and diplomatic appropriation bill, and have not touched the Army, Navy, or Post Office bill.

The motion to postpone was not agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WELLER.) The question is on concurring in the report of the committee.

Mr. ATCHISON. I move that the gentleman from New Hampshire have leave to state his case to the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not intend to say a word upon the subject. If I were to do so, I should have to go into a minute statement of facts, not altogether agreeable to my feelings. I therefore ask that the report may be read, and let that be the simple language of the committee.

The report was read. It was made by Mr. BUTLER, and is as follows:

The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the following preamble and resolution of the Senate, have had the same under consideration, and report:

Whereas, the Hon. Jared W. Williams was appointed by his Excellency the Governor of New Hampshire, in the recess of the Legislature of that State, to fill a vacancy in the Senate of the United States, which had happened by the death of the Hon. Charles G. Atherton, a Senator, whose term of service would have continued till the 4th of March, 1859; and whereas it is understood that since that temporary appointment was made the Legislature of New Hampshire has been convened at their regular session, and has adjourned to the last Wednesday of May next, without filling such vacancy, and that said State still claims a right of representation under said appointment, which the appointee is not at liberty to surrender by his act without the action of the Senate: at his request, therefore,

Resolved, That the subject be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, to inquire into the facts connected with it, and to make such report as they deem proper, to enable the Senate to determine whether the right of representation under said appointment has expired.

Under this resolution the committee are required to inquire into the facts connected with the case, and to make such report as they deem proper, to enable the Senate to determine whether the right of representation under said appointment has expired.

As the question to be determined must depend, in a great measure, on the proceedings of the Legislature and constitution of New Hampshire, the committee submit the following as a part of their report, having a bearing on the case:

COMMUNICATION FROM THE GOVERNOR TO THE LEGISLATURE.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have signed all the bills and resolutions which you have passed the present session, and presented for my approval, (except the bills and resolutions which I have returned to the House of Representatives, with my objection thereto,) and having been informed by a joint committee of both branches of the Legislature that you have finished the business before you, and are ready to adjourn, by the authority vested in me I do hereby adjourn the Legislature to the last Wednesday of May next. N. B. BAKER.

COUNCIL CHAMBER, July 15, 1854.

Constitution of New Hampshire—page 23.

"The Senate and House shall assemble every year on the first Wednesday of June, and at such other times as they may judge necessary; and shall dissolve and be dissolved seven days next preceding the said first Wednesday of June, and shall be styled the General Court of New Hampshire."

From the language of the Governor's communication to the Legislature, it seems to have been his judgment that the session had closed; and from the language of the constitution, it would appear that it will have terminated on the day mentioned, as by another provision of the constitution, the Governor on the same day is required to dissolve the Legislature. In this view of the subject, in proprio vigore, the Legislature had no power of assembling from the time of its adjournment, as announced by the Governor, until the last Wednesday of May next, when its existence terminated.

There was a power in the Governor, should the general welfare require it, to call the Legislature together, as an existing body. But when so called together, what would have been the character of such a meeting? Would it not have been a distinct session, carrying with its acts and doings all the incidents of a separate session? Such would seem to be a fair inference. This being conceded, then it would follow, that the late Legislature did adjuvare sine die, in the legal import of the term. If this is a legitimate conclusion, this case, cannot in any particular, be distinguished from that decided by the Senate in the case of the Hon. Samuel S. Phelps, a Senator from Vermont, and the committee refer to that case as the authority for their conclusion in the case under consideration.

In response to the resolution, the committee are of opinion that "the right of representation under the appointment has expired."

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that the Speaker had signed the following enrolled bills:

An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending 30th June, 1855, and for other purposes;

An act for the relief of J. C. Buckles, of Louisville, Kentucky;

An act to graduate and reduce the price of the public lands to actual settlers and cultivators;

An act for the relief of Patrick Gass;

An act for the relief of Ira Call, of Huron county, Ohio;

An act to increase the pay of the rank and file of the Army, and encourage enlistments;

An act for the relief of Thomas C. Green;

An act for the relief of Jacob Baker, of Sandusky city, Ohio;

An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to settle the accounts of Thomas Jordan, assistant quartermaster in the United States Army;

THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE.

THE OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS, PUBLISHED BY JOHN C. RIVES, WASHINGTON, D. C.

33d CONGRESS, 1st Session.

MONDAY, AUGUST 7, 1854.

NEW SERIES...No. 139.

An act for the relief of Daniel C. Cash and Giles U. Ellis;

An act for the relief of the representatives of John Rice Jones, deceased;

An act for the relief of Jonathan Pierce; and
An act to extend the right of preemption over unsurveyed lands in Minnesota, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore signed the above named enrolled bills.

MAIL STEAMER BILL, ETC.

The message also announced that the House of Representatives had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers, and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855, and also that they insisted on their disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855; agreed to the further conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on said bill, and had appointed Mr. PHELPS, Mr. BENSON, and Mr. ROWE, managers at the same on their part.

Also, that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the bill making appropriations for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works heretofore commenced under the authority of law.

OCEAN MAIL SERVICE.

The Senate proceeded to consider their amendment to the bill making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855, disagreed to by the House of Representatives; and, on motion by Mr. HUNTER, the Senate insisted on the amendment, and asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

On motion by Mr. HUNTER, it was ordered that the committee of conference on the part of the Senate, be appointed by the PRESIDENT pro tempore; and Mr. STUART, Mr. JAMES, and Mr. TOOMBS were appointed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. BENJAMIN, from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works heretofore commenced under the authority of law, made a report recommending

That the Senate do recede from its second amendment.

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the third, fourth, fifth, and seventh amendments of the Senate, and agree thereto.

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the first amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto, with the following amendment: Strike out the words "one hundred," and in lieu thereof insert "seventy."

That the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the sixth amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto with amendments as follows: In line seven of said amendment, strike out the word "fifty," and in lieu thereof insert the word "forty," and strike out lines nine, ten, and eleven of said Senate amendment.

And that the House of Representatives do recede from its disagreement to the eighth amendment of the Senate, and agree thereto, with an amendment as follows: Add at the end thereof the words "or rejection."

Mr. BENJAMIN. I will state in a few words the purport of the amendments. The first amendment made by the Senate was to increase the appropriation "for continuing the improvement of the Des Moines rapids, in the Mississippi river," from $18,000 to $100,000. The committee of conference have agreed to make that appropriation $70,000, the Senate yielding $30,000, and the House $52,000.

The second amendment was to insert the words "including the amount expended prior to August 30, 1852," after the word "harbor," in the clause:

For continuing the removal of the rock at Hell Gate and Diamond reef, New York harbor, $30,000.

The committee recommend the Senate to recede from that amendment.

The third amendment was to insert after the clause "for continuing the reopening of a communication between the Albemarle Sound, in North Carolina, and the Atlantic ocean, $50,000," the words:

In addition to the sum of $50,000 appropriated by the act of August 30, 1852, which sum is hereby reappropriated for a breakwater, or such other works as the Secretary of War may deem best adapted to accomplish that object.

The committee recommend that the House recede from its disagreement to that amendment.

The fourth amendment was an appropriation of $44,000 for the improvement of the Brazos river, Texas. The House abandon their objection to that. The fifth amendment was one explaining the appropriation for Newark harbor, so as to make it read:

For continuing the improvement of the harbor at Newark, and Passaic river below the town of Newark and of Newark bay, New Jersey, $25,000.

The House recede from their disagreement to that. The sixth amendment was:

For the surveys of the harbors of San Pedro, Santa Barbara, Monterey, San Francisco, Humboldt, and Trinity, in the State of California, and the rivers Sacramento, San Joaquin, and Colorado; and the harbor of Apalachicola, Florida, $50,000.

For survey for a breakwater at Grace's Point, Block Island, $5,000.

The committee of conference have agreed to make the appropriation for California $40,000 instead of $50,000, and strike out the $5,000 for Grace's Point.

The seventh amendment was the one which required all persons who were charged with this work to give security for the sum committed to their care. It was to strike the proviso out of the following section:

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That, whenever the Secretary of War shall invite proposals for any works, or for any material or labor for any works, there shall be separate proposals and separate contracts for each work, and also for each class of material or labor for each work; and he shall report to Congress at its next session all the bids, with the names of the bidders: And provided, That all persons entrusted with the disbursement of the funds appropriated for the works named in this act, shall be required to give bond and ample security for the faithful application of the same.

The House has receded from its disagreement to that amendment. The eight amendment was to add at the end of the bill the following:

And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be and he is hereby, authorized to contract with the proper parties for the purchase of Grant's pass, near the entrance of Mobile harbor, on the mail route from New Orleans to Mobile; and that he report said contract to Congress at its next session for approval.

The committee of conference recommend to add the words "or rejection;" so as to let the next Congress have power over that appropriation; and, as thus amended, the House recede from their disagreement.

This is the scope of all the amendments, and it will be seen that the Senate has carried almost the whole of them. I therefore hope the Senate will concur in the report.

The report was concurred in.

HON. JARED W. WILLIAMS.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the Committee on the Judiciary in relation to the right of Mr. WILLIAMS to a seat in the Senate.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I feel obliged to the Senate for the courtesy they are disposed to extend to me in this case this morning. Although it is unexpectedly sprung upon me, I deem it my duty to make a brief statement of the grounds on which New Hampshire claims a right to representation on this floor. I do not believe that I could leave the case, in justice to the State, or in justice to myself, without doing so. No one could be more averse to taking up any of the time of the Senate, at a period of the session when there is so little of it remaining, and so much business of importance to the country to be transacted; but I had been led to suppose, from an intimation derived from a reliable source, that this report, coming in at the heel of the session, would not be called up unless New Hampshire should feel it to be her duty and her interest to call it up and present further facts. I, however, made a provisional arrangement before I left the Senate last night, in the event it was called up, that the claim of New Hampshire should be stated, if an opportunity were given, and that time for that purpose would be requested; but, on receiving assurances of the character that I have named, I left, supposing it would not be taken up.

Mr. CASS. I hope the gentleman will allow me to interrupt him. I think the Senate must see that it is impossible to consider this subject properly now. We have but little time left in which to dispose of our legislative business. I therefore suggest that this subject be allowed to go over. I move to postpone it until next session.

Mr. CLAY. A vote has already been taken, I suggest to the Senator from Michigan, upon that question, and it has been voted down. I will state, moreover, to him what I stated to the Senate in his absence; that it is impossible, without protracting the session, to get through with the appropriation bills. They cannot even be read over by twelve o'clock.

Mr. ATCHISON. I renew the motion to postpone the further consideration of this subject to the second week in December.

Mr. CASS. I suggest to the Senator to move that it lie on the table.

Mr. MASON. Say the first week.

Mr. ATCHISON. I have no objection to saying the first Monday in December. I make the motion for the reason briefly suggested by the Senator from Michigan, that if it is intended to transact any other business, we have but an hour and ten minutes to do it in.

Mr. SEBASTIAN called for the yeas and nays on the motion, and they were ordered.

Mr. BAYARD. The reason why I must vote against the postponement is, that I can see no reason for it. I am perfectly willing that the gentleman from New Hampshire shall be heard. I do not see that it will at all interfere with the business, for I understand from the Senator from Alabama [Mr. CLAY] that we must postpone the adjournment of Congress, probably until to-morrow. If we do that, there is ample time to consider this report, because, if the object of postponing the adjournment is to give time to go through the enrolled bills, we must necessarily abstain from passing any more bills this session, or we shall be laboring under the same evil to-morrow that we do now.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I am opposed to the postponement, from no unkindness to the Senator from New Hampshire; but if we have not settled this question by the whole action of the Senate for the last twenty years, we never shall, never can settle it. I do not believe there are ten Senators on this floor who believe that the gentleman is entitled to a seat here; and I am not willing to postpone the question, send him home, to come back here at the next session with mileage, and have all the difficulties brought up again.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ought, perhaps, to make a suggestion in answer to the Senator from Tennessee. I have stated that the only object I had in having the subject considered, was, that the State of New Hampshire might, if she thought proper, have an opportunity of presenting testimony which the Committee on the Judiciary have not had—testimony which would give an entirely different character to the adjournment of the Legislature from what they seem to have assumed in their report it has. The Senator from Tennessee seems to apprehend that this case involves a question that has once been decided. It involves the question which was presented as to the right of the Vermont representation by the Hon. Samuel S. Phelps, who claimed a representation here for his State under an appointment made by the Governor of Vermont during the recess of the Legislature. The same right of representation is now claimed, by virtue of a similar appointment, made by the Governor of New Hampshire by that State. Twenty-six Senators, not a majority of the whole Senate, voted against and defeated the claim of Vermont; but that action, although it controls for a time the rights of Vermont, does not deprive her of her constitutional right of representation, or destroy in any degree the right which New Hampshire claims to representation on this floor. Claims under the Constitution cannot be adjudicated in that way, even by a unanimous vote of the Senate. As well may we say that the principles involved in the river and harbor bill, since the bill passed against our votes, are settled, and forever adjudicated, and as often as they arise in other bills, we are therefore precluded from voting against them, as to say that those who in principle voted for the rights of Vermont shall give up their principles, and vote against the rights of New Hampshire, in consequence of a former decision.

No, sir; as often as cases arise which raise questions involving the same constitutional right, it is their duty and privilege to reiterate and sustain these principles by their vows and votes. The first question, then, for consideration in this case, was properly raised by the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, in his minority report, when he says "the question depends on the construction given to the words 'until the next meeting of the Legislature,'" contained in the Constitution, whether they are limited in their application to the appointing power, or have reference also to the duration or term of office conferred by the appointment. The report of the committee which denied the Vermont right of representation, gave to Vermont that right during the session of her Legislature next succeeding an Executive appointment. They said that, for the purpose of making an election, the Legislature had the whole session to consult and deliberate, and act upon it; and that the seat of the appointee was not vacated, his appointment did not expire until the legislative session expired, and was closed. Finding fault, therefore, as New Hampshire did, with the report which excluded Judge Phelps from his seat, they found in the last clause of that report enough to give her the right of representation, as she believed, until her legislative session expires, and to induce her to instruct me not to leave my seat here until that question was raised. I have raised it with extreme delicacy, and against my own wishes and feelings. However much I shall always remember, and be grateful for, the kind courtesy with which I have been treated here, I have long refused every effort an extension of my term of duty here, believing for that I had holier and higher duties, arising out of my delicate and failing health, and my family, which required that I should attend to them. But I have not felt at liberty to omit to do anything to save to New Hampshire the right of representation here; for she believes she is constitutionally entitled to it.

But I am not vain enough to stand here and undertake to detain the Senate in the discussion of that question, thinking that I can throw any new light upon that part of the case. It has been ably discussed in an argument by the honorable Mr. Phelps, which we believe has never been answered. We believe it to be unanswerable, and we believe that if the case is revised, the decision will some time be reversed.

But we do not stand there, and my duty at this time has not led me to ask that the consideration of the report may be delayed, for the purpose which the honorable Senator from Tennessee suggests, that I might receive more pay. I can say to that Senator that I shall not appear here for more pay. If New Hampshire feels an interest in this question, enough to present the facts in regard to the adjournment of our Legislature, which will satisfy the Senate that, under the decision already made, she is entitled to representation here, it is her right to claim it. If she does not do that, I can say to the honorable Senator that I claim no pay, no right of representation. I am anxious to disabuse the minds of those who entertain the opinion, if there be such, that I am a hanger-on here for place and pay. I disclaim any such purpose. I despise it; but I also despise that policy which would induce me to leave my seat without a fair and proper expression, on the part of the Senate, in regard to the rights of New Hampshire. That I claim for my State, not for myself. I have claimed it under the most reasonable circumstances which I could. It came up here late. The committee have availed themselves of such facts in regard to the adjournment as they have been able to get. A copy of the Journal was produced as early as possible, showing an unconditional adjournment. The copy which is in the report of the Judiciary Committee shows that the regular session of the New Hampshire Legislature commenced last June; and that it was continued regularly, with short adjournments, until they adjourned last month to the last Wednesday of May next—to a day certain and definite.

The record under the seal of the State shows this fact—and an absolute unconditional adjournment to this day, the last legislative day of the year in which the present members of the State Legislature can legislate before their legislative functions are required to be dissolved by the Governor. On that record, under the decision made, New Hampshire believes her right to representation under the appointment of the Executive is as perfect as it has ever been. There seems nothing to be supplied, or which can be rendered more clear by argument. A court commences its regular session to-day, and for its convenience adjourns from day to day, or for weeks or months, not extending its adjournments into a session established by law, the business done at the different periods of adjournment is regarded as of one and the same session, and in law but one day. So the General Court of New Hampshire, as their Legislature is called, adjourns from time to time, as their business may require; and unless it adjourns over to the next session fixed by law, all the adjournments are but a continuation of the same session, are regarded and described as of the same session, and are so in fact. It was so admitted by representatives in our last Legislature, in their debates; and to hold their right of representation here under the Executive appointment, according to the decision already made by the Senate. Indeed, it is difficult to understand how we can go beyond the record of an absolute adjournment to a fixed day, to impeach the validity of that adjournment by other transactions disconnected with it, and of which I am satisfied your committee have taken an erroneous view, occasioned probably from not having all the facts connected with the transaction before them. If time is given, the State, I am confident, will present sufficient facts to satisfy even the committee, that the Legislature of New Hampshire has not, as they say in their report, adjourned sine die, but its organization is kept up; and is continued in full life and being, with power and purposes of action, on the last Wednesday of May next.

Mr. COOPER. I desire to ask one question for information. Is not the mode of adjournment adopted by the Legislature of New Hampshire at its late session the ordinary method of final adjournment? Do they not always adjourn in that way?

Mr. WILLIAMS. They ordinarily adopt that mode of adjournment, but they do not adopt it as a sine die adjournment. The committee are mistaken about the facts in regard to that point, and they must have got them from other sources than the record. The Legislature supposed that the record was the only evidence they need furnish; and under that view they have furnished evidence showing an adjournment to a day certain; but the committee, in consequence, I suppose, of the fact about which the gentleman from Pennsylvania has inquired, that they are in the habit of adjourning to that day, were disposed to regard it as a close of their labors, and an adjournment, as they say, sine die, which is a contradiction of the record. The record shows an adjournment, in the ordinary way, to a day certain.

Mr. COOPER. I desire to inquire of the Senator whether it is not always to a day certain when the adjournment is final?

Mr. WILLIAMS. New Hampshire has considered it a safe and proper way of adjournment to adjourn to a day certain. The Legislature have done so; and the committee seem to have inferred from that circumstance that the business of the Legislature was finished; and they say, in their report, that it appears the business was finished. The business which the Legislature chose to transact at that period was undoubtedly finished so far that they thought it best to adjourn; but they did not say that their business was finished, or that they did not intend to do any business at the adjourned session; but, even if the business was finished, and there was nothing left which they could do at the adjourned session, I apprehend that fact would not, in any way, affect the adjournment made by the Legislature, if their adjournment was with an expectation that there would be more business at the future period. It is like all other adjournments; and in regard to that matter, I do not now wish to trouble the Senate any further than to say that the understanding of that adjournment by the Legislature, which they would be very glad to show, if they show a case here at all, was that it continued their session to the day to which they adjourned, and that that adjournment, like similar adjournments by all other courts, kept their session alive up to the day fixed by the adjournment. A court holds its regular session, if you please, to-day. For its convenience it adjourns from day to day, from week to week, or from month to month; but provided it does not adjourn until the next regular session fixed by law, it is a continuation of the term of the court up to the time to which it adjourns, and in law, and in fact, it is but one day. So the adjournment of the New Hampshire Legislature, which is the general court of the State, so styled, commenced their session on the first Wednesday of June last. They transacted such business as they thought proper from day to day, and from week to week; and under an apprehension that there might be other business before it was safe to adjourn the session without day, or to dissolve or disorganize it, for the purpose of retaining their organization, for the purpose of keeping the session in being for the transaction of business, that they may, whenever they assemble in the same political capacity, officered and organized as they are, proceed to transact business, have thought proper to adjourn to a day certain.

After that proceeding, we suppose that what ever may have been their previous conduct, or their own tacit understanding, or whether they may omit to attend in pursuance of that adjournment or not, has nothing to do with the adjournment, and can in no way impeach its validity. We do not know, in fact, how this matter is to be understood and settled, except by the record. We know of no authority to go beyond the record in order to determine this question. The record shows that the adjournment was nothing but an adjournment to a day certain. We believe that the committee, in saying that the adjournment was conditional, as if the business of the session was finished, and then presuming that the business was finished, and that it was, therefore, an adjournment sine die, have drawn an inference which they would not have done, if they were in possession of all the facts.

My wish is, that the Senate may be possessed of all the facts. I wish the Senate to give the State of New Hampshire an opportunity to present the facts, if they conclude to present them. They will, and they can show them; and I believe, from the information which I have received by letters, that they feel an interest not to be deprived of their constitutional right of representation here. Whether they get it or not, they can show that this adjournment was not a sine die adjournment; that it was not a mere formal or technical adjournment, as seems to be apprehended by the committee; but an adjournment in good faith, in the expectation of transacting business at the time to which they stand adjourned. We supposed, from the information we had from the committee, that the committee believe that to be a material and a controlling fact, and one that would guide them. That is what we claim under this application.

If I had taken any course which would tend to deprive them of an opportunity of showing that, if they desired, it would have been, in my judgment, a dereliction of duty. I have been gratified with the opportunity which has been afforded me of making this statement. If the case could be disposed of in a way which would give the State of New Hampshire an opportunity of showing this, if they desired it, I should feel relieved; I should feel as if the rights of a sovereign State had been at least more respected than they were in the summary decision of their application made at five o'clock this morning. Other gentlemen wish to discuss this matter. Gentlemen who claim this right, which was claimed by Vermont, to be a perfect right of representation for New Hampshire, have said to me that whenever the question came up they wished to discuss it again, and that they should do it with great confidence that the decision then made would be overruled. Whether that may be the action of the Senate or not, I, in justification of the claim made here for New Hampshire, have stated that if the facts in regard to that adjournment be shown, I have perfect confidence that the minds of the Judiciary Committee will be changed. I say this, knowing what their decision was, and it was upon that point that New Hampshire relied rather than upon any change of opinion in the Senate since the decision of Judge Phelps's case.

Mr. BAYARD. The question now is on postponement, and I will confine my remarks to it. The honorable gentleman from New Hampshire asks for the postponement of this matter on two grounds. One is with a view to review the decision of this body made at the present session, after a prolonged argument, in which the majority of the Senate decided the principle which the Judiciary Committee supposed to govern this case. Sir, I am no stickler for precedents in reference to the decision of legislative bodies; but it is evident that the body will not change; the individual members will not change materially during the existing Congress, and therefore there is no probability that any further discussion would enlighten us on that subject, or change a vote in the Senate.

The other ground is, that there are facts to be ascertained. Now, I have been unable to ascertain how any fact which could change the determination of the Senate enters into this case. We have had before us the constitution of New Hampshire. We have had before us the effect of the adjournment—the fact that, by that constitution, the day after that to which the Legislature have adjourned, they are dissolved, of necessity, by the very terms of the constitution. We therefore supposed that, no matter what might be proved, it could not alter the state of the case arising out of the constitution and existing laws of the State.

Further, I may say that, if I am not mistaken, the election in New Hampshire takes place before the fourth Wednesday of May. If that be so, the effect of holding this case over would be that, though the adjournment was to the fourth Wednesday of May, we should allow a representation, which was elected anteriorly, to act on this matter, when the constitution evidently intends that it shall be acted on by one chosen subsequently.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on postponing the further consideration of the subject to the first Monday in December next.

Mr. HOUSTON. I move to amend the motion, so as to postpone until the second Monday in December.

Mr. STUART. I think we have heard about the substance of the statement of the gentleman from New Hampshire, and we had better dispose of the subject now.

Mr. CASS. I suppose there is not a member on this floor who has not looked at the subject, and determined how he will vote. It is therefore a mere question of time.

Mr. HOUSTON. I insist on my motion. The motion was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs on the motion to postpone until the first Monday of December, on which question the yeas and nays were ordered.

The yeas and nays were taken, and resulted—yeas 11 nays 37; as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Atchison, Dodge of Wisconsin, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Houston, Johnson, Jones of Iowa, Mallory, Pettit, Sebastian, and Toombs—11.

NAYS—Messrs. Allen, Bayard, Benjamin, Bright, Brodhead, Brown, Butler, Cass, Chase, Clay, Cooper, Dawson, Evans, Fessenden, Fish, Foot, Geyer, Gillette, Hunter, James, Jones of Tennessee, Mason, Morton, Pearce, Pratt, Rockwell, Rusk, Seward, Slidell, Stuart, Sumner, Thompson of Kentucky, Thomson of New Jersey, Toucey, Wade, Walker, and Weller—37.

So the motion was rejected.

The report of the Committee on the Judiciary was then concurred in.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MALLORY. I desire to submit to the Senate the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, on the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1855. The Senate recede from almost all their amendments except that one touching naval reform, and that is the only difficulty in the way. I submit the report to the Senate for its instructions to the committee.

The Secretary read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend, and do recommend, to their respective Houses, as follows:

That the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives to the eighth amendment of the Senate.

That the Senate recede from its first amendment, and adopt a substitute therefor as follows: That at the navy yard at San Francisco, the pay of the commander shall be $3,500 per annum; one civil engineer, $4,000 per annum; and the pay of the navy agent, who shall discharge the duties of both purser and navy agent, shall be $4,000 per annum.

That the Senate recede from its ninth, thirteenth, fourteenth, and sixteenth amendments.

Mr. HUNTER. It seems that the joint committee have not agreed. The report of the committee of conference is an entire thing, and we cannot concur in part. We must act on the whole or none.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. WELLER in the chair.) On the face of the report there does not seem to be any difficulty at all.

Mr. PEARCE. I understand that the difficulty is in regard to the amendment respecting naval reform. That seems to be an insuperable difficulty in the way of an agreement. In order to bring the matter to a test, I propose that the Senate instruct their conferees to recede from that amendment.

Mr. MALLORY. The Senate has receded from all its amendments upon the call of the House, except this one. That is all I wish to say before the vote is taken.

The question being taken on the motion of Mr. PEARCE, it was agreed to. So it was Ordered, That the conferees on the part of the Senate be instructed to recede from the following amendment of the Senate to the said bill:

Sec. —. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States, within thirty days from the passage hereof, shall assemble a naval board, to consist of three captains, two commanders, and two lieutenants, which board shall investigate the conduct, character, and standing of all the officers of the grades of captains, commanders, lieutenants, passed midshipmen, and masters in the line of promotion; and shall ascertain and report to the Secretary of the Navy, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, every officer of said grades that said board shall deem incompetent or disqualified to discharge promptly his whole duty ashore and afloat. And in every case said board shall report, in two separate classes, such officers as the interests of the service require should be dismissed, and such as should be placed out of the line of promotion, with its reasons for the same: Provided, That upon said board, officers shall not investigate, vote, or report upon officers of a senior grade.

Upon the return of the reports of the board to the Secretary of the Navy, he shall, so far as the President shall approve the same, cause those officers who may be reported for dismissal to be dismissed the service with six months' sea service pay; and those who may be reported for withdrawal from the line of promotion, to be so withdrawn upon pay which shall not be more than three fifths, nor less than one fifth their sea-service pay respectively, to be determined and approved by the President: Provided, That passed midshipmen and masters in the line of promotion so reported in the second class, shall be dropped from the service, and shall thereupon receive one year's sea-service pay.

The said board shall be convened and regulated as the Secretary may direct, and he shall ascertain, in such manner as he may deem just and expedient, the services, standing, and character of the officers of the grades aforesaid, and submit the same to the board for its better information: Provided, That the promotions which may be made in consequence of such dismissals and withdrawals shall reduce the grade of commander to seventy, which shall hereafter be the number of said grade.

Mr. MALLORY. I suppose the report can now be received and acted on. I present it.

The first amendment of the Senate was to insert:

That at the navy-yard at San Francisco the pay of the commanders shall be $3,500 per annum; the pay of one storekeeper, $3,500; one civil engineer, $4,000; one draughtsman, who shall be clerk to engineer, $2,000; one clerk to the storekeeper, $2,000; one navy agent, $4,000; one clerk to navy agent, $2,000.

The committee of conference propose to substitute for it the following:

That at the navy-yard at San Francisco, the pay of the commander shall be $3,500 per annum, one civil engineer, $4,000 per annum; and the pay of the navy agent, who shall discharge the duties of both purser and navy agent, shall be $4,000 per annum.

The eighth amendment of the Senate was to insert:

Navy-yard, San Francisco: For continuing the blacksmith's shop, carpenter's shop, store house, wharf, officers' quarters, and other works, $200,000.

The amendment of the House to this amendment—in which it is proposed that the Senate concur—is to strike out "officers' quarters, and other works."

The amendments from which it is proposed that the Senate recede, are as follows:

The ninth, which was to insert:

And that the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for the establishment of a naval depot on the right bank of the river Mississippi in descending, at the site now owned and held by the United States for that purpose, near the city of New Orleans, and for such buildings and improvements as may be judged necessary for the accommodation of the United States vessels of war in that quarter.

The thirteenth, which was to add:

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the existing law limiting the number of officers of the Navy of the United States, be so far modified as to entitle the officers belonging to the navy of Texas at the time of annexation, to the pay of the officers of the Navy of the United States on leave of absence up to the present time: Provided, The number of such officers shall not exceed eight.

And the sixteenth, which was to add:

And be it further enacted, That naval pursers shall hereafter be styled paymasters; and all laws, rules, and regulations applying to pursers shall apply to them as paymasters: Provided, That this change of name shall not be held to affect their rank, pay, or duties.

GEORGE M. BENTLEY.

On motion by Mr. JONES, of Iowa, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider House bill for the relief of George M. Bentley, of the State of Indiana, the object of which is to direct the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of George M. Bentley, of the State of Indiana, upon the list of invalid pensioners, at the rate of eight dollars per month, from January 1, 1854, and to continue during his natural life.

Bentley was a private in company H, third regiment Indiana volunteers, served in Mexico during the war with that country, and with his company fought gallantly at the battle of Buena Vista. During the first part of the month of November, 1846, his regiment was encamped near Matamoros, upon the Rio Grande. On or about the 10th day of that month, Bentley, with the written permission of the colonel of the regiment, went into the city of Matamoros, and whilst there, by accident, sprained his right ankle. Upon his return to camp in the evening, his ankle was swollen, and he was so disabled by lameness as to be unable to perform military duty for a considerable length of time. Before the limb was wholly restored, he returned to the discharge of his duty; the swelling returned, and continued until incurable ulcers broke out upon the limb. He is now wholly disabled from providing for himself and his family by manual labor. Before entering the service of the United States he was a sound and very robust man. Whilst in the service he was temperate and very attentive to his duties. This claim was submitted to the Pension Office and rejected, for the reason that there was not the testimony of any person who was immediately present when the injury was first received.

No amendment being proposed, the bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

CHEROKEE TREATIES.

Mr. HOUSTON submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States, That the Attorney General of the United States be required to examine the records and proceedings of the different boards of commissioners appointed by the President, to adjudicate claims under the Cherokee treaty of New Echota, made in 1835, and the supplemental articles added in 1836, and report to the Senate at its next session the manner in which those treaties have been carried out and complied with on the part of the two contracting parties, and whether the independence and free action and deliberations of the different boards of commissioners appointed under the seventeenth article of the treaty of 1835, was trespassed upon by instructions issued from the office of Indian Affairs; whether, in the opinion of the Attorney General, those instructions issued to the boards were or were not conformable to the treaties; whether the session of the board was interrupted and broken up at any time by instructions or orders issued from the office of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs; whether any claims were allowed and paid by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs without the adjudication of the board of commissioners; whether the last board of commissioners undertook, after their commission had expired, to annul adjudications previously made, and make other corrections and allowances after their commission had expired; whether the commissioners, without authority of law, appointed agents and sent them into the Cherokee country to value property, allowing them compensation, charging the same to, and paying them out of the funds appropriated to pay claims provided for, under the different articles of the treaty of 1835 and 1836; whether any part of these appropriations had been withheld from the Cherokees, or have been improperly applied; whether, in the opinion of the Attorney General, the said treaty and the supplement have been faithfully, and in good faith carried into execution on the part of the United States, agreeably to the letter and spirit; and whether anything yet remains to be done by the United States fully to comply with her obligations to the Cherokees, growing out of, and provided for by, the treaties of 1817, 1819, and 1835 and 1836; also all treaties affecting the rights of the Cherokees who inhabited and were located in the country west of the Mississippi.

EXTENSION OF THE SESSION TO MONDAY.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had agreed to the resolution of the Senate extending the time for the adjournment of Congress, with an amendment, in which they requested the Senate's concurrence.

The original resolution of the Senate was as follows:

Resolved, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That the time fixed by the resolution of the 1st July for the adjournment of the present session of Congress be, and the same is hereby, extended to Monday next, the 7th instant, at twelve o'clock, m.

The House amended it by striking out all after the word "to," and inserting:

Monday, August 7, at eight o'clock, a. m.: Provided, That no motion other than one to adjourn shall be taken by either House after the hour of four o'clock, p. m., this day.

The amendment was concurred in.

RECIPROCITY TREATY.

The message also announced that the House of Representatives had passed a bill to carry into effect the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, signed on the 5th of June, 1854, in which they requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The bill was read twice by its title; and,

On motion by Mr. MASON, the Senate proceeded to consider it as in Committee of the Whole.

Its object is to authorize the President of the United States, whenever he shall have sufficient evidence that the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain, and the Provincial Parliaments of Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward's Island, shall have passed laws to give full effect to the provisions of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, signed 5th June, 1854, to issue a proclamation declaring that he has such evidence, and thereupon, from the date of his proclamation, the articles enumerated in the treaty, being the growth and produce of Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward's Island, shall be introduced into the United States free of duty, so long as the treaty remains in force, subject, however, to be suspended in relation to the trade of Canada on the conditions mentioned in the fourth article of the treaty, and all other conditions of the treaty.

It also provides that, whenever the Province of New Foundland shall give its consent to the terms of the treaty, and whenever the Legislature thereof, and the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain, pass the necessary laws for that purpose, the enumerated articles may be introduced, free of duty, into the United States from that Province.

Mr. PEARCE. It is not my intention to interpose any parliamentary objection to the passage of this bill, and still less is it my intention to argue against the provisions of the bill. But I am not willing that it shall be passed without making it known publicly that neither the treaty, nor the bill consequent upon it, meets my approbation. I am utterly opposed to them. I wish that to be known.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

MATTHEW JACK.

On motion by Mr. COOPER, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider House bill for the relief of the heirs of Captain Matthew Jack, deceased, which had been reported from the Committee on Revolutionary Claims, with an amendment.

The object of the bill is to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the heirs of Captain Jack, of the Pennsylvania line of the Continental establishment in the revolutionary war one year's extra pay of a captain, as promised by resolves of Congress, together with the interest on the same.

The amendment of the committee, which was to strike out "together with the interest on the same," was agreed to.

ROBERT F. AND LOUISA M'GUIRE.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider House bill "for the relief of Robert F. McGuire and Louisa, his wife, late Louisa Lamy."

It proposes to confirm their title to a certain tract of land in the State of Louisiana, containing four hundred arpents, situate in and being a part of the "Baron de Bastrop grant," being the same tract to which McGuire and wife derived their title from the conveyance of A. Morehouse, dated April 17, 1809; but this grant is to be considered only as a relinquishment of title on the part of the United States to the tract, and not to prejudice the rights of third persons.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

CLERICAL FORCE IN THE LAND OFFICE.

Mr. STUART, by unanimous consent, asked and obtained leave to introduce a joint resolution "to enable the Secretary of the Interior to retain the present force in the General Land Office till the next session of Congress;" which was read twice, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to retain the temporary force now employed in the General Land Office until the next session of the present Congress, to enable him to adapt the land system to the provisions of the graduation act of the present session.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate, and ordered to be engrossed, was read a third time, and passed.

JULIA AIKEN.

On motion by Mr. SUMNER, the bill of the House for the relief of Julia Aiken was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It directs the Secretary of the Interior to pay to Julia Aiken, the only child of William Yool, who died in the naval service of the United States in the year 1801, on her sole and separate receipt, and for her sole use and control, the amount of pension she would have been entitled to receive under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1837, if her claim had been allowed while that act was in force.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

THOMAS AP CATESBY JONES.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask the Senate to take up House bill "for the relief of Thomas Ap Catesby Jones, surety for a former postmaster at Norfolk, Virginia." It was unanimously agreed upon by the Committee on the Judiciary. It is an act of justice.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, considered the bill. It provides that a certain judgment rendered in 1842, against Thomas Ap Catesby Jones and Duncan Robertson, as sureties for Walter F. Jones, formerly postmaster at Norfolk, Virginia, for $4,387 09, on account of the defalcation of the postmaster as such, shall be declared satisfied, in so far as the sureties, or either of them, are liable thereon. It also provides that $2,500 heretofore paid by T. A. C. Jones, through his agent, on the judgment, shall be refunded.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

STATISTICAL INFORMATION.

Mr. MALLORY. I move that the Senate take up for consideration the bill which I introduced a week since, "to amend the act requiring foreign regulations of commerce to be laid annually before Congress," approved the 16th of August, 1842, and for other purposes."

Mr. TOOMBS. I hope that bill will be taken up. It is one which directs the Secretary of State to gather valuable information which will be useful to the country.

Mr. MALLORY. There is a favorable report from the Department of State recommending this bill; and it is important that it should be passed.

Mr. TOOMBS. We ought to do something for the public, when we have been doing so much for private claimants. I hope the motion of the Senator will be agreed to.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

It provides that, in order to enable the Department of State to make the report mentioned in the act of August 16, 1842, at the commencement of every session of Congress, it shall be the duty of the respective ministers, consuls, commercial agents, and other officers of the United States in foreign countries, to procure and transmit to the Department authentic statistical accounts of such countries, and information as to ship-building, shipping, navigation, seamen, tariffs of duties upon exports and imports, pilotage, port dues, and other like charges, harbor regulations, and all laws and regulations relating to trade and commerce, and also as to improvements in the mechanical arts, and in agriculture, and likewise in reference to all other subjects the Department may direct. The reports of the officers are to be made in such manner and form and time as the Department shall prescribe; and when the publication of any such information shall be deemed to be of public utility, the Department may publish it as it may deem best.

To enable the Department to reimburse the officers for expenses, they may necessarily incur, under its authority and instructions, the sum of $20,000 is to be appropriated annually, so long as the act shall remain in force; and it is made the duty of the Secretary of State, with the annual report, to state the particulars of the expenditures, and also to report the names of any of the officers who have been remiss in their duty enjoined by the act.

The President of the United States is to cause to be prepared full and particular statements and tables, from the organization of the Government to the 30th of June, 1854, and of each year, and of each port, district, and State, as nearly as practicable, of the imports and exports, (domestic and foreign,) quantity and value, whence imported or whither exported, the duties thereon when imported into the United States, what entered subject to drawback, debentures paid, goods warehoused, and the number and class of sailing, steam, and all other vessels in foreign, coasting, river, lake, or casual trade, or in whale or cod or mackerel fisheries, the tonnage thereof, and of light-houses, and of the coast survey, and of seamen and boys in each kind of trade, and of marine hospitals and hospital money, and of the post offices and post roads, and of the improvement of rivers and harbors and internal improvements, and of the judiciary, and of the public debt, direct taxes, and of the receipts and expenditures of each branch of the Federal Government, and generally of the agricultural, mineral, and commercial resources of each of the United States; to be compiled in such mode, form and manner, as he shall deem expedient, and with such comparative statements, notes, and references, as may be proper to elucidate the same. The work is to be submitted to Congress as early as practicable. And to enable it to be prepared, the sum of $20,000 is appropriated.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

BENJAMIN METOYER.

On motion by Mr. SLIDELL, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider House bill for the relief of the legal heirs of Benjamin Metoyer, which had been reported, without amendment, from the Committee on Private Land Claims.

It proposes to authorize Benjamin Metoyer, of Natchitoches parish, Louisiana, to enter for himself and the other heirs of Benjamin Metoyer, deceased, as near as may be by legal subdivisions, one hundred and twenty-three and twelve one-hundredths acres of land, out of any public lands belonging to the United States.

No amendment being proposed, the bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

CHARLES PAVIE.

On motion by Mr. SLIDELL, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the House bill for the relief of the legal representatives of Charles Pavie.

It proposes to authorize the Commissioner of the General Land Office to correct the error in the description of the claim for land by Charles Pavie (No. 37) in the report of the register and receiver of the land office at Ouachita, Louisiana, dated July 24, 1837, and confirmed by the act entitled "An act confirming certain land claims in Louisiana," approved July 6, 1842, and to have it located on the south or right side of Red river descending, not exceeding the quantity claimed and confirmed; but this is only to operate as a quit claim on the part of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

JOHN S. KING.

On motion by Mr. MASON, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill from the House of Representatives, for the relief of John S. King, of Virginia, which directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension roll the name of J. S. King, and cause to be paid to him the sum of eight dollars per month for and during the term of his natural life; to commence from the 1st of January, 1853.

John S. King was drafted and mustered into the service of the United States at Knoxville, Tennessee, in November, 1814; he served six months in Mobile and elsewhere, acting against the British naval forces; on his return home, and before his discharge, he was seized with violent fever, and had to remain where he was attacked for some time; the disease settled into his limbs, and crippled him from that time to the present, and he is now totally disabled.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, was read a third time, and passed.

HENRY S. SANFORD.

On motion by Mr. JONES, of Tennessee, the Senate as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider Senate bill for the relief of Henry S. Sanford.

It authorizes the payment to H. S. Sanford, late acting chargé d'affaires of the United States at Paris, of $6,223 82, the amount of the difference between the salary received by him, as secretary of legation at Paris, from the 14th of May, 1853, to the 22d of January, 1854, and the salary of a chargé d'affaires for the same period, together with the usual outfit of a chargé d'affaires.

Mr. Sanford was appointed secretary of the legation of the United States at Paris on the 20th August, 1849. From the 14th day of May, 1853, to the 22d day of January, 1854, a period of eight months and eight days, he was left in charge of the legation as acting chargé d'affaires ad interim. During that period he was allowed clerk hire. In several instances, when secretaries of legation at Paris have been left as chargé d'affaires, Congress have allowed them outfits, though it is not a matter of course to make such allowance. In view of the importance of the mission to Paris, the necessary increase of expenses incident to the change from the position of secretary of legation to that of chargé d'affaires, and in accordance with the general current of precedents in relation to diplomatic agents of the United States at that court, the committee are of opinion that the petitioner's claim for an outfit and the difference in salary between a secretary of legation and chargé d'affaires is reasonable, and should be allowed.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations, and was subsequently recommended and reported back from that committee with an amendment to add to the bill:

And for necessary clerk hire paid by him, while secretary of legation at Paris, the further sum of $1,170 63.

The amendment was agreed to; the bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in. The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read a third time, and passed.

PROPERTY ACCOUNTS WITH NEW YORK.

On motion by Mr. FISH, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill from the House of Representatives authorizing the payment of the balance of the property accounts between the United States and the State of New York, for military stores in the war of 1812."

The object of the bill is to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the Governor of New York $11,929 45, being the balance due that State, arising out of issues of military stores to officers of the United States Army, and volunteers, and militia in the service of the United States during the war with Great Britain, declared in 1812.

Mr. TOOMBS. I should like to hear the report in this case read.

Mr. FISH. The case was so perfectly clear that the committee did not think it necessary to make a written report. During the war of 1812, there was a property account between the United States and the State of New York. The credit of the State of New York at that time was better than that of the Federal Government. Military stores were advanced by New York, and drawn by the United States for the use of the troops. The account has been adjusted on different occasions, and all but finally signed; but on two different occasions, by the death of one agent or another, the actual signature was delayed. It has gone through examination, and there is a communication from the Auditor's office to the committee, certifying to the correctness of the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that the Speaker had signed the following enrolled bills:

An act to repeal the first proviso of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," approved September 28, 1850;

An act for the relief of Rosalie Caxillo; and

An act declaring the southern boundary of New Mexico.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore signed these bills.

SMITH, GREENE, AND FARNSWORTH.

The bill for the relief of Elliot Smith, William C. Greene, and Nathan Farnsworth, was read a second time, and, on motion by Mr. MALLORY the Senate proceeded to consider it as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to direct the Secretary of War to pay Smith, Greene, and Farnsworth, such sums as he may find them justly entitled to receive, for their losses and services in saving the United States troops and stores from the ship Charles Wharton, when stranded upon the bar at Tampa bay, in a severe gale, in December, 1837.

The ship Charles Wharton was chartered by the United States for the purpose of transporting nearly three hundred volunteer troops, with arms, provisions, baggage, and a quantity of sauer kraut, from Philadelphia to Tampa Bay. While on the voyage, and so laden, about the 20th of December, 1837, she grounded on a shoal near the entrance of Tampa Bay, and was found in a very perilous condition by the petitioners, who immediately went to the aid of the vessel, and at great risk, and with much labor, aided and assisted in saving the troops, the guns, ammunition, and private property of the officers. To enable him to take on board of his vessel a portion of the troops, Captain Smith, one of the petitioners, threw overboard a part of his own cargo, consisting of barrels of bread. One hundred and thirty of the troops were taken on board the Coasting Trader, and the cargo of the said ship was taken on board the schooner B. D. Jackson, and all were subsequently delivered over to the custody of officers of the United States, on a requisition of the commanding officer of the volunteers. The petitioners, for all these services and sacrifices, have received no compensation whatever.

The claim has been before Congress since 1840, and several favorable, and one adverse, reports have been made upon its merits. The adverse report fully admits that the facts, as stated, are sustained by Captain Rogers, of the ship Charles Wharton; Captain Gatewood, of the United States cutter Jackson, and by Captain Evans, of the volunteers, who were on board at the time, and personally cognizant of the facts about which they testify. But the committee thought that testimony, although entirely credible upon its face, was inconsistent with the reports of the quartermaster general and surgeon general, the latter of whom was in command of the troops on board the ship, and says, in his report, that the men were all taken off by the schooner Rubicon, and the sloop Washington. The report says, "It is exceedingly difficult to reconcile this conflicting testimony," but comes to the conclusion that the testimony of the commander of the troops ought to prevail. This report was made in 1845.

In June, 1850, General Lawson, after stating the circumstances which led to the error in his previous report, says: "Having been made satisfied by Lieutenant Peters, that the vessel which took the troops from the wreck to the cutter, inside the bay, was the Coasting Trader, I take pleasure in recommending that the services of Captain Smith, the master, be suitably rewarded." As this statement removes all doubt as to the performance of the service, the committee report the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

CAPTAIN THOMAS PORTER.

Mr. JONES, of Iowa. The Committee on Pensions have directed me to report back, with an amendment, House bill to provide a pension for Captain Thomas Porter, and to recommend its passage. I ask that it may now be considered.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill as in Committee of the Whole.

It provides that the name of the petitioner be placed upon the pension rolls of invalid pensioners, at the rate of twenty dollars per month, from March, 1831, taking from such amount the sum or sums as have heretofore been paid to him by way of pension.

Thomas Porter entered the service in Captain A. McClelland's troop of light volunteer dragoons, in October, 1812; continued in service for one year, and was severely wounded at the battle of Missinoway, on the 19th December, 1812. His horse was killed in that battle. Partially recovering from the wound, he joined his troop in the following spring, and marched to Fort Meigs; was in the first siege of the fort, at which place he was slightly wounded by a cannon ball, the same killing a second horse for him while in the attitude of mounting. He continued in the service till the close of the campaign, partaking in all the engagements of his squadron, and terminating with the battle of the Thames, after which he was discharged. Shortly after leaving the volunteer service he received, without solicitation on his part, the appointment of ensign in the sixteenth regiment United States infantry; and soon thereafter, without solicitation, the additional appointment from President Monroe of assistant deputy quartermaster general, with orders to repair to Carlisle, in the State of Pennsylvania. He accepted the appointment, and promptly repaired to the post assigned him, and there continued in the full discharge of his duties until peace was made. In the winter of 1814 and 1815 he felt serious inconvenience from the wounds he had previously received, and was confined to his bed for some weeks in consequence thereof. From the month of October, 1819, in consequence of those wounds, he has been confined to his bed, his crutches, and his staff. His sufferings have been great, beyond the power of language to express. The greater part of the thigh bone below where the ball passed has been extracted, and has left great inflammation, and a constant running sore. The Army surgeons testify to the disability, and believe that it was brought on by severe service and exposure in the winter of 1814 and 1815. The muster-roll has a note, showing that Captain Porter had his horse killed at Fort Meigs, his saddle, holsters, and pistols torn to pieces, and that he immediately supplied himself with another horse. And there is abundant testimony going to show that Captain Porter served his country gallantly and faithfully in every position in which he was placed; that in so doing he has received wounds which make him an invalid for life; that he is poor and needy; that the country owes him a debt of gratitude, and ought to pay it liberally and promptly.

The amendment of the committee was to add to the bill: "And the amount found due, under the provisions of this act, shall be paid to the children of the said Captain Thomas Porter."

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill was reported to the Senate, as amended. The amendment was concurred in, and ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time. The bill, as amended, was read a third time, and passed.

ANDREWS'S REPORT.

Mr. CASS submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed, for the use of the Senate, five thousand additional copies of the report of Israel D. Andrews, Senate Executive document No. 112, first session Thirty-Second Congress.

NAVAL AND MAIL STEAMER APPROPRIATION BILLS.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, on the bill making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855.

Also, that the House of Representatives had insisted on their disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855, had agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. Houstoun, of Alabama; Mr. MORGAN, of New York; and Mr. POWELL, of Virginia, managers at the same on their part.

SEPARATION OF MONEY BILLS.

On motion by Mr. PRATT, the Senate proceeded to consider the following resolution, submitted by him on Wednesday last:

Resolved, That hereafter the Senate will not receive or consider any bill or proposition, other than the general appropriation bills for the support of the Government, which appropriates money for more than one object.

Mr. HUNTER. I do not know how far that resolution might go. I perceive that it applies to bills other than the general appropriation bills.

Mr. PRATT. Yes, sir.

Mr. BELL. I wish the honorable Senator from Maryland would explain his object in proposing this resolution.

Mr. PRATT. Mr. President, a few days ago we had before us a bill making appropriations for various objects of internal improvement; and because that bill combined various appropriations, the charge was perhaps very correctly made against it, that there were many appropriations in it for which a majority of the Senate would not have voted, if they had not been connected with the residue. The rule which I have offered will explain its own object. It is, that after this session, the Senate will not receive or consider any bill or proposition which appropriates money to more than one object, except the ordinary appropriation bills for the support of the Government. This would remove all the difficulty in which we were placed the other day; and whenever an object was meritorious in itself, the friends of that object would have no difficulty in having it passed by the Senate, and the other branch of the National Legislature; and another object not meritorious in itself could not be passed by having it connected with those which were meritorious. I ask for the yeas and nays upon the adoption of the resolution which I have proposed.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. TOOMBS. I am very much in favor of the resolution proposed by my friend from Maryland. I think it will remove very many of the great evils and bad tendencies of the system to which he has referred; and if that system is to continue, I think this will put it upon a basis which will relieve it from very many of the bad consequences which might otherwise result from it. I trust, therefore, the Senate will adopt the rule which the honorable Senator has proposed.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I rise to express my approbation of the rule proposed by the Senator from Maryland. It is one in favor of which I have long been. I think it is very necessary; but I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Maryland to one fact, and that is, that the river and harbor bill in the House of Representatives has been decided to be a general appropriation bill. I apprehend, therefore, his resolution ought to be amended in some way, so as to except that from the "general appropriation bills" mentioned in his resolution.

Mr. PRATT. The resolution, in referring to the appropriation bills, speaks of those for the support of the Government. That is sufficient.

Mr. BELL. Mr. President, I think this is a measure of too much importance to be passed with the little consideration which we are able to give to it at this period of the session. It is not a new idea by any means. It has been insisted upon by the opponents of river and harbor improvements for some ten or fifteen years at least. We have not recently, till now, had the specific proposition presented to the Senate; but we know that the honorable chairman of the Committee on Commerce [Mr. HAMLIN] has always been in favor of such a measure; and many of the friends of the river and harbor bills have been quite willing to agree to it, if it were practicable. The experiment has been made. The Senate committee, I believe, at one session, reported a batch of bills separately; but we found, in practice, that it would not work at all. I do not say what I would do, or what vote I would give on such a proposition, at another session, at a different time. That might, perhaps, depend on the fate which the river and harbor bill that has just passed the two Houses may share at the hands of the Executive. If that be rejected, we shall probably know upon what grounds it is rejected, and then it will be the proper time, at the next session of Congress, to consider the subject, and see whether this is the best and only practicable mode of getting appropriations for these objects.

Now, I undertake to state that, unless in a few instances, as a matter of personal favor, appropriations for separate objects cannot be obtained. I put it to the honorable Senator from Maryland whether, when there is such a formidable opposition to the system entirely or to any extent, limited or unlimited, it will be possible any half dozen objects of this kind to get through at any one session of Congress? The opposition to these improvements is formidable, and meets every proposition which is presented; and unless there is some peculiar aspect in the case, there is always difficulty in getting an appropriation through. I will name one case where I never found any formidable opposition in the Senate to any appropriation. At two Congresses in succession, the Senate agreed, by a nearly unanimous vote, to make a specific and separate appropriation for the repair of the Cumberland dam, in the Ohio river.

Mr. ATCHISON. The removal.

Mr. BELL. No, sir, not the removal, but the repair. I introduced one of the bills myself, and they never were for the removal of the dam; but for its repair. The Senate passed a bill making an appropriation for that object at two successive Congresses, but it never was taken from the Speaker's table in the other House. The favor which that proposition had in the Senate was founded solely on the consideration that the Government had contributed to interpose that obstruction to commerce in the Ohio river. They supposed, not that it stood on any better constitutional ground than others, but on the higher grounds of justice and expediency.

Sir, you may make as many propositions as you please, and if there were only three or four, so long as there is a formidable minority opposing appropriations of this description, on any ground whatever, you can never make this system work. I have stated repeatedly in debate here during the last few years, that if the minority, who are opposed to the policy of making appropriations for rivers and harbors, would acquiesce in what seems to be the general and settled sentiment of a majority of the people of the country, and contribute their aid, instead of throwing objections to the passage of separate and distinct bills for each object, we might have a system which would be free from the objections that all have felt to exist to the present plan. But as long as that opposition continues, I think the proposition of the Senator from Maryland would be fatal to any appropriations being hereafter made for these objects. I know honorable Senators, who acquire great personal favor, may, on the score of personal considerations, get separate bills through for their States. The honorable Senator from North Carolina had the address to get a pretty nearly unanimous concurrence of the Senate in favor of a measure for his State. Such measures as those may succeed, but it will only be by that sort of influence being brought to bear. The question is, whether that is any better or more commendable reason upon which to make these appropriations than any other? I do not mean the ground of that obstruction having been placed there by the Government, but as a matter of personal favor; if that was the case in regard to that appropriation; I do not know that it was. I was not aware, however, that it stood on any distinct grounds. All I ask of the Senator from Maryland is, to let this matter lie over. I should not like, at this time, to vote against his resolution. I think he had better let it lie over until the next session, until we can see on what ground we can stand in reference to these appropriations.

Mr. PETTIT. I really hope the Senator will consent to let this resolution lie over. There are a few House bills, confirming private land claims, which I desire very much to have passed. I hope the Senator will consent to the postponement of his resolution. There can certainly be no necessity for urging it now. The next session will answer quite as well. I make the appeal to him to allow it to lie over.

Mr. PRATT. I have no doubt, Mr. President, that if we sat here until this day twelve months there would be a few more bills to pass. If this resolution be discussed now, it will have one beneficial result. It will prevent the passage of bills appropriating money out of the Treasury, to the reading of which no one listens, and which no one, except the Senator who moves to take it up, knows a word about. We have passed forty or fifty bills this morning, in regard to which no one but the Senator who moved to take each bill up knew anything at all. I think, therefore, that the discussion of this measure will be a more innocent amusement than the passage of bills without their being understood.

In answer to the honorable Senator from Tennessee, I beg to say to him that I never imagined, when I offered this resolution, nor did I advocate it as containing any new idea, as he supposes. I never supposed that it had not entered into the imagination of everybody who had had legislative experience, that this was an evil which it was greatly to be desired should be remedied. Any one who has had any legislative experience will admit that. It was not, therefore, offered as a new idea, but as one which must have presented itself to the mind of every legislator. I do not desire to prolong the discussion, although I think it would perhaps be the best thing we could do; but as the yeas and nays have been ordered, I ask for the vote upon the resolution.

Mr. PETTIT. I shall be satisfied if we can take the vote.

Mr. SEWARD. Mr. President, we have been here now twenty-six hours, with the exception of only three hours for sleep, and I am sure that we have served our country faithfully for this day, and for the previous day, and that it is unjust to ourselves, dangerous to our health, and unsafe for the public, that we should now take up any new and great question like this; for it is a question, speak of it as we may, that involves a radical change in the policy of legislation upon a very great interest—upon an absorbing interest. We are not prepared to examine it with the care which it requires. We ought not to decide it carelessly. We are soon to meet again. If we shall adopt the resolution, it can have no application to the present session; for we have no more such business now to do. If it had been adopted at the beginning of the session, we should have had the benefit of it, if there is any benefit to be derived from it; but now we shall derive none. I am sure it would be wisest to postpone it. I therefore, concurring with gentlemen around me, move that the further consideration of the resolution be postponed until next December.

Mr. CASS. If this proposition applied to all general appropriation bills, in which I mean to include river and harbor bills, I should be inclined to treat it with more favor. I think that all private claims may very well be considered by themselves; but I do not see that the objection made to the consideration of river and harbor objects in one bill applies more in respect to that bill than to a civil and diplomatic bill, or a fortification bill, or any other appropriation bill.

If I understand the Senator from Maryland, he thinks you cannot consider subjects properly if there be more than one in the same bill. Let me ask, how do you consider a fortification bill, when there are twelve, or fifteen, or fifty objects embraced in it? How do you consider a civil and diplomatic bill, in which you have one hundred, or, it may be, five hundred, different objects? If you go on and assume the principle that you cannot fairly enter into the investigation of a subject, unless it be in a particular bill, and on that ground exclude the river and harbor bill, it may as well be applied to every other appropriation bill.

Now, as a practical measure, Mr. President, you and I know, and every Senator knows, that one hundred and fifty bills for one hundred and fifty local objects could not pass this, or any Congress. It is impossible, in the nature of things. I may say the same of the civil and diplomatic bills. If you were to separate them into separate and distinct items, you never would get them through. There should be discussion allowed, of course, and the subjects embraced in the bill should have some general relation to each other. The objects embraced in a river and harbor bill have, or ought to have, the same relation to each other as the items of a civil and diplomatic bill; and every objection which applies to the one applies to the other. Therefore, if the resolution is meant to apply so as to exclude the river and harbor bill alone, I shall oppose it.

Mr. PRATT. Mr. President, I was entirely misunderstood. I certainly never supposed or intimated, that because eight or a dozen or a hundred propositions were embraced in one bill, they could not be considered and understood by the Senate. That is not the objection; but the objection is, that, although considered and understood, Senators are not enabled to vote for those which they approve, and vote against those which they disapprove.

Mr. CASS. You may say the same of the civil and diplomatic bill.

Mr. PRATT. I am willing to apply it to any bill. The reason why I made an exception of ordinary appropriation bills is, that they are bills for the support of the Government, in which there is no individual or sectional interest which will produce like feelings and like results, as bills to which this resolution is intended to refer. The general appropriation bills, too, are to carry out existing laws. Here is your War Department, your Navy Department, or any one of the Departments of the Government, with a number of clerks employed; and the amount to be paid them is fixed by law. An appropriation bill is to carry on the machinery of Government. There is no reason, therefore, that you should have a separate bill for each of those appropriations, to pay $1,000 to A, a clerk, and $1,000 to B, a clerk. There is no reason for putting such items in separate bills; but when, as in the bill which was before us a few days ago, we have presented in the same bill an appropriation of $100,000 to clear out a river in Virginia, and $100,000 to make a harbor on the lakes in New York, we, though able to decide as to their propriety, cannot vote against them without voting, also, against great objects which our judgments approve of.

In the bill which was before us a few days ago there was an appropriation for the improvement of the navigation of the Mississippi river. Suppose this rule should be adopted; is there a Senator who hears me who does not know that there could be no successful opposition to a separate bill appropriating any necessary sum of money for the improvement of the Mississippi? In the same bill there was an appropriation for the improvement of the harbor of Baltimore, an appropriation, the expenditure of which would, in a single year, save to the Government more than treble the amount. If that proposition was brought up separately, there is no Senator who can suppose it would meet with opposition.

The opposition in feeling and judgment to these bills, on the part of members of this body and the country at large, grows out of the fact, not, as my honorable friend says, that the bill cannot be considered; that is not the objection; but the objection is, that, although you do consider it, and although you disapprove of this and the other item, yet you are obliged to vote for an item of which you disapprove, or else lose appropriations for large national objects which are of more importance to the Government than would be the loss of any of the appropriations for the insignificant and improper ones.

Sir, occupying the position which I do in relation to the subject of internal improvements, believing them to be entirely within the constitutional power of this Government, the sole question, as a legislator, which presents itself to me in one of these bills combining all these objects, is, whether the appropriation from the public Treasury to objects of national importance, objects really useful to the country, and promotive of the public interest, will do more good than the country will be injured by the expenditure for objects not national and not important. You had, for example, in the river and harbor bill, an appropriation of $1,000,000 to improve the Mississippi, and you had other appropriations in it which were of great importance to the country. According to my humble judgment, then and now, the country would be benefited more by the appropriation of those sums of money for those national objects than it would be injured by the improper appropriation for other objects which were included in it; and, therefore, I favored that bill, though I would greatly prefer to vote for the proper objects disconnected from those which were not proper, and which should not have been placed in the bill.

Again, sir, the great benefit of this rule will be that, no matter who may be President, if you can pass your bill granting an appropriation for a work of this sort, you can have it signed by the President, and you will not have a proper appropriation vetoed because the same bill connects with it a matter which is not national, and which no man would vote for if it stood by itself. I honestly believe that the rule which I have had the honor to present, is one which would be highly beneficial to the legislation of the country, and one which, if we adopt it, I am sure will meet with the approval of the constituency of every Senator on this floor.

Mr. PEARCE. There is a necessity for an Executive session arising out of business which must be transacted, and ought to be done now, if at all. I move, therefore, to lay aside the resolution of my colleague, for the purpose of proceeding to the consideration of Executive business.

The motion was agreed to.

REPORT FROM A STANDING COMMITTEE.

Mr. BENJAMIN, from the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the petition of James H. Smith and Charles Stevens, reported a bill for their relief; which was read, and passed to a second reading.

BILL INTRODUCED.

Mr. BENJAMIN asked and obtained leave to introduce a bill for the relief of the heirs and legal representatives of Pierre Cazela, deceased; which was read a first and second time by its title, and referred to the Committee on Private Land Claims.

PAPERS WITHDRAWN.

On motion by Mr. DODGE, of Iowa, it was Ordered, That William A. Cameron have leave to withdraw his petition and papers.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

On motion by Mr. PEARCE, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of Executive business; and after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened.

MAIL STEAMER APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. STUART. The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail in ocean steamers, and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending June 30th, 1855, have instructed me to report that they have met the conferees on the part of the House, and, after full and free conference, have been unable to agree; and therefore ask for another committee of conference.

Mr. PRATT. I should like to hear the particulars. What are the points of difference?

Mr. STUART. There was only one amendment made to the bill by the Senate, and that was to strike out of the first section the provision respecting notice to the Collins line of steamers. I move that another committee of conference be appointed.

Mr. PRATT. I move that the Senate recede from that amendment; and on that question I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. STUART. Is not my motion first in order?

Mr. HUNTER. A motion to recede takes precedence, because that settles the question. All those motions which settle the question take precedence of others which delay it. A motion to recede or insist has precedence of a motion for another conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WELLER.) The question will be on receding from the amendment indicated by the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. JAMES. Is that the first question in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the committee of conference have been unable to agree, in consequence of a portion of this bill which the Senate amended. The amendment of the Senate was to strike out these words:

"And that the Secretary of the Navy is hereby directed, immediately after the 31st day of December, 1854, to give the notice provided by the first section of the act entitled 'An act to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1852,' approved the 21st day of July, 1852, to terminate the arrangement for the additional allowance for the transportation of the United States mail between New York and Liverpool, in the Collins line of steamers, as therein provided.'"

The question is on the motion of the Senator from Maryland, that the Senate recede from that amendment; and on this question he asks for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BAYARD. Mr. President, I trust the Senate will not recede from this amendment, because I think it involves a question of good faith. There is no hazard in insisting in this case, unless it is the determination of the Senate to recede from everything. Here is an appropriation bill, and in that bill the House have determined to legislate. The Senate, by their vote, have stricken out the provision as to legislation. Well, sir, I would rather see the bill fail than recede. In the first place, the attempt is to force us into receding from an amendment which strikes out legislation from a mere appropriation bill. It is not a case where any extreme injury can be done, even if the bill be lost; and I would rather see the bill lost than see a provision adopted by Congress such as has been inserted by the House, which, in my judgment, violates the faith of Congress. I do not put it on the ground of contract, but I put it on the ground of the good faith of Congress under the law of 1852; and I do not think any gentleman can escape from the fair construction of the provisions of that law.

What was the state of facts under which the law was passed? You had chosen deliberately to adopt the policy which had previously been adopted by England, of endeavoring to establish a set of steamers which could be used for naval purposes in the event of war, and which could be used in postal communication in time of peace. Under that policy these parties went on and made a contract with you, and built a set of steamers which were accepted by your own officers; steamers, I say, whose subsequent performance has justified that acceptance—steamers unequaled by any of your national marine. You cannot point out to me any steamer which you have that has not been far more liable to cost in repairs, or which has been half so effective, as any one of these steamers.

Under these circumstances, two sessions of Congress ago, the parties who had entered into this contract came forward and stated to you the facts that they were unable to carry out the contract, except with increased allowance. The fact was shown that the British Government had increased the allowance to their line. The fact was shown that their expenditures were large, and were much more than what they received. What was the action of Congress? They said the "postages which we receive were not sufficient to remunerate us for the outlay; but it is contended that they will increase, and we will give you two years within which to vindicate the assertion that the subsequent increase of postages will make this appropriation less onerous for the nation; and if, after the lapse of those two years, that state of facts shall not exist, then Congress shall have the option of declaring whether they will put an end to this contract on six months' notice." Now, sir, the attempt is, before the two years have expired, to anticipate, by the action of Congress, that period of time which the faith of the country requires should be permitted to elapse before the notice be given. I consider that it is a breach of faith on the part of Congress to pass the provision at this time; and that if a great necessity should exist at the next session to pass it, you can give notice, if you please, and pass the bill on the 31st of December next, and there can be no great loss to the country. It is at least a question where it is very doubtful whether the faith of Congress is not involved; and surely you would not now hazard a question of that kind merely to anticipate the period of notice. I submit that on no principle of good faith, and on no principle of public necessity, is this legislation required in this appropriation bill; and there can be no public evil arising from the Senate insisting upon their amendment. I hope the Senate will insist and adhere, if necessary, even though they may choose at the next session to pass a law authorizing a similar notice.

Mr. SEWARD. When this question was up yesterday, or rather this morning, about three o'clock, the Senate was very thin. I proposed at that time to go somewhat at large into the question; but to prevent an abuse of the patience of members who had been here so long, I refrained. As the Senate is now reconvened, after having been refreshed, I will submit the argument which I omitted to do then. In the first place, I ask the attention of the Senate to a letter from Mr. Collins, the agent of the Collins line of steamers, to the Postmaster General, dated 28th January last, in reply to a letter which had been addressed to him by the Postmaster General.

Mr. SEWARD proceeded to read the letter; but before he had proceeded far, he gave way, and the following business was transacted.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MORTON, from the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855, reported:

That the House agrees to recede from its disagreement to the second amendment of the Senate, and concur with the Senate in its third amendment, with the following amendment thereto:

Strike out of said amendment these words: "The said allowance to commence with the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1853, and to be computed for the first year from the ascertained weight for the month of January, 1854," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "This allowance to commence with the passage of this act, and to continue for one year only, and to be computed from the ascertained weight for the month of January, 1854."

The Senate agrees to recede from its fourth and fifth amendments.

The second amendment of the Senate was to insert the following additional section:

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That there be allowed and paid to the Postmaster of Washington city, District of Columbia, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a commission of one mill per pound upon the aggregate weight of public documents printed by order of Congress, and deposited in the office of said postmaster to be mailed; the said allowance to commence with the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1853, and to be computed for the first year for the ascertained weight for the month of January, 1854. And that the said postmaster be required to pay out of the said commissions to the clerks and other employees of his office, a sum not exceeding $250 each, per annum, as compensation for the extra labor performed by them in the assortment and mailing of said documents; and that he be required to account for, and settle with, the Post Office Department, for the disbursement of these commissions, and any surplus that may remain, in the same manner as is now required in the settlement of his other accounts.

The House had disagreed to this amendment, but they recede from this disagreement on the amendment proposed by the committee of conference being made.

The fourth and fifth amendments, from which the Senate recede, were to insert:

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That the surviving late Vice President of the United States shall have, during his life, the same authority to frank letters, and other mail matter, which he possessed while in office. And the same authority shall belong to future Vice Presidents after they go out of office.

Sec. — And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to Cranstons Lowrie a reasonable compensation for performing the duties of two clerks in the Post Office Department, not to exceed half pay of a clerk for the time he was so employed.

The report was concurred in.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill for the relief of Henry Lewis, of Clinton county, Indiana.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. WEBSTER, his Secretary, announcing that he had this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act to incorporate the Pioneer Manufacturing Company of Georgetown, District of Columbia; and

An act to change the name of the American-built brig Glamorgan to that of Wizard.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled act making appropriations for the repair, preservation, and completion of certain public works heretofore commenced under the authority of law; which was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

WILLIAM CURRAN.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider House bill for the relief of William Curran.

It provides that the assignment, bearing date April 25, 1851, from Thomas Myers to William Curran, of bounty land warrant No. 407, for one hundred and sixty acres of land, dated February 7, 1851, and issued to Thomas Myers, private and corporal in Captain Skinner's company, Colonel Mills's regiment of New York volunteers, war of 1812, be confirmed and declared effectual to transfer the warrant to Curran, and to vest in him the title thereto from the date of the assignment; and this act is to be good and sufficient evidence of the assignment, as having been duly made in all courts and places whatever.

It appears by the petition and papers of William Curran, that on the 7th of February, 1851, a bounty land warrant of that date was duly issued, under the act of Congress of September 28, 1850, to Thomas Myers, who was a private and a corporal in Captain Skinner's company, Colonel Mills's regiment of the New York volunteers, in the war of 1812, for one hundred and sixty acres of land, which warrant was number four hundred and seven. On the 25th of April, 1851, and before the passage of the act of Congress making land warrants assignable, Thomas Myers sold the warrant to the petitioner for $200, which was duly paid; and thereupon the said Myers duly executed, under his hand and seal, and delivered to the petitioner, an assignment bearing date the 25th of April, 1851—that being the day of its execution—with a power and authority contained in the assignment to said petitioner to locate the warrant on any public lands, according to law, in the name of Thomas Myers; and the assignment also contained an agreement on the part of Myers that he would convey to the petitioner, by deed, the lands on which the warrant should be located, upon their being patented to him. After the assignment, and about the time of the passage of the act of Congress making land warrants assignable, which was the 22d of March, 1852, Thomas Myers died intestate, leaving no estate, or, at most, but very little, and that no letters of administration have been granted in his case.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

ENOCH S. MORE.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, considered House bill for the relief of Enoch S. More.

It seems that the rolls of Captain Abraham Matteson, of the New York militia, show that Enoch S. More deserted in 1812. Satisfactory evidence has been filed in the Pension Office that More, instead of having deserted, as shown by the roll, was absent on furlough and sick at the time. On an investigation of the said evidence by the Commissioner of Pensions, it was deemed sufficient to grant him an invalid pension, on this state of facts, in order to enable him to get a bounty of land under the act of September 28, 1850, and to correct the roll, as the bill proposes to direct the Commissioner of Pensions to correct the roll by erasing the words which imply that More deserted, and insert in lieu thereof the words "sick and absent on furlough." And he is to have all the rights he would have had if he had continued in good health, and served in the company according to the terms of his enlistment.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

THOMAS ELLIS.

On motion by Mr. ATCHISON, House bill for the relief of Thomas Ellis was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The object of it is to require the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of Thomas Ellis, of Platte county, in the State of Illinois, upon the roll of invalid pensioners, at the rate of eight dollars per month, from May 11, 1852, during his life.

The bill was reported to the Senate.

Mr. ATCHISON. I move to amend the bill by striking out "Illinois" and inserting "Missouri." There is no such county as Platte in the State of Illinois; there is in Missouri.

The amendment was agreed to, and ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time. It was read a third time, and passed.

GEORGE M'GIRK.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to the consideration of the bill from the House of Representatives, "for the relief of the legal representatives of George McGirk."

It proposes to authorize the legal representatives of George McGirk to enter, without payment, one hundred and sixty acres of land, in any land office in the State of Missouri, in lieu of a tract of land claimed by them in said State; and to direct the Register of the Land Office, on payment of his fee, to issue the necessary certificate, on the return of which a patent shall issue in favor of said legal representatives.

No amendment being proposed, the bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

GAD HUMPHREYS.

On motion by Mr. MALLORY, Senate bill for the relief of Gad Humphreys—reported from the Committee on Claims—was read a second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It is designed to direct the proper accounting officers of the Treasury to ascertain the value of property of Gad Humphreys, alleged to have been burned and destroyed by order of Colonel Pierce, of the United States Army, at Fort Defiance, Florida, in 1836, and to pay the amount thus ascertained, if evidence to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War be furnished to him that the property was lost to the owner in consequence of the troops of the United States being stationed at that point, and of the orders of the officer in command.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read a third time, and passed.

LLOYD DORSEY AND OTHERS.

On motion by Mr. PETTIT, the bill from the House for the relief of Lloyd Dorsey and others, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

By it, Lloyd Dorsey, of the county of St. Charles, Missouri, will be authorized to enter, at the proper land office in that State, at the minimum price of the public lands, the southeast fractional quarter of section twenty-two, township forty-six, range four east, containing one hundred and forty-two and eighty-nine one hundredth acres; and to enter, for the use and benefit of the heirs of George Pitzer, deceased, the southwest fractional quarter of section twenty-two, township forty-six, range four east, containing one hundred and forty-two and eighty-nine one hundredth acres; but nothing in this act is to prejudice the rights of any person or persons having any legal or equitable claim to the lands herein mentioned, or any part thereof.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

PORT OF DELIVERY AT ROCK ISLAND.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Last night a bill was passed creating three or four ports of delivery; but, by accident, Rock Island was omitted. I now ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to introduce a bill to constitute Rock Island, in the State of Illinois, a port of delivery. I wish to have it sent down to the House immediately, so that it may be concurred in there.

By unanimous consent, leave to introduce the bill was granted; and, there being no objection, it was read a first and second time, and considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to enact that Rock Island be a port of delivery, subject to the same regulations and restrictions as other ports of delivery in the United States, and that there shall be appointed a surveyor of the customs for that port, who shall perform the duties prescribed by the act of Congress of March 2, 1831. Rock Island is to be a port of delivery within the collection district of New Orleans.

Mr. PEARCE. I should like to hear a statement from the Senator from Illinois as to the reasons of this measure. It seems to me at present that its only effect is to increase Executive patronage, to create some new offices, and give new salaries. As I understand it, railroad iron is brought into New Orleans in ships, there transhipped to steamboats, and thus taken up to Rock Island. It seems to me to be entirely unnecessary to establish a port of delivery there, if the whole of the custom-house business can be done as well at New Orleans; and the transhipment must be made there, at all events.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I will tell the Senator the reason for this bill. There are ports of delivery at Pittsburg, Louisville, St. Louis, New Albany, and half a dozen other places on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. Last night we made Keokuk and Dubuque, in Iowa, ports of delivery. The simple reason for this is, that Rock Island is where they are making many railroads, and it is important to have railroad iron delivered there directly. It was my design to move it as an amendment to the bill which came from the House last night, but I omitted to do so. This bill is in the usual form, and does nothing more for Rock Island than has been done for other places.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

INDEX TO PRIVATE CLAIMS.

Mr. JOHNSON. I have a resolution to offer, which is of some real importance to this body, and of some advantage to the interests of the country. I am instructed by the Committee on Printing to offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be instructed to purchase, for the use of the Senate, two hundred copies of the Index to Private Claims, from the First to the Thirty-First Congress inclusive, printed by order of the House of Representatives: Provided, The price per set does not exceed the amount paid by the said House; and the Secretary pay for them out of the contingent fund of the Senate: And provided, Said copies shall be deposited in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, for the use of the Senate and Senate committees.

This work is one which has been printed under the order of the House of Representatives. The Senate some years ago, under its own order, provided indexes of all claims, from the beginning of the Government, which originated in the Senate, but made no index of those originating in the House. The House a few years since ordered this work to be done; and it took three years to compile it. The House took only one thousand five hundred copies of the work, and those one thousand five hundred copies were ordered to be distributed to members as other documents.

These books would be of great advantage to our committees in tracing up claims that come before them, which notoriously get better and better each successive Congress, until they are finally passed; but if we could go back to our early history, where the true facts in reference to some of these old claims is developed, they would not go through; but, for want of such an index, we have been unable hitherto to trace them back.

This resolution proposes to take for the use of the Senate two hundred copies of this work—all that are left in the hands of the printer. We propose to obtain them, and deposit them in the office of the Secretary of the Senate, from which they can be taken for use by the committees for investigation, and at the end of each session the committees will return the copies which they get; and the two hundred will probably last for a great number of years. The utility of having such a work will be seen at once.

The resolution is so guarded that we can pay no more than the House has paid. A set consists of three volumes, and costs $10 63. They are quarto volumes, and contain upwards of seven hundred pages, as Senators can see by looking at the volumes which are on my desk. The cost will be $3 54½ a volume, which is very cheap. We shall never again have an opportunity to obtain this work. The benefit of it to the country will be lasting, and it will unquestionably afford means for the protection of the Treasury. With these remarks, I submit the question for the decision of the Senate.

The resolution was adopted.

JAMES CAPEN.

On motion by Mr. ROCKWELL, House bill for the relief of James Capen was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

It proposes to direct the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of James Capen on the pension roll, and pay him eight dollars per month during his natural life, to commence March 4, 1851.

Capen served five months and twelve days, and, including the time spent in going to and returning from the places of muster, he served over six months. He was draughted for a term of three years' service, and owing to the sickness of his father, he was obliged to hire a substitute. There is no satisfactory evidence furnished that he actually served six months, thereby entitling him to be placed on the pension roll, under the act of June 7th, 1832, and to receive arrears of pension from March 4, 1831, to the present time. But as he probably may have served that length of time, and is now very old and infirm, the committee were of opinion that he should be placed on the pension roll—his pension to commence from March 4, 1851, about the date of his application.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill to provide a pension for Captain Thomas Porter.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855.

SANFORD'S REPORT.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Superintendent of Public Printing be directed to deliver to H. S. Sanford five hundred copies of Senate document No. 65.

The document referred to is Mr. Sanford's report on the penal codes of Europe. The resolution is in accordance with precedent.

The resolution was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

On motion by Mr. PEARCE, the Senate again proceeded to the consideration of Executive business; and after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. FISH. There are a few private bills from the House, mostly pension bills, which I think might very well be considered now, particularly as we have but little business to transact. I hope the Senate will take up these bills, and pass them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER, (Mr. WELLER in the chair.) The question is on receding from the amendment of the Senate to the bill making appropriations for transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending 30th of June, 1855, on which the Senator's colleague has the floor.

Mr. FISH. I hope my colleague will yield.

Mr. TOOMBS. I hope not. There is not a quorum of the Senate present, in my opinion. We have not had time to look into these private bills; and as Congress will be in session very soon, and as the next session will be of three months' duration, we have plenty of time to attend to them. I do not see why they cannot wait.

Mr. FISH. The bills have all been reported on by the committees of this body.

Mr. TOOMBS. But the members of the body have not had an opportunity to examine them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on receding from the amendment to the mail steamer bill, on which question the Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. SEWARD. I had the floor, but I was requested to yield until everybody else got through all their bills; but there are two which I ask the Senate to take up and pass. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill for the relief of Asa Leach.

ASA LEACH.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded, as in Committee of the Whole, to consider the bill.

It proposes to instruct the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of Asa Leach on the pension roll at four dollars a month, commencing August 1, 1852, and continuing during his natural life.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

WARREN RAYMOND.

On motion by Mr. SEWARD, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the House bill for the relief of Warren Raymond.

It proposes to direct the Secretary of the Interior to place the name of Warren Raymond, of the State of New York, upon the roll of invalid pensioners, at the rate of four dollars per month, to commence on the 1st of January, 1853, and to continue during his natural life.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read a third time, and passed.

OLIVER LEE.

Mr. PEARCE. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. FISH. I ask the Senator to withdraw that motion for a moment.

Mr. HUNTER. There is an appropriation bill which we have not yet decided upon—the mail steamer bill. Let us take a vote upon it before we adjourn.

Mr. FISH. I have a private bill for the relief of the legal representative of Oliver Lee, which I ask the Senate to take up. If it leads to any debate, I will consent to its postponement.

Mr. PEARCE. I withdraw my motion.

Mr. FISH's motion was agreed to, and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill for the relief of the representatives of Oliver Lee. It proposes to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to Charles H. Lee, administrator, and Eliza Lee, administratrix of the estate of Oliver Lee, late of the city of Buffalo, deceased, $580 32, being the amount of a judgment recovered by Oliver Lee against P. A. Baker, formerly collector of the port of Buffalo Creek, in the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of New York, in the second circuit, and docketed the 30th of August, 1834.

Mr. TOOMBS. I should like to know the reasons for that bill?

Mr. FISH. I promised not to say a word about it.

Mr. WALKER. I wish to know why the Government of the United States should release this judgment?

Mr. TOOMBS. I hope the bill will not pass. It is an abandonment of all principle of legislation. Gentlemen tell us that they have promised to say nothing upon it, and yet they ask us to pass the bill without knowing for what reason. I shall call for the yeas and nays upon it.

Mr. FISH. I withdraw the bill. I promised that if there was objection I would not press it.

Mr. TOOMBS. If it be right, I do not object to it; but I do not know whether it is right or not.

Mr. FISH. Let the bill be postponed.

The further consideration of the bill was postponed until to-morrow.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill for the relief of the heirs of Captain Matthew Jack, deceased.

Also, that they had passed the following bills of the Senate without amendment:

An act granting the right of way to the Marysville and Benicia Railroad Company, through and over the grounds of the United States at Benicia, in California; and

An act to establish certain additional post roads.

PROPOSITION TO ADJOURN.

Mr. PEARCE. I move that the Senate do now adjourn.

Several SENATORS. Till when?

Mr. PEARCE. Monday.

Several SENATORS. We must meet to-morrow.

Mr. PEARCE. I move that the Senate adjourn to meet to-morrow, at twelve o'clock.

Mr. FESSENDEN. What is the use of meeting to-morrow? We cannot do anything but sign bills.

Mr. HUNTER. The enrolled bills must be signed in open session, and some of the appropriation bills are yet unsigned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I suppose the Senate to-morrow can attend to Executive business, and the President of the Senate can sign enrolled bills.

Mr. PEARCE. I move that we adjourn until twelve o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. HUNTER. I hope not. Let us dispose of the mail steamer appropriation bill, or we shall lose it. I call for the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken resulted—yeas 15, nays 19; as follows:

YEAS.—Messrs. Bayard, Bell, Benjamin, Cooper, Dawson, Fessenden, Fish, Foot, Gillette, Pearce, Rockwell, Rusk, Stuart, Thompson of Kentucky, and Wade—15.

NAYS.—Messrs. Allen, Atchison, Brodhead, Brown, Chase, Dodge of Iowa, Douglas, Evans, Houston, Hunter, Johnson, Jones of Tennessee, Mallory, Pettit, Sumner, Toombs, Toucey, Walker, and Weller—19.

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

MAIL STEAMER BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses, on the bill making appropriations for the transportation of the United States mail by ocean steamers, and otherwise, during the fiscal year ending 30th of June, 1855, the pending question being on the motion of Mr. PRATT, that the Senate recede from the amendment striking out the provision of the bill requiring notice to be given of the discontinuance of the extra compensation to the Collins line of steamers.

Mr. SEWARD. When I was interrupted before, I was undertaking to show the Senate that the principle incorporated in this bill by the House of Representatives, to which it is now proposed to adhere, is in violation of contract, is unequal and unjust. The line of argument which I have marked out for myself will make it necessary to read a number of documents to illustrate the subject. I had commenced the reading of a letter of Mr. Collins, the agent of this line of steamers, to the Postmaster General, dated the 28th of January last. I proceed now to state the substance of it.

The Postmaster General, on the 24th of December last, wrote to Mr. Collins, asking him to inform the Department as to the number of ships employed by the line to carry the United States mails between that city and Liverpool. In that letter he stated that he desired the information for the purpose of laying it before the Committee of Ways and Means of the House of Representatives. In answer to the call thus made by the Postmaster General, Mr. Collins went into a history of the circumstances under which this line was established, and the claims which it had on the consideration of Congress and the Federal Government. In the first place he stated that a law had been early passed by Congress, as will be well recollected, authorizing the Postmaster General to invite proposals for carrying the mails by steamships to Europe. The Senate will recollect the circumstances attending that. Great Britain having undertaken that system, and France having given indications of being desirous to go into the same line of policy, it immediately engaged the attention of the Congress of the United States. Others, who have been here longer than I have been, will surely remember it. But I recollect discussions on that subject as far back as 1846-'47. I especially remember that a very able member of Congress from the State of Georgia, Mr. Thomas Butler King, made an elaborate report, in which he vindicated this English policy, and recommended its adoption to the Government of the United States.

Mr. DAWSON. As we are all very much fatigued, I submit to the Senator whether, as four o'clock is so near, it would not be better to forego discussion?

Mr. SEWARD. I am very sure that I can demonstrate what I set out to do. I cannot promise, in the present state of my health, that I shall get through by four o'clock; but I can show, I think, what I set out to show; and whether it takes two hours or two hours and a half, I mean to do it before I quit.

Mr. DAWSON. That I look upon at once as a declaration that the Senator will speak on until four o'clock. I think, then, as we are men of such age, and as we have been very much exhausted, we might as well adjourn and let the bill go.

Mr. BENJAMIN. Let us pass a resolution insisting on our amendment, and see whether the House will recede from their disagreement; and if they refuse to recede, we can adjourn.

Mr. DAWSON. We are in the power of a single Senator, and I think we had better adjourn now.

Mr. BENJAMIN. Let us first insist on this amendment.

Mr. BRODHEAD. Perhaps some gentleman will move a reconsideration of the vote by which we refused to strike out the third section, and then we can send the bill back as one simply making the appropriations, and not legislating. We shall soon get along with it then.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. The Senator from New York has advertised us and the Senate that he means to speak out the time of the Senate, or else he means to accomplish his purpose. I so understand him, and I take it that he, as a frank man, will admit it to be so. Now, I advertise him that so long as I live and occupy a seat on this floor, I will fight his Collins steamers from this day out. You may evade it for the hour, but the retribution will come. Here is a deliberately expressed opinion of the Congress of the United States. You are seeking to set aside that opinion by taking advantage of the circumstances, and forcing us to do what a majority say they ought not to do.

Mr. SEWARD. I tell the Senator from Tennessee that he misstates the facts, and he misunderstands the position that he occupies, and the power he can exercise.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. That is a question to be settled.

Mr. SEWARD. He says it is the deliberate will of the Congress of the United States that I am trying to defeat.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I say so now.

Mr. SEWARD. The deliberate will of the Congress of the United States consists of the will of two bodies—the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States. The deliberate will of the Congress of the United States is divided. The House of Representatives wills that this contract shall be abrogated, I say unlawfully, I say unjustly. The will of the Senate is, that it shall not be abrogated. I say the Senate is right. I am standing here for the Senate, for the decree that it has pronounced, and showing that the Senate is right, and showing that the House is wrong. How am I defeating the will of the Congress of the United States? When was it unlawful, when was it wrong, when was it unjust, in case of a disagreement between the two Houses of Congress, two hours before their adjournment, that any member belonging to the majority of the Senate should stand by the opinions and decision of that majority? That is the case here.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. No, sir, that is not the case. The case is this: The House of Representatives have sent here a proposition, the Senate disagreed to it, and you have had a committee of conference. Now, the proposition is, that the Senate shall recede, and the Senator from New York stands up and tells us that, in his enfeebled condition, it will take him two hours to satisfy the Senate that they ought not to recede. I submit it to the vote of the Senate whether they will recede or not. I put it to his honor, is not his purpose to defeat this measure, by consuming the legislative time of the Senate? Is not that your purpose, and have you not avowed that purpose when you told us that it would take two hours to convince the Senate on a question that has been debated for weeks and months, ay, through a series of years? I have no unkindness about this line of steamers; but I do desire that the expressed will of the American Congress shall not be defeated by a contest against time. If the Senator thinks he can speak for two hours, I am willing to sit here and listen to him. But I repeat, his purpose is to defeat this proposition by the consumption of the time of the Senate.

Mr. SEWARD. I have one word to say to my excellent friend from Tennessee. I wish, before the honorable Senator interrogates me, that he would arrive in his own mind at a true statement of the case which he assumes. He says that the House has passed this amendment, and has sent it here, and that the Senate, as I stated truly, had refused to assent to the amendment, that there had been a conference; and now the honorable Senator states the proposition to be that the Senate shall recede. That involves the whole case. Is that proposition one in behalf of the Senate? Is it an authoritative one? No, sir. The proposition, indeed, is made here. Who is it made by? Is it by the committee of conference who represent the Senate, whose opinions I am upholding, and under whose shelter and protection I stand? No, sir; but under the authority of an individual member dissenting from the committee of conference appointed by the Senate, and dissenting, so far as appears, from the opinion of a majority of the Senate, whose opinion, it is to be presumed, remains the same until a final question shall be taken.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. Why not take that final question?

Mr. SEWARD. The honorable Senator asks why not waive my rights? That is the sum and substance of his proposition. Because I think, if I do not waive my rights, I shall prevent him from committing the Senate, the Congress of the United States, and the country, to a great wrong, and to a great dishonor, not intentionally, I admit. I mean to prevent that, if I can, by any power of argument or illustration which I possess. The honorable Senator asked me whether it was my purpose to occupy all the time from now to four o'clock? I might reply to him, that if the honorable Senator shall continue to appreciate the importance of time as he has done thus far in this debate, which he has raised between him and myself, I shall have a very little portion of that time to be responsible for.

Mr. WELLER. I move that the Senate do now adjourn, because I prefer going home to listening to the Senator from New York, as he is about to speak until four o'clock.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I wish to compromise.

Mr. WELLER. The best compromise is to adjourn.

Mr. SEWARD. I will not give way for the introduction of any bill.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I think this matter can be arranged in a manner beneficially to the country, and satisfactory to this body. There is no objection to making the appropriation required by law, and by the contracts which have been entered into by the Government, but it is the legislation on these bills that is objected to—

Mr. TOOMBS. My friend from Pennsylvania is out of order. I wish to get at the question. There is but one question before us, and it is on receding from the amendment of the Senate to this bill.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I have the floor, by leave of the Senator from New York.

Mr. TOOMBS. He cannot allow you to go on out of order.

Mr. BRODHEAD. I merely wish to suggest that we strip this bill of legislation, and leave in it nothing but the appropriations required by law. Let us reconsider the vote on the third section which gives power to the Postmaster General, Attorney General, and Secretary of the Navy to abrogate all these mail contracts.

Mr. WELLER. Upon that very proposition I should desire to be heard, at least two hours, myself; and, therefore, that is no compromise. I move that the Senate adjourn until twelve o'clock to-morrow.

The motion was agreed to; and at five minutes to two o'clock, p. m., the Senate adjourned.

IN SENATE.

SATURDAY, August 5, 1854.

Prayer by Rev. HENRY SLICER.

The reading of the Journal was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had passed, without amendment, the bill of the Senate to establish a land district in the State of Florida, to be called the district of Tampa; and the bill of the Senate to relinquish to the State of Wisconsin the lands reserved for salt springs therein, with an amendment; in which they requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Speaker had signed sundry enrolled bills, which were then signed by the PRESIDENT pro tempore, as follows:

An act granting the right of way to the Marysville and Benicia Railroad Company through and over the grounds of the United States at Benicia, in California;

An act to establish certain additional post roads; An act to repeal the first proviso of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," approved September 28, 1850;

An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending 30th of June, 1855;

An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855;

An act for the relief of Henry Lewis and Moses Petet, of Clinton county, Indiana;

An act authorizing the payment of balance of the property accounts between the United States and the State of New York, for military stores in the war of 1812;

An act for the relief of the legal representatives of George McGirk;

An act for the relief John S. King, of Virginia;

An act to provide a pension for Captain Thomas Porter;

An act for the relief of George M. Bentley, of the State of Indiana;

An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June, 1855;

An act for the relief of the heirs of Captain Matthew Jack, deceased;

An act for the relief of Robert F. McGuire and Louisa his wife, late Louisa Lamy;

An act for the relief of William Curran;

An act for the relief of A. S. Laughery;

An act for the relief of the inhabitants of township forty-five, range one, in Warren county, Missouri;

An act for the relief of James Capen;

An act for the relief of Thomas Ap Catesby Jones, surety of a former postmaster at Norfolk, Virginia;

An act for the relief of the legal heirs of Benjamin Meoyer;

An act for the relief of Warren Raymond;

An act for the relief of Julia Aiken;

An act for the relief of the legal representatives of Charles Pavier;

An act for the relief of Lloyd Dorsey and others;

An act for the relief of Asa Leach;

An act to carry into effect the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, signed on the 5th day of June, 1854;

An act to establish certain additional post roads; and Joint resolution making appropriation for the payment of those entitled to the benefits of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed August 3, 1854, voting extra compensation to pages, folders, and others.

THE ADJOURNMENT RESOLUTION.

The PRESIDENT. Senate bill to relinquish to the State of Wisconsin the lands reserved for salt springs therein, has been returned from the House of Representatives, with an amendment.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I believe the Clerk of the House came to the Senate Chamber with that bill yesterday, about five minutes after we adjourned. It is a bill which allows the State of Wisconsin to apply to the purposes of a university seventy-two sections of land which were granted to the State for salt springs. It is a bill which passed the Senate, and has now been returned from the House with an amendment. I hope it will be taken up and concurred in.

Mr. HUNTER. I will merely suggest to my friend that, though it is a misfortune, under the resolution of the two Houses, we cannot act on anything of this kind. I wish we could, on his account; but if we once depart from the rule which we have established, it would lead to great inconvenience. I do not think we have power to depart from it.

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. If I remember aright, we have a rule which prevents any bill being sent to the President on the last day of the session, unless that rule be set aside. I recollect distinctly, in the case of an appropriation for the American Colonization Society, that the bill was so sent to the President on the last day of the session, without a suspension of the rule, and it did not vitiate the bill. I take it that no question will be raised by any tribunal of the world, if the assent of the Senate be now given to this provision. I ask that the bill may be taken up, for the purpose of concurring in the amendment. It is for the Senate to grant or refuse the request.

The PRESIDENT. The opinion of the Chair, as a matter of course, would not affect the action of the Senate. This is not a point of order, but a question for the Senate. The Chair will have the resolution, which was yesterday adopted by the two Houses, read for the information of the Senate.

The Secretary read it, as follows:

Resolved, That the time fixed by the resolution of the first of July, for the adjournment of the present session of Congress be, and the same is hereby, extended to Monday, August 7, at eight o'clock, a. m.: Provided, That no motion, other than to adjourn, shall be taken by either House, after the hour of four o'clock, p. m., this day, (Friday.)

Mr. HUNTER. How, then, can we take up anything of this sort?

The PRESIDENT. The language of the resolution is conclusive, in my opinion; but it is a question for the Senate, and not for the Chair to decide. Is it the pleasure of the Senate to take the question on the amendment of the House to the bill which has been named?

Mr. PETTIT. I think there can be no misunderstanding the resolution which has been read. The design of the two Houses, clearly, was that we should not do any legislative business after four o'clock yesterday. I shall not be willing to vote on any question of the kind, and will not vote either for or against.

The PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Iowa desire that I should put the question?

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT. Will the Senate proceed to the consideration of the amendment made by the House to the bill of the Senate which has been named by the Senator from Iowa?

The question being taken; it was determined in the negative.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that the Speaker had signed an enrolled bill entitled "An act to establish a land district in the State of Florida, to be called the district of Tampa;" which was thereupon signed by the PRESIDENT pro tempore.

CASES UNREPORTED UPON.

Mr. STUART. I have three cases which have been intrusted to me by committees, which I have not heretofore been able to make a report upon.

The PRESIDENT. The Chair is of opinion that, under the concurrent resolution of the two Houses, nothing in the nature of business can be received.

Mr. STUART. I am aware of that; but I merely wish to report the cases back to the Senate, without any recommendation at all.

The PRESIDENT. That is prohibited by the resolution. The Chair is of the opinion that, under a resolution adopted by the Senate a day or two since, the Senator may deliver them to the Secretary.

Mr. PETTIT. We expressly passed a resolution the other day, directing such reports to be handed to the Secretary.

The PRESIDENT. No report can be entered on the Journal, but it can be handed to the Secretary.

Mr. STUART. All I desire to do is to return the papers. I will accomplish that through the Secretary.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message was received from the House of Representatives by Mr. FORNEY, their Clerk, announcing that they had passed the following bill and joint resolution, in which they requested the concurrence of the Senate:

An act allowing the further time of two years to those holding lands by entries in the Virginia military district in Ohio, which were made prior to 1st January, 1852, to have the same surveyed and patented; and Joint resolution declaring the Seneca Indians entitled to pension and bounty lands in certain cases.

SENATE BILLS BECOME LAWS.

A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. WEBSTER, his Secretary, announcing that he had this day approved and signed the following acts:

An act to establish a land district in the State of Florida, to be called the district of Tampa;

An act granting the right of way to the Marysville and Benicia Railroad Company through and over the grounds of the United States at Benicia, in California; and

An act to establish certain additional post roads

EXTRA WORK FOR PAGES.

Mr. MORTON. I beg leave to draw the attention of the Senate to the operation of a joint resolution passed by Congress, with respect to the compensation of the employees of the two Houses. It appears, by the joint resolution, that an addition of twenty per cent. was allowed to the compensation of those employees; but it is attended by a proviso, that those who avail themselves of the twenty per cent. provision, should not thereafter receive the usual extra compensation for their services. It appears that the employees of the Senate, our pages particularly, availed themselves of the provisions of the joint resolution, and thereby received some eighty or ninety dollars in addition to their regular compensation. The pages of the House, being better advised, or having more astuteness than those of the Senate, did not avail themselves of the benefit of the joint resolution, and did not receive the twenty per cent. The House, therefore, previously to its adjournment, voted to them the usual $200 extra compensation. The joint resolution appears to be well guarded, that the pages of the House should receive as much compensation as the pages of the Senate, thus placing them upon an equality. Under that joint resolution, if we had voted to the pages of this body the usual $200 extra compensation, the pages of the House would have received that sum without any action of the House. I think the rule should work both ways. I know that, under the existing joint resolution it is not now, perhaps, within the power of the Senate to vote its pages the usual $200, or any portion of it, as extra compensation.

So it was ruled yesterday; but I think it is perfectly competent to do so. I have no disguise about it; my great object is to place the pages of the Senate on an equality with the pages of the House of Representatives. I therefore beg leave to introduce a resolution to employ our pages in the folding-room for sixty days after the adjournment of Congress, at the usual compensation which they receive here. I hope, if the question of order be raised upon it, the Chair will not decide that question until it shall have been discussed by the Senate. The employment of the pages in the folding room will expedite the sending of documents to Senators. Many of them will not be sent, under the present arrangements, until near the commencement of the next session. It will be a great accommodation to members, and a great benefit to the country, to have the public documents promptly delivered. I am informed by the gentleman who is in charge of the folding room, that the pages could be well employed there, and that their employment would much expedite the delivery of the documents. I therefore offer the resolution which I have indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. PETTIT in the chair.) The Chair is of opinion that the resolution is not in order, under the resolution which was yesterday adopted by the two Houses of Congress.

Mr. MORTON. I believe the Chair is not bound to give the reasons for a decision; but I should like to know on what grounds he decides my resolution to be out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Let the Secretary read the resolution of the two Houses to the Senate.

The Secretary read as follows:

"Resolved, That the time fixed by the resolution of the 1st of July for the adjournment of the present session of Congress be, and the same is hereby, extended to Monday, August the 7th, at eight o'clock, a. m.: Provided, That no motion other than to adjourn shall be taken by either House after the hour of four o'clock, p. m., this day, (Friday.)"

Mr. MORTON. I do not wish to call into judgment the correctness of the decision of the Chair; but, in order to test the opinion of the Senate upon the question, I respectfully appeal from the decision.

Mr. WELLER. It seems to me that the resolution which has been read applies exclusively to legislative business—I mean that sort of business which requires the action of both branches of Congress. If that construction be not given to it, I do not see how the Senate can go into Executive session, and receive motions there; because, if we do go into Executive session, as a matter of course the business transacted there will be by motion. Why is it that we can do that business? It is because Executive business belongs exclusively to the Senate. Now, the motion made by my friend from Florida is to continue the pages in office. That being a subject which is under the exclusive control of the Senate, I apprehend it is perfectly in order. The Senate, I think, would have a right now, if they saw proper to make an appropriation out of their own contingent fund towards the payment of any of their officers, because that is a subject under the exclusive control of the Senate. We must look, sir, to the intention of those who offered the original resolution which has been adopted by the two Houses. It was to prevent the agitation of any new questions, or to prevent the passage of any measure, by either branch of Congress, during to-day or Monday; but upon any question under the exclusive control of the Senate, I apprehend the power of the Senate is unimpaired by that resolution. So that I suppose the proper construction to be given to it is, that it applies only to that sort of business which requires the joint action of Congress—the action of both branches. The resolution introduced by the Senator from Florida requires no action on the part of the other branch of Congress, but relates to a subject under the exclusive control of this body; and, therefore, I think it is entirely in order.

Mr. BRIGHT. I respectfully deny the right of the Chair to entertain any legislative motion. After having agreed to the resolution from the House of Representatives, it would be bad faith to act on any legislative proposition. I am surprised that Senators should insist upon it. It is useless to make the effort, for there is less than a quorum present, and I shall feel compelled to call for a division.

Mr. WELLER. Properly speaking, legislative action requires the cooperation of both branches of Congress. By the Constitution the legislative power is vested in the Senate and House of Representatives. Therefore, when you speak of legislative business, you speak of that business which requires the action of both branches of Congress. Here is a resolution which does not propose action by the legislative department of the Government. It simply proposes action, on the part of the Senate, in regard to its own officers, in regard to those who are under the exclusive control of the Senate. It is a resolution proposing that the pages and folders of the Senate—who are officers of this body—shall be put upon duty at a certain compensation for the next sixty days. That is not, in my judgment, legislative business within the meaning of the Constitution.

Mr. BRIGHT. Admitting that the Senator is right, I think that, under a law which has been passed at this session, no such resolution can be adopted. We passed a law declaring that no officers of this body should be paid extra compensation for any services they might render; and, therefore, on that ground alone the resolution is out of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state the question. The Senator from Florida moves a resolution to continue the employment of the pages of the Senate in the folding room for sixty days after the adjournment at their usual compensation. The Chair decides it to be out of order. From that decision the Senator from Florida takes an appeal. The question is, "Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate?"

Mr. DODGE, of Iowa. I trust the argument of the Senator from California has satisfied the Chair that he is in error in respect to this matter. In general, the present occupant of the chair [Mr. PETTIT] is right in all his actions; but I think he is clearly wrong in this instance. The resolution of the two Houses has no relation whatever to our contingent fund or to our pages. We can go on transacting that sort of senatorial business just as though no such resolution had been adopted. I hope the Chair will reconsider the matter, and reverse his decision.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair prefers leaving it to the Senate.

Mr. STUART. This exact question was decided by the President of this body this morning. I came in here with three memorials which had been referred to me, as a member of one of the standing committees, and simply asked to be allowed to report them to the Senate without any recommendation. The President of this body decided that it could not be done. Now, in order to get rid of all talk about this matter, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. WELLER. I beg leave to inquire whether that would carry the resolution with it? A remarkable decision on that point was made yesterday by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. WALKER] when he occupied the chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution has not been received, and it cannot go on the table until after it is received.

Mr. BRIGHT. Has the Chair entertained the proposition?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has stated that it was not in order, and, therefore, it has not been received.

Mr. BRIGHT. Then the only question is on the appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion has been made to lay that appeal on the table.

Mr. BRIGHT. No such motion can be made under our rules.

Mr. CHASE. I make the point of order that a proposition to lay the appeal on the table is a motion, and cannot be received, and cannot be acted on. No appeal can be taken; no motion to lay an appeal on the table can be taken. The Chair is simply to carry out the order that has been made by the two Houses, that no motion shall be taken, and he can receive none.

Mr. STUART. I have no doubt that the Senator from Ohio is entirely right. The Chair cannot entertain any motion at all. That is undoubtedly the true construction.

Mr. DAWSON, (to the Presiding Officer.) You are a perfect dictator this morning, and can do as you please. [Laughter.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the chair is by no means a parliamentarian, never having made the rules a study; but it struck him very forcibly that the resolution was not in order; but not wishing to exercise dictatorial authority, he did not undertake to deny the right of appeal.

Mr. DAWSON. You have a great deal of the talent about you. Exercise it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the sense of the Senate be that the appeal shall not be entertained, the Chair will not receive it.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

A message was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. WEBSTER, his Secretary. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The message is of an Executive character.

Mr. WALKER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Executive business.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. I object. Is that motion in order?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Our legislative session is closed; and I suppose we can go on with Executive business.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. It has been decided that we can make no motion except to adjourn.

Mr. DOUGLAS. That applies evidently to legislative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair decides that a motion for Executive session is in order. The resolution which has been referred to is appertained to legislative business.

Mr. JONES, of Tennessee. Well, sir, you have the power; we cannot appeal.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate accordingly proceeded to the consideration of Executive business; and after some time spent therein, the doors were reopened, and the Senate adjourned until eight o'clock on Monday morning.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, August 5, 1854.

The House met at ten o'clock, a. m. Prayer by Rev. HENRY SLICER.

ENROLLED BILLS.

Mr. GREEN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled bills of the following titles; which were signed by the Speaker:

An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1855;

An act for the relief of William Curran;

An act providing a pension to Captain Thomas Porter;

An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the year ending June 30, 1855;

An act granting the right of way to the Maysville and Benicia Railroad Company through and over the grounds of the United States at Benicia, in California;

An act to repeal the first proviso of the fourth section of an act entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," approved September 28, 1850.

The SPEAKER. If the House will allow the Chair he will state that there are a number of bills to be reported by the Committee on Enrolled Bills; also a number of messages from the Senate, and from the President of the United States which should be received before the time of adjournment. The Senate meet at twelve o'clock, and he would suggest that the House take a recess until that time, when, perhaps, more business may be done.

Mr. CHANDLER. I think one o'clock will be soon enough. I would suggest one o'clock, and hope there will be no objection.

There was no objection; and the Speaker announced that the House had taken a recess until one o'clock, p. m.

At half past twelve o'clock the Speaker took the chair, and said: The proposition which was assented to by the House was, that it should take a recess until one o'clock. That could not have been done regularly under the joint resolution of the two Houses. There is a single bill which must necessarily be signed by the Speaker and returned to the Senate while that body is in session. The Chair understands the Senate will adjourn in the course of a few minutes, and unless the bill is signed by the Speaker, it cannot become a law. The Chair does not think there is anything irregular in the proceeding, and if that be the opinion, he will sign the bill.

Several MEMBERS. That's right.

Mr. GREEN then, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported as correctly enrolled a bill constituting a land district in the State of Florida, to be called the district of Florida; which was signed by the Speaker.

At one o'clock the Speaker again called the House to order, and a message was received from the President of the United States, by SIMON WEBSTER, Esq., his Private Secretary, notifying the House that he did, on the 4th instant, approve and sign bills of the following titles:

An act to carry into effect a treaty between the United States and Great Britain, signed on the 5th day of June, 1854;

An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the year ending June 30, 1855;

An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department, for the year ending the 30th of June, 1855;

An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending June 30, 1855;

A joint resolution making appropriations for the payment of those entitled to the benefit of the resolution of the House of Representatives of the United States, passed August 3, 1854, voting extra compensation to the pages, folders, and others; and

An act to repeal the first proviso of the fourth section of an act entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," approved September 28, 1850.

Also sundry private bills.

A message was received from the Senate, by Asbury Dickinson, Esq., their Secretary, informing the House that that body had been notified by the President that he had approved and signed sundry bills.

Mr. PHILLIPS. The Journal of yesterday has not been read, and I would inquire of the Chair whether the message of the President on the river and harbor bill is spread upon it?

The SPEAKER. It is a constitutional requisition that the message shall be spread upon the Journal.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I have made this inquiry that there might be a certainty in the matter.

The SPEAKER. The bill and message will both be spread upon the Journal.

Mr. PHILLIPS. I desire to make a further inquiry of the Chair. The Constitution provides that on the reception of such a message the House shall proceed to consider it. We know that there is now no quorum present for the transaction of business. The question I desire to submit is, whether it would be proper to enter a motion in the minutes to consider that message, and have that motion lay over until the next session? In other words, it is very evident that the mere sending in of a message vetoing a bill is not the end of the matter. The Constitution looks to some future action. Then is it more formal, that at the session at which the message is received, there should be a motion for the purpose of considering it? Or, if anything occur to render the consideration improper, would it be better to permit it to go over to the next session?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that under the joint resolution fixing the day of adjournment, a motion of that kind would not be in order. At the time the message was received there was a quorum present. Soon afterwards the House found itself without a quorum. No motion was made, nor action taken on the message; but under the provision of the Constitution in regard to veto messages, the Chair thinks that the message and the bill will go upon the Journal. No action can be now had under the circumstances upon the message.

Mr. PHILLIPS. As to one suggestion which fell from the Speaker, I have to say that, in my recollection, the resolution for the adjournment only refers to votes on propositions. Now, I do not propose that any vote shall be taken in this matter.

The SPEAKER. In the Chair's recollection, the words of the resolution are, that no motion shall be made after four o'clock, p. m., yesterday, except to adjourn.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I wish to say a word in relation to the matter of fact stated by the Speaker. My recollection differs from his. I think, at the time the message was received, there was no quorum present; but I agree with the Speaker, that if there was not a quorum, no message could be received, for the reason that there was no House to receive it. My recollection is founded upon this: that just prior to the announcement of the message, the fact was shown that there was no quorum, and there was no quorum from that time on until the House adjourned. I may be mistaken about this, but the record will show the true state of the case.

The SPEAKER. The present occupant of the chair was not in it at the moment the message was received. The Chair recollects that very soon after he came in, the House was without a quorum; but if the message was received without objection, it is to be presumed that there was a quorum.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I stated that the message was received while the yeas and nays were being called upon some proposition then before the House, and that, as the Journal will show, upon that proposition no quorum voted. The call of the roll was suspended until the message was received.

Mr. PHILLIPS. We refused to suspend the call.

Mr. CAMPBELL. No, sir; the roll call was suspended until the message was received.

Mr. FLORENCE. The gentlemen from Ohio is right. The call of the roll was temporarily suspended.

Mr. HIBBARD. I distinctly remember that there had been no ascertainment that there was no quorum present until after the message had been received.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will make a statement of facts as given to him by the Clerk, and he presumes it will be in coincidence with the recollection of gentlemen now upon the floor. It is true that the roll was being called when the message was received, the call being suspended for that purpose. It is also true that when the call was through, the Chair announced that there was no quorum present; nevertheless, it may have been otherwise at the instant of receiving the message. That is a fact that we know could have existed; and as the message was received without objection, the Chair thinks it is properly before the body, and ought to go upon the Journal under the provision of the Constitution.

Mr. MILLSON. I do not exactly know what question is before the House. I suppose the reception of the message yesterday was entered upon the Journal of yesterday.

The SPEAKER. It was.

Mr. MILLSON. That being so, I do not see how the question can now be before the House.

The SPEAKER. There is no proposition before the House. There is merely a suggestion.

Mr. MILLSON. In regard to the suggestion of the Speaker, to the effect that, at the end of the call of the roll, there appeared to be no quorum present, I would say, that it by no means follows that there was no quorum at the time the message was received; because it might have been, that gentlemen, whose names had not been called at the time the message was announced, desirous of preventing the reception of the message, might have declined voting, for the purpose of showing that there was no quorum afterwards.

Mr. CAMPBELL. A forced presumption.

Mr. MILLSON. I do not believe that any such facts exist; but I am merely making the suggestion for the purpose of showing that if this message can be now considered, as not being regularly before the House, merely because, on a call of the roll, there did not appear to be any quorum present, it would give, at a time when party feeling might run high, an opportunity to gentlemen to defeat the express will of the Executive, by abstaining from voting. But, instead of meaning to cast an imputation on any gentleman, as to this having actually occurred, I take pleasure in saying, that I do not believe that a single gentleman on the other side did abstain from voting. My argument was merely going to show, as a question of principle, that the fact that, at the close of the roll call, there was no quorum present, would not, by any means, determine the fact that there was no quorum present at the time the message was received. That could only be determined by there being objection made. If objection were not made to the reception of the message, it is to be regarded as a message received by the House—a regularly constituted House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no doubt at all that the message is regularly before the House, and may be spread upon the Journal.

Mr. FLORENCE. If the House will indulge me in referring to the antecedent action of the House, I can explain the facts in a few minutes. The gentlemen will recollect that there was a motion made to adjourn; on which motion the yeas and nays were demanded, and a call ordered. We had proceeded with that call, and ascertained that there was no quorum present.

Mr. CAMPBELL. That was a call of the House.

Mr. FLORENCE. No, sir, it was not. It was intimated, and very well understood all round the House, that there was an important message from the President soon to be sent in. In order to retain the members present, a call of the House was ordered; and the call was being proceeded with when the message was received. These are the facts of the case. I recollect them very distinctly. I will be borne out, I think, by every gentleman who will refresh his memory. The call was being proceeded with, with the object in view to get in as many members as possible for the reception of the message.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FLORENCE] is mistaken—as the Chair thinks—in this, that the call of the House followed, not preceded, the reception of the message; and the object was to detain the House in session.

Mr. FLORENCE. I was coming to that fact. During the call of the House—

The SPEAKER, (interrupting.) The Journal will settle the point; and if gentlemen desire it, or if there be a question of order made at all, we will refer to the Journal, which cannot be mistaken.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania allow me to make a remark?

Mr. FLORENCE. Most certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I wish to make a suggestion. I do not see that there can be any difficulty in relation to this matter. It is very evident that the message is here. It goes to the Speaker's table, I suppose, and will be ready at the opening of the next session of Congress when Executive documents are being presented to the House. I see no necessity of any motion being made now. Whenever that message is laid before the House, the House will exercise its constitutional right of voting on the bill, and of determining whether they will, by a two-third vote, carry the measure independent of the veto. There is no necessity for any motion at all in respect to it.

Mr. FLORENCE. The Speaker was right. The call of the House was proceeded with after the message was received.

The SPEAKER. There is no doubt of it. Then there is no motion before the body.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I am only desirous of saying, in relation to this matter, that I differ with the President of the United States in the views which he expresses on this question. And at the appropriate time I want to place before this House and the country the reasons why I differ from him. It is due to myself—it is due to him—and it is due to us all—that I should state now that there can be no reason why, if Congress make appropriations for improvements on the shore of the Atlantic and Pacific, it should not also make appropriations for improvements in the interior. If you must have appropriations at all, let all share alike, all sections; if you are ready to quit all, I am with you.

The policy that he pursues of vetoing appropriations for interior improvements is wrong, if it is right to provide for those improvements anywhere. If we are to have appropriations for improvements upon the Atlantic and the Pacific, there is no reason why we should not have them in the interior. The Government becomes onerous to us, and injurious to us. It is wrong; I differ with him upon that point.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I had no idea of discussing any proposition connected with this veto message now. This is no time for that. But as the subject is brought up by others, I rise for the purpose of saying, that I strike hands with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RICHARDSON] upon the propositions he lays down. I have never been able yet to learn, by anything I have read or seen in the Constitution, why we cannot as properly take the money which belongs to the people of the States in common, and improve, for their benefit, the "inland seas"—our lakes and rivers—as well as the sea-board. Why treat with utter neglect those vast arteries of national commerce in the interior? I say to the House, and to gentlemen, that the time has come for making the rights of the great interior of this nation, against the combined power of the Executive, sustained by the interests of the sea-board, a test, and I shall be found standing with him, shoulder to shoulder, against all parties, against all influences, and against all powers that may oppose us.

Mr. PRATT. I call the gentleman to order. This discussion is not in order.

Mr. CLINGMAN. I was about to object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would state that there is no proposition before this body which is debatable.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I did not open any debate. Why shut down on me?

Mr. HIBBARD. If this debate is to continue, I want to say a word.

Mr. PRATT. We came here to transact such business as might be necessary, and I, for one, am not willing to sit here, and hear Buncombe speeches.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The gentleman may leave, if he chooses, for aught I care; and, as I have the floor, I call him to order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair at once states to the House that there is no proposition before the body to authorize this discussion. The Chair was disposed, so long as others felt inclined to do so, to allow gentlemen to make remarks.

Mr. HIBBARD. I will not object, if I am allowed one question. If this debate is to go on, I want a hand in it.

Mr. FLORENCE. I hope the House will allow me a moment.

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot allow discussion, unless it be by unanimous consent.

Mr. FLORENCE. I hope consent will be given.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hopes it will not be given, if the Chair may be allowed to express a hope. But the Chair would be happy to conform to the wishes of those present, as we have a leisure moment upon hand.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I did not intend to discuss the merits at all; nor would I have said one word had not others brought this matter before the House; and, to cut all hands off, I now move that the House adjourn.

Mr. HIBBARD. Will the gentleman just allow me to say that the friends of the President—

[Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not see but there is as many who desire to talk now, as when we are all together. [Laughter.] The gentleman from New Hampshire appeals to the gentleman from Ohio to allow him a moment.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I should be very happy to hear the gentleman from New Hampshire, who wishes to speak on behalf of the "friends of the President," or any other member present, upon this subject, as we are told there is nothing else for us to do. Before taking my seat, however, I desire to say a word more.

The SPEAKER. Is it the unanimous consent of the House that the gentleman from Ohio proceed with his remarks?

There being no objection,

Mr. CAMPBELL proceeded: I shall be very brief. I am perfectly willing to extend to others the right they extend to me. That has been my course uniformly upon all occasions. I was proceeding to say that the inland States were imposed upon. In the valley of the Mississippi, taking the Alleghany ridge as the dividing line, and embracing the country extending to the northern lakes, there is now more than half the population of the United States; and, as a matter of course, they have to bear more than one half of all the burdens of the General Government. They contribute more than one half of the money for the appropriations that are made for the benefit of the external commerce, for your light-houses, your navy, your coast survey, and other sea-board improvements; more than half of the money for the common defense and general welfare. Yet, sir, within about fifteen years we have had but one single bill of any consequence for the improvement of the rivers, lakes, and harbors of that immense valley.

Those who have come here from the West have, through their Representatives, without distinction of party, urged their claims for that section, and for all other measures of national improvement. For the purpose of showing that they have not been sectional in this matter, I refer to the fact that a few days since they voted for the Cape Fear river appropriation, which was not vetoed. Yet, sir, this very measure, which benefits the West, that has been carried through this House and through the Senate by the aid of the votes of the friends of the Executive, in each of which they have a majority of two to one, is stricken down by the power of one man! Ay, sir, and strange to tell, that very man pretends that the great principle which governs his Executive acts is that of "popular sovereignty!" How ridiculous to profess to make that the rule which has controlled his conduct on this occasion.

Now, sir, in this state of the case, as this question is not now in a condition in which it can be acted upon, and as it will come up the next session and be referred to the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, when it can be discussed, I close, by repeating, that I shall strike hands with the gentleman from Illinois, and all other men who will represent truly these interior interests without regard to party. I shall stand with men of any party, the unflinching friend of the wronged West, advocating the just demands of "popular sovereignty" against the tyranny of the veto power.

Mr. SMITH, of Alabama, obtained the floor.

Mr. CLINGMAN. I must object to this discussion going on further. There is no occasion for any more speeches.

Mr. HIBBARD. I hope the gentleman from North Carolina will withdraw his objection to allow me to say a word.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. SMITH] is entitled to the floor if the debate is to proceed.

Mr. HIBBARD. I did not come here this morning expecting that this matter was to come up now. The discussion is manifestly premature, and out of order. I do not propose to engage in it at this time; but after what has been said by the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Illinois, I desire to say that, at the proper time and place, the friends of the principles embodied in the President's message, will, I apprehend, be prepared to defend and maintain them as the doctrines of republican equality, based upon the Constitution itself, alike just to the whole country, North, South, East, and West, wronging no State or section. They are principles laid down by the fathers of the Democratic church, sanctioned over and over by the people of the country. I regard them as just in theory, and expedient in practice. As such, I repeat, their friends will be ready, at the proper time, to defend them. Sir, I am sorry to see a gentleman so fair-minded as the gentleman from Ohio usually is, make what seems an attempt to create sectional feeling between different portions of the country—something that looks like an appeal to the sectional feelings of the West. I do not think his intention is such, and I am quite sure his remarks will have no such effect at home, when the subject shall be examined and understood.

The doctrine of the message, as I understand it, would, by no means, preclude improvements for the West. It would allow such as are necessary and national. It would cut off those of a contrary character, many of which are found in this bill. It is this introduction of uncalculated and indefensible appropriations, this mixture of evil with good, that seems to have caused the defeat of the measure. The authority of Jackson will be invoked in vain, for anything in contravention of the principles of this message. Attempts to stimulate the people of any section against them, will, in the end, be equally fruitless. The sober second thought will be found in the future, as in the past, sound and efficient.

We have had political coalitions heretofore. Attempts at combinations of sectional elements for factious purposes are now being made in various quarters. With what success remains to be seen. They have never been ultimately profitable in the past. My own opinion is, that they will be equally futile and disastrous for their originators in the future. The gentleman from Ohio, on this occasion, makes advances to the gentleman from Illinois. He proposes a striking of hands for an onslaught upon the principles of the message. I will not assume to answer for the gentleman from Illinois. He is always able to speak and to act for himself. He has not heretofore been a favorer of coalitions, or of local excitements for purposes of faction and disorganization.

Mr. PRATT. I object to this discussion, and shall persist in the objection from a sense of duty. I shall yield to nobody. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken, and the House refused to adjourn; there being, on a division—ayes 11, noes 14.

Mr. PRATT. I object to all discussion of the question.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order. The Chair being called on, will enforce the rule.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Then, as we cannot speak to the matter, what is to be done?

The SPEAKER. By the resolution it seems that we are even deprived of a call of the House. Whether we have not the power, under the Constitution, to order one, is another question. Any fifteen members, the Speaker being one, may have a call of the House.

Mr. CLINGMAN. I think that message may come in from the President.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that there is no necessity for the House remaining longer in session.

Mr. SMITH, of Alabama. I suppose there is nothing particularly before the body?

The SPEAKER. There is no proposition at all before the body.

Mr. SMITH. In the early part of the session I intimated to my constituents that on some occasion I designed to examine and present my views in the form of a speech, on Mr. Marcy's celebrated letter in reference to Koszta. Various circumstances, Mr. Speaker, have operated on me, and I am not sure but that my modesty has been the predominant one of all, [laughter,] and I have been prevented making it here, though I have prepared myself with a great deal of care. I desire that I may have unanimous consent to print it as though it had been made on this occasion. There is not the slightest personality in it. It is a purely logical examination of the letter to which I have referred.

There was no objection; and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. BARKSDALE. I shall not enter into a discussion now, nor do I know that I shall do so at any other time, of the principles involved in the President's veto message. I wish, however, to notice a remark which fell from my friend from Illinois. We have heard of various combinations which have been recently formed in this country. Fusion between those who claimed to be Democrats and Whigs, Free-Soilers and Abolitionists. I have not been particularly astonished at these combinations and fusions and striking of hands. Nobody has been. But I must confess that I am somewhat astonished at the fusion we have witnessed here this morning, and I think the country will be astonished. Antipodes have met to-day. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CAMPBELL] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RICHARDSON] have "struck hands" in the American Congress. I congratulate my friend from Illinois in the company he places himself in this morning. He has fought a gallant and a glorious battle during this session of Congress against the gentleman from Ohio and his friends. He gained the victory, but after the victory has been gained, he surrenders his arms, and we now find him in foud, affectionate, and loving embrace with the gentleman from Ohio. Now, however worthy my friend from Ohio, personally, may be, I should dislike very much to go to my Democratic constituents—my friend from Illinois can speak for himself, but we have cooperated together as Democrats here; I suppose a Democrat in Mississippi would be a Democrat in Illinois, and vice versa—I should dislike very much to go to my Democratic friends in Mississippi, and tell them that I had struck hands with the gentleman from Ohio. Now, I do not know how it may be with my friend from Illinois.

Mr. RICHARDSON. It is all right.

Mr. BARKSDALE. It may be all right with him, but it would not be all right with me. These are all the remarks I intended to make, and I will not detain the House longer.

Mr. STRAUB. I also ask the unanimous consent of the House present to put upon record a few remarks upon a subject, sir, which is a little nearer my heart than any other which has been discussed during this session.

[Cries of "Hear him!" "Hear him!"]

Mr. STRAUB. I have but a word to say. All I ask is the privilege to publish a few remarks in favor of the veteran soldiers who fought, and bled, and gained the victory for our country in 1812. [Laughter.]

[Cries of "Agreed!" "Agreed!"]

[Mr. STRAUB offered the following resolution Resolved, That the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union be discharged from the further consideration of bill No. 428, granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States.

Mr. STRAUB said, that it was his intention to put the bill on its immediate passage; that the discrimination made by the pension laws against the veterans of 1812 was alike unjust and unreasonable. Not a word of complaint should be uttered against the bounties allowed to the soldiers serving in Mexico; on the contrary, I am in favor of that and all pension laws now in existence, and, indeed, the reasons which sustain those pensions operate with quite equal force in favor of the soldiers of the British war of 1812. Did not the soldiers of that war expose their lives and personal safety in the contest with the joint powers of Great Britain as much as those in the Mexican war? Was it not as gallant, brave, and patriotic for Americans to contend against the then acknowledged mistress of the world upon sea and land, as it was against weak, undisciplined, half famished, and powerless Mexico?

It was the glorious victories on land and sea gained by our gallant soldiers and mariners in the war of 1812, that stamped our national character with the iron heel of invincibility, and taught the nations of Europe that they had to deal with no infantile foe. The success of the American Army in that sanguinary struggle compelled the British lion to crouch to the American eagle, and satisfied all nations that America was more than a match for Great Britain. The blood that flowed at Bridgewater, Lundy's Lane, and New Orleans, was as rich and as precious as the kindred blood that watered the fields of Buena Vista, Cerra Gorda, and Contreras. Why, then, should any invidious distinction be made?

The veterans of the war of 1812 are growing old, are fast approaching that bourne from whence no traveler returns. They have long been neglected, and as they aided to cover the Army and the flag of our country in its darkest hour with honor and with glory, shall they be spurned from the doors of Congress? Let no such crying injustice be done. The soldiers of the Revolution suffered for nearly half a century the pains and mortifications of poverty and distress. Our nation was then poor and unable to afford adequate assistance, now it is rich, great and powerful. Your Treasury is overflowing, and your territory so vastly extended, that it affords a world within itself. Hundreds of thousands of miles square, containing some hundreds of millions of acres of wild lands, are now owned by the Government. Under these circumstances, shall it play the miser and the ungrateful requiter of patriotic services? I trust not; it would shame us in the eyes of the world.

It is a humiliating fact that, notwithstanding the boasted clamor we make of freedom and protection to American citizens, the duty here due the soldier and patriot is too often overlooked, the reward for services of the men who fought and bled and gained the victories under the American flag, which has made this the greatest nation under God's footstool, which guaranteed to the American people liberty and independence, and which secured to the members on this and the other floor of Congress the high and honorable position they occupy. This fact seems to be passed as the idle wind, whilst every other country (no matter how despotic) rewards the services of the soldier as well, if not better, and with more promptness and charity, than does the Government of the United States. In many other countries, the victorious officer or soldier is immediately promoted, and provision made for his wants and comforts during his natural life. Is it not to be deplored that we cannot give the Government of the United States credit for awarding justice to those of our soldiers whose best days were spent in the cause of their country; and, I repeat, while the United States Treasury is overflowing, and millions of money and acres of land are being continually voted to the States and to corporations already enriched by such appropriations; whilst the old soldier, poor and disabled, with means inadequate to protect him from absolute suffering, is denied a small, and to this Government, a beggarly pittance of a few acres of land, which to it would be as a grain of sand taken from the sea shore, or a drop of water abstracted from the bosom of the mighty ocean. I am of opinion that the soldiers engaged in the Indian war should be likewise rewarded with bounties. Their services were perilous, onerous, and valuable. They undoubtedly deserve the favor and patronage of their country.

The marine corps, too, are entitled to a like compensation. Its services have been severe and praiseworthy, and why should not men who fight upon sea be equally honored and rewarded with those who fight upon land? The history of our country will prove that the Indian fighters and marine corps have, at all times, not only sustained their own honor, in an eminent degree, but it also proves that no service in war is so adventurous or hazardous as that against the savage Indians. No home, no place of ambush, is free from danger. Many instances might be cited, too, to prove the bravery and gallantry of our marines in the war of 1812—suffice it to say, that the victory on Lake Erie, under the command of the gallant Perry, is sufficient of itself to cover them with laurels and with glory. In Mexico, too, they bore themselves worthy of their high calling—always true to their duty, and mindful of their mission to gallantly defend the flag of their country when occasion required it, no matter how far from home, or upon what ocean. It will be remembered that many soldiers of the war of 1812 were subjected to peculiar hardships and privations. The army was raw and ill disciplined, the officers without any practical knowledge of the art and science of war; clothing bad, subsistence worse, and the consequent loss of health inevitable; the fighting was obstinate and sanguinary, the fields bloody, and everything connected with the war painful and deplorable. Many of the regulars, volunteers, and militia, who served in the war of 1812, exposed themselves to the utmost privations; and if Congress were to fail to recognize and make amends to them, disgrace by such wanton negligence would certainly follow. I trust, ere the present session closes, justice may be done to those who are yet living, and to the heirs of those upon whom the cold grave has closed, and whose earthly career has ceased forever.]

Mr. RICHARDSON. I have but a single remark to make in reply to the gentleman from Mississippi, [Mr. BARKSDALE.] He congratulates me that I find myself in company with strange bed-fellows. I have laid down the position upon which I stand, and I stand there, I care not who stands with me, or who against me. I form my own opinion upon every subject, and I act upon that without regard to the opinion of anybody else. I repeat, here, to the House, that I do not care what the President may think upon this, or that, or any other subject. The policy of the Government which allows appropriations to the sea-board, and claims them to be constitutional, and yet denies them to the interior, is wrong and unjust, and I condemn it. I do not care who goes with me. As for the positions which I take, I assume them for myself. The position which I take I assume for myself. I assume it here and elsewhere, and everywhere. I have voted on these principles. Nor are they the opinions of a day. When Congress determines to strike down appropriations for everything in the shape of public improvements, and to leave them entirely to the several States, when it discontinues its appropriations for New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, and every other place, for light-houses, and buoys, and custom-houses, and coast surveys, I will then stand by the gentlemen who support this veto, and will go with them. But when gentlemen come and say, we are for these things, but we are against those things which are for the benefit of internal commerce, I denounce that policy as unjust and wrong. When you claim the right constitutionally to make appropriations for the sea-board, and deny the same to the interior, I do not care who stands with me or who stands against me, but I oppose that policy. I walk the track in opposition to it, and I care not whether I have to trudge it alone. The position I assume is just, it is right, and I will stand by it, I do not care who is against it or who is for it.

Mr. BARKSDALE. Will the gentleman from Illinois yield me the floor for a question?

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly.

Mr. BARKSDALE. I desire to ask the gentleman from Illinois what works he regards as national, what as local, and what works he approves? Nothing more than that.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I will answer the gentleman. My opinion about this thing is that I follow a safe precedent. I think that General Jackson was about as good a man to strike hands with on this subject as could be found in the country.

Mr. FLORENCE. He is very good authority with our people.

Mr. RICHARDSON. And he is pretty good authority with mine. When I go home and tell my constituents that I stand where General Jackson stood, it is no disgrace to me to say that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. CAMPBELL] follows in the wake of the lights laid down by him, and that he says it is right to follow him.

Now, I have one single thing further to say. I have said that if appropriations were to be made at all, I was in favor of appropriations for the improvement of the western rivers. And I may ask—and ask triumphantly—if the great Mississippi river is not a national stream—running through and touching, as it does, some ten States of this Union? What is the Atlantic more?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Will the gentleman from Illinois allow me to propound a question to the honorable member from Mississippi, [Mr. BARKSDALE?]

Mr. RICHARDSON. Certainly.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I suppose that the gentleman admits that the National Government has a right to protect the national commerce, and that the light-house system, the coast survey, and all these various improvements, arise out of, and are carried out on, that principle. Now, I want the gentleman from Mississippi to tell me when and where the trade which comes from the constituents of the gentleman from Illinois, which is started upon the upper waters of the Mississippi, and floats on that river, becomes a national commerce? Is it when it gets down into his State? Or does it not become a national commerce, and worthy of national attention, until it gets to the Balize? I suppose that whenever it gets to the point to which the light-houses and coast survey extend, the gentleman then finds the power in the Constitution to make appropriations for its protection. I should like to know his doctrine on this point.

Mr. RUFFIN. I believe all hands have had something to say upon this subject. It was distinctly understood that we were to do nothing here but to adjourn, beyond the signing of bills. I object to any further speaking, and I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. BARKSDALE. I would like to make a remark.

Mr. PURYEAR. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina rises to a question of order, and the gentleman from Mississippi will suspend.

Mr. RUFFIN. I insist upon the motion.

Mr. PURYEAR. The gentleman had not the floor to make that motion; the gentleman from Mississippi was upon the floor.

The SPEAKER. The Chair overrules the question of order. It is true the gentleman from Mississippi was upon the floor proceeding to discuss something out of order. Neither the gentleman from Mississippi nor the gentleman from Illinois have the right to the floor for the purpose of discussing anything. But the Chair was disposed to indulge gentlemen, so long as there was no objection.

Mr. RUFFIN. There are several gentlemen who want to make speeches; but it was distinctly understood that nothing was to be done here, and we did not come here to do business. I insist upon my motion.

The question was taken on the motion; and, upon a division, there were—ayes 11, noes 15.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I want to say a word.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order, if objection is made.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I was upon the floor, but yielded it to the gentleman from Mississippi.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from North Carolina arrested the discussion.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I was proceeding by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. And by unanimous consent alone can this discussion go forward.

Mr. RUFFIN. I object.

The SPEAKER. Then no discussion is in order.

Mr. FLORENCE. I wish to make a personal explanation.

The SPEAKER. A personal explanation is out of order.

Mr. FLORENCE. I suppose it can be made by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. It can.

Mr. PRATT. I object.

Mr. RICHARDSON. I hope the House will allow me to write out a single remark I wish to make, as it is important to the country, and—
[Cries of "Order!" "Order!"]

Mr. FLORENCE. I beg the gentleman from Connecticut will withdraw his objection, as my explanation will not occupy two minutes.

Mr. PRATT. I cannot.

Mr. FLORENCE. I think it will be better for you and your constituents.

The SPEAKER. Is it the unanimous consent of the House that the gentleman from Pennsylvania make a personal explanation.

Mr. PRATT. No.

The SPEAKER. How many minutes may he speak?

[A Voice. None at all.]

Mr. CURTIS. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. FLORENCE. Well, sir, I suppose I may have the privilege of printing my remarks. I desire—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman must remember that when the gentleman is called to order by a dozen gentlemen all around the Hall, it is the duty of the Chair to enforce the rule.

Mr. FLORENCE. I certainly have great respect for the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that very well; but the gentleman seemed to be inattentive to the objections which were made to his proceeding.

The question was then put; and Mr. CURTIS's motion was agreed to; and Thereupon (at half past one o'clock) the House adjourned until Monday at half-past seven o'clock, a. m.

IN SENATE.

Monday, August 7, 1854.

The Senate met at eight o'clock, a. m.

Prayer by Rev. HENRY SLICER.

On motion by Mr. MORTON, the reading of the Journal of Saturday was dispensed with.

THANKS TO PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

Mr. MORTON, (Mr. BRIGHT temporarily occupying the chair.) Mr. President, I beg leave to submit a resolution for the consideration of the Senate, which I know will not be ruled out of order under the joint resolution of the two Houses. It is a resolution which will meet with a cordial response from every voice here present; and even if we had a full Senate, I confidently believe there would not be a single dissent to its adoption. The resolution is:

Resolved, That the unanimous thanks of the Senate be, and the same are hereby, tendered to the Hon. David R. Atchison for the very able, dignified, and impartial manner in which he has presided over the deliberations of the Senate during this present session now about to terminate.

The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Mr. ATCHISON, having resumed the chair, said: Senators, before we adjourn, I wish to return my thanks for the compliment contained in the resolution just adopted; and I desire you to take for granted that everything which ought to be said upon the occasion is said. And now, in pursuance of the resolution adopted by the two Houses of Congress, I declare the Senate adjourned sine die.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Monday, August 7, 1854.

The House met at half past seven o'clock, a. m. Prayer by Rev. HENRY SLICER.

At eight o'clock the SPEAKER called the House to order, and said: In obedience to the joint resolution of the two Houses of Congress, this House stands adjourned sine die.

Thus ended the first session of the Thirty-Third Congress.

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

PUBLIC ACTS OF THE THIRTY-THIRD CONGRESS

OF THE

UNITED STATES,

Passed at the First Session, which was begun and held in the City of Washington, in the District of Columbia, on Monday, the 5th day of December, 1853, and ended on Monday, the 7th day of August, 1854.

FRANKLIN PIERCE, President; DAVID R. ATCHISON, President of the Senate pro tempore; LINN BOYD, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

PUBLIC, I.—An Act concerning the District Courts of the United States in California.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a district judge for the southern judicial district heretofore established in the State of California; and that the sessions of the district court at San José, Stockton, and Sacramento are hereby abolished. And in case of the sickness or other inability of the district judge for the southern district of California to hold the terms of the district court at the places prescribed by law, or either of them, it shall be lawful for the district judge of the northern district of California to hold the said sessions of the district court for the southern district, or any of them. And in case the district judge for the northern judicial district of California shall, from sickness or other cause, be unable to hold the sessions of the district court for the northern district of California at the times and places appointed by law, or either of them, it shall and may be lawful for the district judge for the southern district of California to hold said sessions of the district court for the northern district of California, or any or either of them.

LINN BOYD,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

D. R. ATCHISON,

President of the Senate pro tempore.

APPROVED, January 18, 1854.

FRANKLIN PIERCE.

PUBLIC, II.—An Act to continue in force the act entitled "An act to ascertain and settle the Private Land Claims in the State of California," and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That an act entitled "An act to ascertain and settle the private land claims in the State of California," passed March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, be, and the same is hereby, continued in force for one year from and after the third day of March, A. D. eighteen hundred and fifty-four, for the purpose of enabling the board of commissioners appointed under said act to determine the claims presented to said board under the act aforesaid.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the said board of commissioners may appoint one or more, not exceeding three, competent persons to act as commissioners in the taking of testimony to be used before said board, who shall receive a compensation to be fixed by said board, but not to exceed ten dollars per diem.

APPROVED, January 18, 1854.

PUBLIC, III.—An Act to provide a place for the holding of the Courts of the United States in the Southern District of New York, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it shall be lawful for the Secretary of the Interior to provide by lease, from year to year, or for a term of years, at his discretion, rooms in the city of New York for holding the courts of the United States for the southern district of New York, and for the accommodation of the judges of the said courts, and of the district attorney and marshal of the United States for the southern district of New York, and for the clerks of the circuit and district courts of said district.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That all orders, venires, writs, process, and recognizances in the circuit or district court of the United States for the southern district of New York may be dated, tested, and made returnable at the United States court room, in the city of New York, and whether made returnable at the United States court room, or at the City Hall of the city of New York, shall be in fact returnable at, and shall be returned to, the court room in the city of New York where, at the time of such return, the court shall be actually held; and that the said circuit and district courts for the southern district of New York shall be held, and trials in actions therein had, at the court rooms that may, from time to time, be provided for that purpose.

APPROVED, February 2, 1854.

PUBLIC, IV.—An Act granting the Franking Privilege to the Superintendent of the Coast Survey and the Assistant in charge of the office of said Coast Survey.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Superintendent of the Coast Survey and the assistant in charge of the office of the Coast Survey shall be authorized to receive and transmit, free of postage, by the mails, all letters and documents in relation to their public duties.

APPROVED, February 2, 1854.

PUBLIC, V.—An Act to constitute Quincy, in the State of Illinois, a Port of Delivery.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Quincy, in the State of Illinois, shall be, and is hereby, constituted a port of delivery, and shall be subject to the same regulations and restrictions as other ports of delivery in the United States; and there shall be appointed a surveyor of customs, to reside at said port, who shall, in addition to his own duties, perform the duties and receive the salary and emoluments of surveyor prescribed by the act of Congress, approved on the second of March, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, providing for the payment of duties on imported goods at certain ports therein mentioned, entitled "An act allowing the duties on foreign merchandise imported into Pittsburg, Wheeling, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Nashville, and Natchez, to be secured and paid at those places," and the said city of Quincy and the said port of delivery be, and is hereby, annexed to and made a part of the collection district of New Orleans; and all the facilities and privileges afforded by said act of Congress of the second of March, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, be, and hereby are, extended to the said port of Quincy.

APPROVED, February 2, 1854.

PUBLIC, VI.—An Act giving further time for satisfying Claims for Bounty Lands, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to provide for satisfying claims for bounty lands for military services in the late war with Great Britain, and for other purposes," approved July twenty-seven, eighteen hundred and forty-two, and also the two acts approved July twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and thirty-five, therein and thereby revived, shall be, and the same are hereby, revived and continued in force for five years, to be computed from the twenty-sixth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three.

APPROVED, February 8, 1854.

PUBLIC, VII.—An Act to regulate the Disbursement of the Contingent Fund of the Senate, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the moneys which have been, or may hereafter be, appropriated for the compensation of members and officers, and for the contingent expenses of the Senate, shall be paid at the Treasury on requisition drawn by the Secretary of the Senate, and shall be kept, disbursed, and accounted for by him, according to law; and the said Secretary shall be deemed a disbursing officer.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That in lieu of the bond now required by law to be given by the Secretary of the Senate, he shall give bond to the United States, within ten days after the passage of this act, with one or more sureties, to be approved by the Comptroller of the Treasury, in the penal sum of twenty thousand dollars, with condition for the faithful application and disbursement of such funds as may be drawn from the Treasury under this act; which bond shall be deposited in the Comptroller's office; and it shall be the duty of each and every Secretary of the Senate who may hereafter be chosen, to give bond as aforesaid, within thirty days after he enters upon the duties of his office, and before making any requisition as aforesaid.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the said Secretary of the Senate to deposit the moneys aforesaid which may come into his hands with the depository who may be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, for other disbursing officers in the city of Washington; and all payments on account of the pay and mileage of members of the Senate, and all payments of their officers, and for the contingent expenses of the Senate, shall be by drafts drawn by the Secretary on such depository.

APPROVED, February 10, 1854.

PUBLIC, VIII.—An Act to indemnify the State of Indiana for the failure of title to a Township of Land granted to said State on her admission into the Union in eighteen hundred and sixteen.

Whereas, by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, made January twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, the State of Indiana has lost one out of the two townships of land granted to her for the use of a State university by act of April sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixteen, and has become liable to refund to a private corporation the proceeds of said township heretofore appropriated to the support of the State University of Indiana: for remedy thereof:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Governor of the State of Indiana be authorized to select out of lands of the United States, within the said State, now subject to private entry, nineteen thousand and forty acres of land in legal subdivisions, and shall certify the same to the Secretary of the Interior, who shall, forthwith, on receipt of said certificate, issue, to the State of Indiana, patents for said lands: Provided, The proceeds of said lands, when sold, shall be, and forever remain, a fund for the use of the Indiana University.

APPROVED, February 23, 1854.

PUBLIC, IX.—An Act to extend the Limits of the Port of New Orleans.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the port of New Orleans be so extended as to embrace the right bank of the Mississippi river, for the same distance up said bank as it now extends on the left bank.

APPROVED, February 23, 1854.

PUBLIC, X.—An Act supplemental to an act entitled "An act to ascertain and settle the Private Land Claims in the State of California," approved March third, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following named persons, viz: Henry C. Boggs, Levi W. Hardman, Wiley Sneed, Stephen Broadhurst, Smith and Kristeen, George H. Woodman, Berthald and Lorrin, Fisher and Guiddildt, and William Clark, or either of them, or their representatives, may, within six months after the passage of this act, present their claims to the commissioners who were appointed under the provisions of the act to which this is a supplement; and the said commissioners are hereby empowered to hear and dispose of the same as effectually as though the said claims had been presented in due time under the thirteenth section of the aforesaid act.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the persons named in this act shall be limited and confined, in their claims, to purchases made of Don Salvador Valligo, a Mexican grantee, for a part of the place known as "Entre Napa," and situate in Napa county, State of California. And the said commissioners shall be satisfied that the said persons named derived title to their respective claims previous to the third day of March, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said persons named shall be entitled to no privilege not conferred on claimants under the original act, but as to an extension of time in which their claims may be respectively made to the said commissioners.

APPROVED, February 23, 1854.

PUBLIC, XI.—An Act for the extension of the Preëmption Privilege in the State of California.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the act of the fourth of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, granting preëmption rights to settlers on the public lands, as modified and made applicable to the State of California by the act of the third of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, shall be further modified by extending the provisions of the third proviso in the sixth section of the aforesaid act of the third of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, to settlements made prior to and within two years after the passage of this act.

APPROVED, March 1, 1854.

PUBLIC, XII.—An Act for the relief of the United States Troops who were sufferers by the recent disaster to the Steamship San Francisco.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall be paid, under the direction of the President, to each of the officers, non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates, who, on the twenty-first day of December, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, embarked at New York, under orders for California, on the steamship San Francisco, and who was on board that vessel on the occasion of her recent disaster at sea, and to Lieutenant Francis Key Murray, and any other officer or seaman of the United States Navy, who was on board the said steamship under orders, a sum equal in amount to his pay and allowances for eight months.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That if any such officer, non-commissioned officer, musician, or private shall have died before receiving such payment, from any cause consequent upon said disaster, his widow, if one survive him, and if not, then his minor children, if any there be, shall be paid a sum equal in amount to six months' pay and allowances of the deceased. And that the widows and minor children of these officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates who perished by this disaster, or who died from disease in consequence thereof, shall be allowed pensions in the same manner in all respects as if the said officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates had been killed in battle.

APPROVED, March 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XIII.—An Act for the relief of Settlers on Lands reserved for Railroad purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That every settler on public lands which have been or may be withdrawn from market in consequence of proposed railroads, and who had settled thereon prior to such withdrawal, shall be entitled to preëmption at the ordinary minimum to the lands settled on and cultivated by them: Provided, They shall prove up their rights according to such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, and pay for the same before the day that may be fixed by the President's proclamation for the restoration of said lands to market.

APPROVED, March 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XIV.—An Act to amend an act entitled "An act to divide the State of Arkansas into two Judicial Districts," approved March the third, eighteen hundred and fifty-one.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That upon conviction of offenders in the western judicial district of the State of Arkansas, for offenses to which punishment by confinement in the penitentiary is annexed, it shall be lawful for the court before whom convictions have or may be had, to sentence convicts to undergo imprisonment in the penitentiary house of the State situated in the eastern judicial district, in the same manner as though the penitentiary house was situated in the western judicial district of the State of Arkansas; and the counties of Sevier and Sebastian in the said State are hereby added to, and made a part of, the western judicial district.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That when any person shall be convicted, in the district court for the western district of Arkansas, of any offense, committed after the passage of this act, the punishment or part of the punishment whereof is imprisonment by the laws now existing, the said punishment or part of the punishment shall be confinement and imprisonment with hard labor for the same length of time, and shall be carried into effect as provided in the preceding section.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That nothing contained in the twenty-fifth section of an act entitled "An act to regulate intercourse with the Indian tribes, and preserve peace on the frontiers," approved thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, shall be construed to extend or apply to said Indian country any of the laws enacted for the District of Columbia, and that nothing contained in the twentieth section of the said act, which provides for the punishment of offenses therein specified, shall be construed to extend to any Indian committing said offenses in the Indian country or to any Indian committing any offense in the Indian country who has been punished by the local law of the tribe, or in any case, where, by treaty stipulations, the exclusive jurisdiction over such offenses may now or hereafter be secured to said Indian tribes, respectively; and anything in said act inconsistent with this act be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That any white person who shall hereafter set fire, or attempt to set fire, to any house, outhouse, cabin, stable, or other building, in said Indian country, to whomsoever belonging; and any Indian who shall set fire to any house, outhouse, cabin, stable, or other building, in said Indian country, belonging to or in lawful possession of a white person, in whole or in part, and whether the same be consumed or not, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall be punished by confinement and imprisonment, with hard labor for not more than twenty-one nor less than two years.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That any white person who shall make an assault upon an Indian, or other person, or any Indian who shall make an assault upon a white person, within said Indian country, with a gun, rifle, sword, pistol, knife, or any other deadly weapon, with intent to kill or maim the person so assaulted, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall, on conviction, be punished with confinement and imprisonment, with hard labor, for not more than five years nor less than one year.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That, in all criminal cases upon indictment, for offenses committed in said Indian country, prior to the creation of said western district of Arkansas, now pending in the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Arkansas, process for witnesses residing or to be found in said western district, may issue to the marshal of said eastern district, and be executed by him in any part of said western district; and that the fees of all witnesses so summoned shall be paid by the United States.

APPROVED, March 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XV.—An Act to extend the Warehousing System by establishing Private Bonded Warehouses, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That from and after the passage of this act, any goods, wares, or merchandise subject to duty, with the exception of perishable articles, also gunpowder, fire crackers, and other explosive substances, which shall have been duly entered and bonded for warehousing, in conformity with existing laws, may be deposited at the option of the owner, importer, consignee, or agent, at his expense and risk, in any public warehouse owned or leased by the United States, or in the private warehouse of the importer, the same being used exclusively for the storage of warehoused goods of his own importation, or to his consignment, or in a private warehouse used by the owner, occupant, or lessee, as a general warehouse for the storage of warehoused goods, such place of storage to be designated on the warehouse entry at the time of entering such merchandise at the custom-house: Provided, That such private warehouse shall be used solely for the purpose of storing warehoused goods, and shall have been previously approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and have been placed in charge of a proper officer of the customs, who, together with the owner and proprietor of the warehouse, shall have the joint custody of all the merchandise stored in said warehouse; and all the labor on the goods so stored must be performed by the owner or proprietor of the warehouse, under the supervision of the officer of the customs in charge of the same, at the expense of the aforesaid owner or proprietor: And provided further, That cellars and vaults of stores for the storage of wines and distilled spirits only, and yards for the storage of coal, mahogany, and other woods and lumber, may, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, be constituted bonded warehouses for the storage of such articles, under the same regulations and conditions as required in the storage of other merchandise; the cellars or vaults aforesaid shall be exclusively appropriated to the storage of wines or distilled spirits, and shall have no opening or entrance except the one from the street, on which separate and different locks of the custom-house and the owner or proprietor of the cellars or vaults shall be placed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That unclaimed goods, wares, or merchandise, required by existing laws to be taken possession of by collectors of the customs, may be stored in any public warehouse owned or leased by the United States, or in any private bonded warehouse authorized by this act, and all charges for storage, labor, and other expenses accruing on any such goods, wares, or merchandise, not to exceed, in any case, the regular rates for such objects at the port in question, must be paid before delivery of the goods, on due entry thereof by the claimant or owner; or, if sold as unclaimed goods, to realize the import duties, the aforesaid charges shall be paid by the collector out of the proceeds of the sale thereof before paying such proceeds into the Treasury, as required by existing laws. And any collector of the customs is hereby authorized, under such directions and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, to sell, upon due notice, at public auction, any unclaimed goods, wares, or merchandise deposited in public warehouse, whenever the same may, from depreciation in value, damage, leakage, or other cause, in the opinion of such collector, be likely to prove insufficient, on a sale thereof, to pay the duties, storage, and other charges, if suffered to remain in public store for the period now allowed by law in the case of unclaimed goods.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That before any of the stores or cellars aforesaid, owned or occupied by private individuals, shall be used as a warehouse for merchandise imported by other merchants or importers, the owner, occupant, or lessee thereof shall enter into bond, in such sums and with such sureties as may be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, exonerating and holding the United States and its officers harmless from or on account of any risk, loss, or expense of any kind or description, connected with or arising from the deposit or keeping of the merchandise in the warehouse aforesaid; and all imports deposited in any public or private warehouse authorized by this act, shall be at the sole and exclusive risk and expense of the owner or importer.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That all goods, wares, and merchandise, which may be hereafter duly entered for warehousing under bond, and likewise all merchandise now remaining in warehouse under bond, may continue in warehouse, without payment of duties thereupon, for a period of three years from the date of original importation, and may be withdrawn for consumption on due entry and payment of the duties and charges, or upon entry for exportation, without the payment of duties, at any time within the period aforesaid; in the latter case, the goods to be subject only to the payment of such storage and charges as may be due thereon: Provided, however, That where the duties shall have been paid upon any goods, wares, or merchandise entered for consumption, said duties shall not be refunded on exportation of any such goods, wares, or merchandise without the limits of the United States: And provided further, That there shall be no abatement of the duties or allowance made for any injury, damage, deterioration, loss, or leakage sustained by any goods, wares, or merchandise, whilst deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse established or recognized by this act.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That any goods, wares, or merchandise, duly entered for warehousing, may be withdrawn under bond, without payment of the duties, from a bonded warehouse in any collection district of the United States, and be transported to a bonded warehouse in any other collection district within the same, and re-warehoused thereat; and any such goods, wares, or merchandise, may be so transported to their destination wholly by land, or wholly by water, or partly by land and partly by water, over such routes as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, and may likewise be conveyed over any foreign territory, the government of which may have, or shall by treaty stipulations grant, a free right of way over such territory; and for the purpose of better guarding against frauds upon the revenue on foreign goods transported between the ports of the Atlantic and those of the Pacific overland through any foreign territory, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized to appoint special sworn agents as inspectors of the customs, to reside in said foreign territory where such goods may be landed or embarked, with power to superintend the landing or shipping of all goods passing coastwise between the ports of the United States on the Pacific and Atlantic, and whose duty it shall be, under such regulations and instructions as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, to guard against the perpetration of any frauds upon the revenue: Provided, That the compensation paid to said inspectors shall not in the aggregate exceed five thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe the form of the bond to be given for the transportation of goods, wares, and merchandise, from a port in one collection district to a port in another collection district in the United States, as provided in the preceding section; also the time for such delivery; and for a failure to transport and deliver, within the time limited, any such bonded goods, wares, and merchandise, to the collector at the designated port, an additional duty of one hundred per cent. shall be levied and collected, which additional duty shall be secured by such bond, or said goods, wares, and merchandise may be seized and forfeited for such failure, and any steam, or other vessel, or vehicle, transporting such bonded goods, wares, and merchandise, the master, owner, or conductor of which shall fail to deliver the same to the collector at the designated port, shall be liable to seizure and forfeiture.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all leases of stores now held by the United States for the purpose of storing warehoused or unclaimed goods, shall, on the shortest period of termination named in said leases, be cancelled, and no leases shall be entered into by the United States for any stores for the storage of warehoused or unclaimed goods at any port where there may exist any private bonded warehouses, after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-five: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the leasing or hiring of such buildings or accommodations as may be required for the use of the United States' appraisers for the due examination and appraisal of imported merchandise at the ports where such officers are provided by law, nor to prohibit the leasing or hiring by collectors of the customs, for short periods, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, of such stores as may be required for custom-house purposes, at any of the smaller revenue ports of the United States: Provided, That no collector or other officer of the customs shall enter into any contract or agreement for the use of any building to be thereafter erected as a public store or warehouse; and no lease of any building to be so used shall be taken for a longer period than three years, nor shall rent be paid, in whole or in part, in any case, in advance.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized, upon production of satisfactory proof to him of the actual injury or destruction, in whole or in part, of any goods, wares, or merchandise, by accidental fire, or other casualty, while the same remained in the custody of the officers of the customs in any public or private warehouse under bond, or in the appraisers' stores undergoing appraisal, in pursuance of law or regulations of the Treasury Department, or while in transportation under bond from the port of entry to any other port in the United States, to abate or to refund, as the case may be, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the amount of impost duties paid or accruing thereupon; and likewise to cancel any warehouse bond or bonds, or enter satisfaction thereon in whole or in part, as the case may be.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized from time to time, to establish such rules and regulations, not inconsistent with the laws of the United States, for the due execution of this act, as he may deem to be expedient and necessary; and all acts and parts of acts conflicting with this act are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, March 28, 1854.

PUBLIC, XVI.—An Act to authorize the construction of six first-class Steam Frigates, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be constructed for the United States Navy, at as early a day as practicable, consistently with a due regard for economy and efficiency, six first-class steam-frigates, to be provided with screw-propellers, and properly armed and equipped for service; said vessels and machinery to be built by contract, or in the Government navy-yards, as the Secretary of the Navy may think most advisable for the public interest.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, for the purpose above specified, and for altering, completing, and launching the frigates Santee, at Kittery, and Sabine, at New York, the sum of three millions of dollars out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, April 6, 1854.

PUBLIC, XVII.—An Act for the benefit of Citizens and Occupants of the Town of Council Bluffs, in Iowa.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the judge of the county court, as such for the county of Pottawattomie, in the State of Iowa, be, and he is hereby, authorized to enter at the proper land office, by paying therefor, at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents the acre, the west half of the southwest quarter of section thirty, the west half of the northwest quarter of section thirty-one, in township number seventy-five, north of range forty-three west; the southeast quarter and the east half of the southwest quarter of section twenty-five, and the northeast quarter and the east half of the northwest quarter of section thirty-six, in township seventy-five, north of range forty-four west, in said State of Iowa, in trust for the several use and benefit of the occupants thereof, according to their respective interests; the execution of which trust, as to the disposal of said land and the proceeds of the sales thereof, to be conducted under such rules and regulations as are prescribed by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Iowa in an act entitled "An act regulating the disposal of lands purchased in trust for town sites," approved January twenty-two, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, or as may hereafter be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly of said State of Iowa: Provided, That any act of said judge, not in conformity to the rules and regulations herein alluded to, shall be void and of none effect: And provided also, That nothing herein contained shall effect preemption or other rights that may have accrued under any other act of Congress.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the entry contemplated in this act shall be made within twelve months from the date of the passage hereof, and a patent shall issue for said land as in other cases.

APPROVED, April 6, 1854.

PUBLIC, XVIII.—An Act to establish additional Land Districts in the Territory of Minnesota.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, for the sale of the public lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished by the recent treaties, or which may hereafter be extinguished within their limits in the Minnesota Territory west of the Mississippi river, there is hereby created four additional land districts, bounded as follows, to wit: All that portion situated between the northern boundary of the State of Iowa and the line which divides townships one hundred and five and one hundred and six of the fifth principal meridian, and extending from the Mississippi to the Big Sioux rivers, shall comprise one of said districts, to be called the Root river district. All that portion lying between the township line last mentioned, and the line dividing townships one hundred and ten and one hundred and eleven, and between said rivers, shall constitute another of said districts, to be called the Winona district. All that portion situated north of the district last mentioned, and south of the line which divides townships one hundred and fifteen and one hundred and sixteen, and between the rivers above mentioned, except the townships recently surveyed west of the Mississippi river from the fourth principal meridian, to include the reservation at Fort Snelling, (the whole of which townships shall be attached to and constitute a part of the Minneapolis district,) shall constitute a third district, to be designated the Red Wing district; and all that portion situated north of the limits last described, south of the line dividing townships one hundred and twenty and one hundred and twenty-one, between the Mississippi river and the treaty line which runs from the Big Sioux river to Lake Travers, together with all the fractional townships, one hundred and twenty-one, situated east of the range line dividing ranges twenty-four and twenty-five west, shall comprise the fourth district, to be known as the Minneapolis district. And all the residuary portion of said lands situated north of the line which divides townships one hundred and twenty and one hundred and twenty-one, and west of range twenty-four west of the fifth principal meridian, and west of the Mississippi river, extending to the driftwood and the Red river of the north, shall be, and is hereby, attached to the district of lands subject to sale at Sauk Rapids.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a register and receiver of the public moneys for each of the said new districts hereby created, who shall respectively be required to reside at the site of their offices, and who shall have the same powers, perform the same duties, and be entitled to the same compensation, as are or may be prescribed by law in relation to other land officers of the United States.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the President is authorized to cause the public lands in said districts, with the exception of such as have been or may be reserved for other purposes, to be exposed to sale in the same manner and upon the same terms and conditions as the other public lands of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the President is hereby authorized to designate the location of the offices for said new districts, and change the same whenever in his opinion the public good shall require it.

APPROVED, April 12, 1854.

PUBLIC, XIX.—An Act establishing a Land Office in the Lower Peninsula of Michigan.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all those parts or portions of the lower peninsula of the State of Michigan, which is situated north of the line which divides townships twenty (20) and twenty-one (21) and all the portion of the upper peninsula which lies south of the line dividing townships forty-one (41) and forty-two (42) and west of range twelve (12) west, together with all the islands in Green Bay, the straits of Mackinac, and Lakes Huron and Michigan, which are situated north of the township line first herein mentioned, and within the limits of said State, exclusive of Drummond's Island and its islets, be, and the same is hereby, included in a land district, to be called the Cheboygan land district; and for the sale of lands in said district there shall be a land office established at such point therein as the President shall select.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint one register and one receiver for the land office in said district, who shall reside at the place designated for the land office, receive such compensation, give security, and discharge all duties pertaining to such office, as are prescribed by law.

APPROVED, April 20, 1854.

PUBLIC, XX.—An Act to authorize the School Commissioners of fractional township number one, of range number ten east, in Alabama, to locate one half section of land for School Purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the school commissioners of fractional township number one, of range number ten east, situated in the district of land subject to sale at Lebanon, Alabama, be, and is hereby, authorized to enter, free of charge, in lieu of the lands to which they are entitled by any existing law, one half section of land in legal subdivision, anywhere in said township, with a view to the ultimate convenience of the citizens of said township, and the quality of soil for school purposes; and said lands thus located shall be governed by the same laws, rules, and regulations, as is the school sixteenth section in said State of Alabama.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of said school commissioners to locate and report, within two years, what lands they have entered, to the Commissioner of the General Land Office at Washington, and it shall be his duty, upon the receipt of such report of location, to withdraw from sale the said lands, and the title thereto shall be valid as in sixteenth sections heretofore granted in the new States.

APPROVED, April 20, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXI.—An Act to amend the third section of the "Act making Appropriations for the Civil and Diplomatic Expenses of Government for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four," and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That of the clerks authorized by the third section of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, entitled "An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four," those of the first class shall receive a salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum; those of the second class, a salary of fourteen hundred dollars per annum; those of the third class a salary of sixteen hundred dollars per annum; and all clerks not provided for in this act, performing the same or similar duties with any one of the classes, shall receive the same compensation as is allowed to such class; and the clerks employed in the Census Bureau shall be paid, during the present fiscal year, the same as is hereby allowed to clerks of the second class.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the stamp and blank agent for the Post Office Department receive the same salary as clerks of the second class, provided for in the first section of this act; and an addition of twenty per cent. is hereby added to the pay now authorized by law to each of the messengers, packers, laborers, and watchmen of the different Executive Departments of the Government in Washington; to the clerks employed at the navy-yard and marine barracks at Washington; to the clerk, messenger, and laborer in the office of Commissioner of Public Buildings, doorkeeper and assistant doorkeeper at the Executive Mansion; public gardener, laborers employed in the public grounds and President's garden; two additional watchmen, and the police at the Capitol; watchmen employed at the President's House and reservation No. 2, lamplighter, the general superintendent; the drawkeepers of the bridges across the Eastern Branch and Potomac; and that the provisions of the second section of the act of August thirty-first, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, "making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of the Government for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-three," &c., be, and is hereby, extended to such persons herein enumerated who were in employment during that fiscal year, and were excluded from the benefit of said act by the decision of the Comptroller of the Treasury.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That instead of the salaries now allowed by law to the Superintendent of the Census, and to the Assistant Postmasters General, they shall each receive the same salary that is paid to the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the increased compensation provided for in this act shall commence from the first day of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and the necessary money to carry this act into effect is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as making an appropriation for any period beyond the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four.

Approved April 22, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXII.—An Act making Appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the support of the Military Academy for the year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five:

For pay of officers, instructors, cadets, and musicians, eighty-eight thousand two hundred and sixty-six dollars.

For commutation of subsistence, two thousand one hundred and ninety dollars.

For forage for officers' horses, nine hundred and sixty dollars.

For replacing dead and worn out cavalry and artillery horses, one thousand dollars.

For enlarging and improving hospital of cadets, six thousand five hundred dollars.

For cavalry exercise hall, twenty thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the compensation of master of the sword be twelve hundred dollars per annum.

APPROVED, May 10, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXIII.—An Act to organize the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all that part of the territory of the United States included within the following limits, except such portions thereof as are hereinafter expressly exempted from the operations of this act, to wit: beginning at a point in the Missouri river where the fortieth parallel of north latitude crosses the same; thence west on said parallel to the east boundary of the Territory of Utah, on the summit of the Rocky Mountains; thence on said summit northward to the forty-ninth parallel of north latitude; thence east on said parallel to the western boundary of the Territory of Minnesota; thence southward on said boundary to the Missouri river; thence down the main channel of said river to the place of beginning, be, and the same is hereby, created into a temporary government by the name of the Territory of Nebraska; and when admitted as a State or States, the said Territory, or any portion of the same, shall be received into the Union with or without slavery, as their constitution may prescribe at the time of their admission: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the Government of the United States from dividing said Territory into two or more Territories, in such manner and at such times as Congress shall deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said Territory to any other State or Territory of the United States: Provided further, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property now pertaining to the Indians in said Territory, so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished by treaty between the United States and such Indians, or to include any territory which, by treaty with any Indian tribe, is not, without the consent of said tribe, to be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory; but all such Territory shall be excepted out of the boundaries, and constitute no part of the Territory of Nebraska, until said tribe shall signify their assent to the President of the United States to be included within the said Territory of Nebraska, or to affect the authority of the Government of the United States to make any regulation respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, by treaty, law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to the Government to make if this act had never passed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the executive power and authority in and over said Territory of Nebraska shall be vested in a Governor, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States. The Governor shall reside within said Territory, and shall be commander-in-chief of the militia thereof. He may grant pardons and respites for offenses against the laws of said Territory, and reprieves for offenses against the laws of the United States, until the decision of the President can be made known thereon; he shall commission all officers who shall be appointed to office under the laws of the said Territory, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a secretary of said Territory, who shall reside therein, and hold his office for five years, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States; he shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the Legislative Assembly hereinafter constituted, and all the acts and proceedings of the Governor in his executive department; he shall transmit one copy of the laws and journals of the Legislative Assembly within thirty days after the end of each session, and one copy of the executive proceedings and official correspondence semi-annually, on the first days of January and July in each year, to the President of the United States, and two copies of the laws to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to be deposited in the libraries of Congress; and in case of the death, removal, resignation, or absence of the Governor from the Territory, the secretary shall be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to execute and perform all the powers and duties of the Governor during such vacancy or absence, or until another Governor shall be duly appointed and qualified to fill such vacancy.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power and authority of said Territory shall be vested in the Governor and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Assembly shall consist of a Council and House of Representatives. The Council shall consist of thirteen members, having the qualifications of voters, as hereinafter prescribed, whose term of service shall continue two years. The House of Representatives shall, at its first session, consist of twenty-six members, possessing the same qualifications as prescribed for members of the Council, and whose term of service shall continue one year. The number of Representatives may be increased by the Legislative Assembly, from time to time, in proportion to the increase of qualified voters: Provided, That the whole number shall never exceed thirty-nine. An apportionment shall be made, as nearly equal as practicable, among the several counties or districts, for the election of the Council and Representatives, giving to each section of the Territory representation in the ratio of its qualified voters as nearly as may be. And the members of the Council and of the House of Representatives shall reside in, and be inhabitants of, the district or county, or counties, for which they may be elected, respectively. Previous to the first election, the Governor shall cause a census, or enumeration of the inhabitants and qualified voters of the several counties and districts of the Territory, to be taken by such persons and in such mode as the Governor shall designate and appoint; and the persons so appointed shall receive a reasonable compensation therefor. And the first election shall be held at such time and places, and be conducted in such manner, both as to the persons who shall superintend such election and the returns thereof, as the Governor shall appoint and direct; and he shall at the same time declare the number of members of the Council and House of Representatives to which each of the counties or districts shall be entitled under this act. The persons having the highest number of legal votes in each of said Council districts for members of the Council, shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected to the Council; and the persons having the highest number of legal votes for the House of Representatives, shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected members of said House: Provided, That in case two or more persons voted for shall have an equal number of votes, and in case a vacancy shall otherwise occur in either branch of the Legislative Assembly, the Governor shall order a new election; and the persons thus elected to the Legislative Assembly shall meet at such place and on such day as the Governor shall appoint; but thereafter, the time, place, and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and the apportioning the representation in the several counties or districts to the Council and House of Representatives, according to the number of qualified voters, shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the commencement of the regular sessions of the Legislative Assembly: Provided, That no session in any one year shall exceed the term of forty days, except the first session, which may continue sixty days.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every free white male inhabitant above the age of twenty-one years, who shall be an actual resident of said Territory, and shall possess the qualifications hereinafter prescribed, shall be entitled to vote at the first election, and shall be eligible to any office within the said Territory; but the qualifications of voters, and of holding office, at all subsequent elections, shall be such as shall be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly: Provided, That the right of suffrage, and of holding office, shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States, and those who shall have declared on oath their intention to become such, and shall have taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act: And provided further, That no officer, soldier, seaman, or marine, or other person in the Army or Navy of the United States, or attached to troops in the service of the United States, shall be allowed to vote or hold office in said Territory, by reason of being on service therein.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. Every bill which shall have passed the Council and House of Representatives of the said Territory shall, before it become a law, be presented to the Governor of the Territory; if he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it with his objections to the House in which it originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and, if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, to be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Assembly, by adjournment, prevents its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That all township, district, and county officers, not herein otherwise provided for, shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the Governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Nebraska. The Governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council, appoint all officers not herein otherwise provided for; and in the first instance the Governor alone may appoint all said officers, who shall hold their offices until the end of the first session of the Legislative Assembly; and shall lay off the necessary districts for members of the Council and House of Representatives, and all other officers.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That no member of the Legislative Assembly shall hold, or be appointed to, any office which shall have been created, or the salary or emoluments of which shall have been increased, while he was a member, during the term for which he was elected, and for one year after the expiration of such term; but this restriction shall not be applicable to members of the first Legislative Assembly; and no person holding a commission or appointment under the United States, except postmasters, shall be a member of the Legislative Assembly, or hold any office under the government of said Territory.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the judicial power of said Territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, and in justices of the peace. The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and two associate justices, any two of whom shall constitute a quorum, and who shall hold a term at the seat of government of said Territory annually, and they shall hold their offices during the period of four years, and until their successors shall be appointed and qualified. The said Territory shall be divided into three judicial districts, and a district court shall be held in each of said districts by one of the justices of the supreme court, at such times and places as may be prescribed by law; and the said judges shall, after their appointments, respectively, reside in the districts which shall be assigned them. The jurisdiction of the several courts herein provided for, both appellate and original, and that of the probate courts and of justices of the peace, shall be as limited by law: Provided, That justices of the peace shall not have jurisdiction of any matter in controversy when the title or boundaries of land may be in dispute, or where the debt or sum claimed shall exceed one hundred dollars; and the said supreme and district courts, respectively, shall possess chancery as well as common law jurisdiction. Each district court, or the judge thereof, shall appoint its clerk, who shall also be the register in chancery, and shall keep his office at the place where the court may be held. Writs of error, bills of exception, and appeals, shall be allowed in all cases from the final decisions of said district courts to the supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; but in no case removed to the supreme court shall trial by jury be allowed in said court. The supreme court, or the justices thereof, shall appoint its own clerk, and every clerk shall hold his office at the pleasure of the court for which he shall have been appointed. Writs of error, and appeals from the final decisions of said supreme court, shall be allowed, and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property, or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by the oath or affirmation of either party, or other competent witness, shall exceed one thousand dollars; except only that in all cases involving title to slaves, the said writs of error, or appeals, shall be allowed and decided by the said supreme court, without regard to the value of the matter, property, or title in controversy; and except, also, that a writ of error or appeal shall also be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States, from the decision of the said supreme court created by this act, or of any judge thereof, or of the district courts created by this act, or of any judge thereof, upon any writ of habeas corpus, involving the question of personal freedom: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply to or affect the provisions of the "act respecting fugitives from justice, and persons escaping from the service of their masters," approved February twelfth, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, and the "act to amend and supplementary to the aforesaid act," approved September eighteen, eighteen hundred and fifty; and each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States; and the said supreme and district courts of the said Territory, and the respective judges thereof, shall and may grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases in which the same are granted by the judges of the United States in the District of Columbia; and the first six days of every term of said courts, or so much thereof as shall be necessary, shall be appropriated to the trial of causes arising under the said Constitution and laws, and writs of error and appeal in all such cases shall be made to the supreme court of said Territory, the same as in other cases. The said clerk shall receive in all such cases the same fees which the clerks of the district courts of Utah Territory now receive for similar services.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of an act entitled "An act respecting fugitives from justice, and persons escaping from the service of their masters," approved February twelve, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, and the provisions of the act entitled "An act to amend, and supplementary to, the aforesaid act," approved September eighteen, eighteen hundred and fifty, be, and the same are hereby, declared to extend to and be in full force within the limits of said Territory of Nebraska.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed an attorney for said Territory, who shall continue in office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President, and who shall receive the same fees and salary as the attorney of the United States for the present Territory of Utah. There shall also be a marshal for the Territory appointed, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President, and who shall execute all processes issuing from the said courts when exercising their jurisdiction as circuit and district courts of the United States; he shall perform the duties, be subject to the same regulation and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees as the marshal of the district court of the United States for the present Territory of Utah, and shall, in addition, be paid two hundred dollars annually as a compensation for extra services.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That the Governor, secretary, chief justice, and associate justices, attorney, and marshal, shall be nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appointed by the President of the United States. The Governor and secretary to be appointed, as aforesaid, shall, before they act as such, respectively take an oath or affirmation before the district judge or some justice of the peace in the limits of said Territory, duly authorized to administer oaths and affirmations by the laws now in force therein, or before the chief justice, or some associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to support the Constitution of the United States, and faithfully to discharge the duties of their respective offices, which said oaths, when so taken, shall be certified by the person by whom the same shall have been taken; and such certificates shall be received and recorded by the said secretary among the executive proceedings; and the chief justice and associate justices, and all other civil officers in said Territory, before they act as such, shall take a like oath or affirmation before the said Governor or secretary, or some judge or justice of the peace of the Territory, who may be duly commissioned and qualified, which said oath or affirmation shall be certified and transmitted by the person taking the same to the secretary, to be by him recorded as aforesaid; and, afterwards, the like oath or affirmation shall be taken, certified, and recorded, in such manner and form as may be prescribed by law. The Governor shall receive an annual salary of two thousand five hundred dollars. The chief justice and associate justices shall each receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars. The secretary shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars. The said salaries shall be paid quarter-yearly, from the dates of the respective appointments, at the Treasury of the United States; but no such payment shall be made until said officers shall have entered upon the duties of their respective appointments. The members of the Legislative Assembly shall be entitled to receive three dollars each per day during their attendance at the sessions thereof, and three dollars each for every twenty miles' travel in going to and returning from the said sessions, estimated according to the nearest usually traveled route; and an additional allowance of three dollars shall be paid to the presiding officer of each House for each day he shall so preside. And a chief clerk, one assistant clerk, a sergeant-at-arms, and door-keeper, may be chosen for each House; and the chief clerk shall receive four dollars per day, and the said other officers three dollars per day, during the session of the Legislative Assembly; but no other officers shall be paid by the United States: Provided, That there shall be but one session of the Legislature annually, unless, on an extraordinary occasion, the Governor shall think proper to call the Legislature together. There shall be appropriated, annually, the usual sum, to be expended by the Governor, to defray the contingent expenses of the Territory, including the salary of a clerk of the executive department; and there shall also be appropriated, annually, a sufficient sum, to be expended by the secretary of the Territory, and upon an estimate to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of the Legislative Assembly, the printing of the laws, and other incidental expenses; and the Governor and secretary of the Treasury shall, in the disbursement of all moneys intrusted to them, be governed solely by the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and shall, semi-annually, account to the said Secretary for the manner in which the aforesaid moneys shall have been expended; and no expenditure shall be made by said Legislative Assembly for objects not specially authorized by the acts of Congress making the appropriations, nor beyond the sums thus appropriated for such objects.

Sec. 13. And be it further enacted, That the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Nebraska shall hold its first session at such time and place in said Territory as the Governor thereof shall appoint and direct; and at said first session, or as soon thereafter as they shall deem expedient, the Governor and Legislative Assembly shall proceed to locate and establish the seat of government for said Territory at such place as they may deem eligible; which place, however, shall thereafter be subject to be changed by the said Governor and Legislative Assembly.

Sec. 14. And be it further enacted, That a Delegate to the House of Representatives of the United States, to serve for the term of two years, who shall be a citizen of the United States, may be elected by the voters qualified to elect members of the Legislative Assembly, who shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges as are exercised and enjoyed by the Delegates from the several other Territories of the United States to the said House of Representatives; but the Delegate first elected shall hold his seat only during the term of the Congress to which he shall be elected. The first election shall be held at such time and places, and be conducted in such manner, as the Governor shall appoint and direct; and, at all subsequent elections, the times, places, and manner of holding the elections, shall be prescribed by law. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected; and a certificate thereof shall be given accordingly. That the Constitution, and all the laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said Territory of Nebraska as elsewhere within the United States, except the eighth section of the act preparatory to the admission of Missouri into the Union, approved March sixth, eighteen hundred and twenty, which, being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories, as recognized by the legislation of eighteen hundred and fifty, commonly called the compromise measures, is hereby declared inoperative and void; it being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to revive or put in force any law or regulation which may have existed prior to the act of sixth March, eighteen hundred and twenty, either protecting, establishing, prohibiting, or abolishing slavery.

Sec. 15. And be it further enacted, That there shall hereafter be appropriated, as has been customary for the territorial governments, a sufficient amount, to be expended under the direction of the said Governor of the Territory of Nebraska, not exceeding the sums heretofore appropriated for similar objects, for the erection of suitable public buildings at the seat of government, and for the purchase of a library, to be kept at the seat of government for the use of the Governor, Legislative Assembly, judges of the supreme court, secretary, marshal, and attorney of said Territory, and such other persons, and under such regulations, as shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 16. And be it further enacted, That when the lands in the said Territory shall be surveyed under the direction of the Government of the United States, preparatory to bringing the same into market, sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in each township in said Territory shall be, and the same are hereby, reserved for the purpose of being applied to schools in said Territory, and in the States and Territories hereafter to be erected out of the same.

Sec. 17. And be it further enacted, That until otherwise provided by law, the Governor of said Territory may define the judicial districts of said Territory, and assign the judges who may be appointed for said Territory to the several districts; and also appoint the times and places for holding courts in the several counties or subdivisions in each of said judicial districts by proclamation, to be issued by him; but the Legislative Assembly, at their first or any subsequent session, may organize, alter, or modify such judicial districts, and assign the judges, and alter the times and places of holding the courts, as to them shall seem proper and convenient.

Sec. 18. And be it further enacted, That all officers to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, for the Territory of Nebraska, who, by virtue of the provisions of any law now existing, or which may be enacted during the present Congress, are required to give security for moneys that may be intrusted with them for disbursement, shall give such security, at such time and place, and in such manner, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Sec. 19. And be it further enacted, That all that part of the territory of the United States included within the following limits, except such portions thereof as are hereinafter expressly exempted from the operations of this act, to wit: beginning at a point on the western boundary of the State of Missouri, where the thirty-seventh parallel of north latitude crosses the same; thence west on said parallel to the eastern boundary of New Mexico; thence north on said boundary to latitude thirty-eight; thence following said boundary westward to the east boundary of the Territory of Utah, on the summit of the Rocky Mountains; thence northward on said summit to the fortieth parallel of latitude; thence east on said parallel to the western boundary of the State of Missouri; thence south with the western boundary of said State to the place of beginning, be, and the same is hereby, created into a temporary government by the name of the Territory of Kansas; and when admitted as a State or States, the said Territory, or any portion of the same, shall be received into the Union with or without slavery, as their constitution may prescribe at the time of their admission: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to inhibit the Government of the United States from dividing said Territory into two or more Territories, in such manner and at such times as Congress shall deem convenient and proper, or from attaching any portion of said Territory to any other State or Territory of the United States: Provided further, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to impair the rights of person or property now pertaining to the Indians of said Territory, so long as such rights shall remain unextinguished by treaty between the United States and such Indians, or to include any Territory which, by treaty with any Indian tribe, is not, without the consent of said tribe, to be included within the territorial limits or jurisdiction of any State or Territory; but all such territory shall be excepted out of the boundaries, and constitute no part of the Territory of Kansas, until said tribe shall signify their assent to the President of the United States to be included within the said Territory of Kansas, or to affect the authority of the Government of the United States to make any regulation respecting such Indians, their lands, property, or other rights, by treaty, law, or otherwise, which it would have been competent to the Government to make if this act had never passed.

Sec. 20. And be it further enacted, That the executive power and authority in and over said Territory of Kansas shall be vested in a Governor, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States. The Governor shall reside within said Territory, and shall be commander-in-chief of the militia thereof. He may grant pardons and respites for offenses against the laws of said Territory, and reprieves for offenses against the laws of the United States, until the decision of the President can be made known thereon; he shall commission all officers who shall be appointed to office under the laws of the said Territory, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

Sec. 21. And be it further enacted, That there shall be a secretary of said Territory, who shall reside therein, and hold his office for five years, unless sooner removed by the President of the United States; he shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the Legislative Assembly hereinafter constituted, and all the acts and proceedings of the Governor in his executive department; he shall transmit one copy of the laws and journals of the Legislative Assembly within thirty days after the end of each session, and one copy of the executive proceedings and official correspondence semi-annually, on the first days of January and July in each year, to the President of the United States, and two copies of the laws to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to be deposited in the libraries of Congress; and, in case of death, removal, or resignation, or absence of the Governor from the Territory, the secretary shall be, and he is hereby, authorized and required to execute and perform all the powers and duties of the Governor during such vacancy or absence, or until another Governor shall be duly appointed and qualified to fill such vacancy.

Sec. 22. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power and authority of said Territory shall be vested in the Governor and a Legislative Assembly. The Legislative Assembly shall consist of a Council and House of Representatives. The Council shall consist of thirteen members, having the qualifications of voters, as hereinafter prescribed, whose term of service shall continue two years. The House of Representatives shall, at its first session, consist of twenty-six members, possessing the same qualifications as prescribed for members of the Council, and whose term of service shall continue one year. The number of representatives may be increased by the Legislative Assembly, from time to time, in proportion to the increase of qualified voters: Provided, That the whole number shall never exceed thirty-nine. An apportionment shall be made, as nearly equal as practicable, among the several counties or districts, for the election of the Council and representatives, giving to each section of the Territory representation in the ratio of its qualified voters, as nearly as may be. And the members of the Council and of the House of Representatives shall reside in, and be inhabitants of, the district or county, or counties, for which they may be elected, respectively. Previous to the first election, the Governor shall cause a census, or enumeration of the inhabitants and qualified voters of the several counties and districts of the Territory, to be taken by such persons and in such mode as the Governor shall designate and appoint; and the persons so appointed shall receive a reasonable compensation therefor. And the first election shall be held at such time and places, and be conducted in such manner, both as to the persons who shall superintend such election and the returns thereof, as the Governor shall appoint and direct; and he shall at the same time declare the number of members of the Council and House of Representatives to which each of the counties or districts shall be entitled under this act. The persons having the highest number of legal votes in each of said Council districts for members of the Council, shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected to the Council; and the persons having the highest number of legal votes for the House of Representatives, shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected members of the said House: Provided, That in case two or more persons voted for shall have an equal number of votes, and in case a vacancy shall otherwise occur in either branch of the Legislative Assembly, the Governor shall order a new election; and the persons thus elected to the Legislative Assembly shall meet at such place and on such day as the Governor shall appoint; but thereafter, the time, place, and manner of holding and conducting all elections by the people, and the appointing the representation in the several counties or districts to the Council and House of Representatives, according to the number of qualified voters, shall be prescribed by law, as well as the day of the commencement of the regular sessions of the Legislative Assembly: Provided, That no session of any one year shall exceed the term of forty days, except the first session, which may continue sixty days.

Sec. 23. And be it further enacted, That every free white male inhabitant above the age of twenty-one years, who shall be an actual resident of said Territory, and shall possess the qualifications hereinafter prescribed, shall be entitled to vote at the first election, and shall be eligible to any office within the said Territory; but the qualifications of voters, and of holding office, at all subsequent elections, shall be such as shall be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly: Provided, That the right of suffrage and of holding office shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States, and those who shall have declared on oath their intention to become such, and shall have taken an oath to support the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act: And provided further, That no officer, soldier, seaman, or marine, or other person in the Army or Navy of the United States, or attached to troops in the service of the United States, shall be allowed to vote or hold office in said Territory by reason of being on service therein.

Sec. 24. And be it further enacted, That the legislative power of the Territory shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation consistent with the Constitution of the United States and the provisions of this act; but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil; no tax shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. Every bill which shall have passed the Council and House of Representatives of the said Territory shall, before it become a law, be presented to the Governor of the Territory; if he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it with his objections to the House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, to be entered on the journal of each House, respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Assembly, by adjournment, prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Sec. 25. And be it further enacted, That all township, district, and county officers, not herein otherwise provided for, shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the Governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Kansas. The Governor shall nominate; and, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council, appoint all officers not herein otherwise provided for; and in the first instance the Governor alone may appoint all said officers, who shall hold their offices until the end of the first session of the Legislative Assembly; and shall lay off the necessary districts for members of the Council and House of Representatives, and all other officers.

Sec. 26. And be it further enacted, That no member of the Legislative Assembly shall hold, or be appointed to, any office which shall have been created, or the salary or emoluments of which shall have been increased, while he was a member, during the term for which he was elected, and for one year after the expiration of such term; but this restriction shall not be applicable to members of the first Legislative Assembly; and no person holding a commission or appointment under the United States, except postmasters, shall be a member of the Legislative Assembly, or shall hold any office under the Government of said Territory.

Sec. 27. And be it further enacted, That the judicial power of said Territory shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, probate courts, and in justices of the peace. The supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and two associate justices, any two of whom shall constitute a quorum, and who shall hold a term at the seat of government of said Territory annually; and they shall hold their offices during the period of four years, and until their successors shall be appointed and qualified. The said Territory shall be divided into three judicial districts, and a district court shall be held in each of said districts by one of the justices of the supreme court, at such times and places as may be prescribed by law; and the said judges shall, after their appointments, respectively, reside in the districts which shall be assigned them. The jurisdiction of the several courts herein provided for, both appellate and original, and that of the probate courts, and of justices of the peace, shall be as limited by law: Provided, That justices of the peace shall not have jurisdiction of any matter in controversy when the title or boundaries of land may be in dispute, or where the debt or sum claimed shall exceed one hundred dollars; and the said supreme and district courts respectively, shall possess chancery as well as common law jurisdiction. Each district court, or the judge thereof, shall appoint its clerk, who shall also be the register in chancery, and shall keep his office at the place where the court may be held. Writs of error, bills of exception, and appeals, shall be allowed in all cases from the final decisions of said district courts to the supreme court, under such regulations as may be prescribed by law; but in no case removed to the supreme court shall trial by jury be allowed in said court. The supreme court, or the justices thereof, shall appoint its own clerk, and every clerk shall hold his office at the pleasure of the court for which he shall have been appointed. Writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of said supreme court shall be allowed, and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, in the same manner and under the same regulations as from the circuit courts of the United States, where the value of the property, or the amount in controversy, to be ascertained by the oath or affirmation of either party, or other competent witness, shall exceed one thousand dollars; except only, that in all cases involving title to slaves, the said writs of error or appeals shall be allowed and decided by the said supreme court, without regard to the value of the matter, property, or title in controversy; and except also, that a writ of error or appeal shall also be allowed to the Supreme Court of the United States from the decision of the said supreme court created by this act, or of any judge thereof, or of the district courts created by this act, or of any judge thereof, upon any writ of habeas corpus, involving the question of personal freedom: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply to or affect the provisions of the "act respecting fugitives from justice, and persons escaping from the service of their masters," approved February twelfth, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, and the "act to amend and supplementary to the aforesaid act," approved September eighteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty; and each of the said district courts shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States; and the said supreme and district courts of the said Territory, and the respective judges thereof, shall and may grant writs of habeas corpus in all cases in which the same are granted by the judges of the United States in the District of Columbia; and the first six days of every term of said courts, or so much thereof as may be necessary, shall be appropriated to the trial of causes arising under the said Constitution and laws, and writs of error and appeal in all such cases shall be made to the supreme court of said Territory, the same as in other cases. The said clerk shall receive the same fees in all such cases which the clerks of the district courts of Utah Territory now receive for similar services.

Sec. 28. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act entitled "An act respecting fugitives from justice, and persons escaping from the service of their masters," approved February twelfth, seventeen hundred and ninety-three, and the provisions of the act entitled "An act to amend, and supplementary to, the aforesaid act," approved September eighteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty, be, and the same are hereby, declared to extend to, and be in full force within the limits of the said Territory of Kansas.

Sec. 29. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed an attorney for said Territory, who shall continue in office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President, and who shall receive the same fees and salary as the attorney of the United States for the present Territory of Utah. There shall also be a marshal for the Territory appointed, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed by the President, and who shall execute all processes issuing from the said courts when exercising their jurisdiction as circuit and district courts of the United States; he shall perform the duties, be subject to the same regulations and penalties, and be entitled to the same fees as the marshal of the district court of the United States for the present Territory of Utah, and shall, in addition, be paid two hundred dollars annually as a compensation for extra services.

Sec. 30. And be it further enacted, That the Governor, secretary, chief justice, and associate justices, attorney, and marshal, shall be nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, appointed by the President of the United States. The Governor and secretary to be appointed as aforesaid shall, before they act as such, respectively take an oath or affirmation before the district judge, or some justice of the peace in the limits of said Territory, duly authorized to administer oaths and affirmations by the laws now in force therein, or before the chief justice or some associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, to support the Constitution of the United States, and faithfully to discharge the duties of their respective offices, which said oaths, when so taken, shall be certified by the person by whom the same shall have been taken; and such certificates shall be received and recorded by the said secretary among the executive proceedings; and the chief justice and associate justices, and all other civil officers in said Territory, before they act as such, shall take a like oath or affirmation before the said Governor or secretary, or some judge or justice of the peace of the Territory who may be duly commissioned and qualified, which said oath or affirmation shall be certified and transmitted by the person taking the same to the secretary, to be by him recorded as aforesaid; and, afterwards, the like oath or affirmation shall be taken, certified, and recorded in such manner and form as may be prescribed by law. The Governor shall receive an annual salary of two thousand five hundred dollars. The chief justice and associate justices shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars. The secretary shall receive an annual salary of two thousand dollars. The said salaries shall be paid quarter yearly, from the dates of the respective appointments, at the Treasury of the United States; but no such payment shall be made until said officers shall have entered upon the duties of their respective appointments. The members of the Legislative Assembly shall be entitled to receive three dollars each per day during their attendance at the sessions thereof, and three dollars each for every twenty miles' travel in going to and returning from the said sessions, estimated according to the nearest usually traveled route; and an additional allowance of three dollars shall be paid to the presiding officer of each House for each day he shall so preside. And a chief clerk, one assistant clerk, a sergeant-at-arms, and door-keeper may be chosen for each House; and the chief clerk shall receive four dollars per day, and the said other officers three dollars per day, during the session of the Legislative Assembly; but no other officers shall be paid by the United States: Provided, That there shall be but one session of the Legislature annually, unless, on an extraordinary occasion, the Governor shall think proper to call the Legislature together. There shall be appropriated annually the usual sum, to be expended by the Governor, to defray the contingent expenses of the Territory, including the salary of a clerk of the executive department; and there shall also be appropriated, annually, a sufficient sum, to be expended by the secretary of the Territory, and upon an estimate to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, to defray the expenses of the Legislative Assembly, the printing of the laws, and other incidental expenses; and the Governor and secretary of the Territory shall, in the disbursement of all moneys intrusted to them, be governed solely by the instructions of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, and shall, semi-annually, account to the said Secretary for the manner in which the aforesaid moneys shall have been expended; and no expenditure shall be made by said Legislative Assembly for objects not specially authorized by the acts of Congress making the appropriations, nor beyond the sums thus appropriated for such objects.

Sec. 31. And be it further enacted, That the seat of government of said Territory is hereby located temporarily at Fort Leavenworth; and that such portions of the public buildings as may not be actually used and needed for military purposes, may be occupied and used, under the direction of the Governor and Legislative Assembly, for such public purposes as may be required under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 32. And be it further enacted, That a Delegate to the House of Representatives of the United States, to serve for the term of two years, who shall be a citizen of the United States, may be elected by the voters qualified to elect members of the Legislative Assembly, who shall be entitled to the same rights and privileges as are exercised and enjoyed by the Delegates from the several other Territories of the United States to the said House of Representatives; but the Delegate first elected shall hold his seat only during the term of the Congress to which he shall be elected. The first election shall be held at such time and places, and be conducted in such manner, as the Governor shall appoint and direct; and at all subsequent elections the times, places, and manner of holding the elections shall be prescribed by law. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be declared by the Governor to be duly elected, and a certificate thereof shall be given accordingly. That the Constitution, and all laws of the United States which are not locally inapplicable, shall have the same force and effect within the said Territory of Kansas as elsewhere within the United States, except the eighth section of the act preparatory to the admission of Missouri into the Union, approved March sixth, eighteen hundred and twenty, which, being inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and Territories, as recognized by the legislation of eighteen hundred and fifty, commonly called the compromise measures, is hereby declared inoperative and void; it being the true intent and meaning of this act not to legislate slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to revive or put in force any law or regulation which may have existed prior to the act of sixth of March, eighteen hundred and twenty, either protecting, establishing, prohibiting, or abolishing slavery.

Sec. 33. And be it further enacted, That there shall hereafter be appropriated, as has been customary for the territorial governments, a sufficient amount, to be expended under the direction of the said Governor of the Territory of Kansas, not exceeding the sums heretofore appropriated for similar objects, for the erection of suitable public buildings at the seat of government, and for the purchase of a library, to be kept at the seat of government for the use of the Governor, Legislative Assembly, judges of the supreme court, secretary, marshal, and attorney of said Territory, and such other persons, under such regulations, as shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 34. And be it further enacted, That where the lands in the said Territory shall be surveyed under the direction of the Government of the United States, preparatory to bringing the same into market, sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in each township in said Territory shall be, and the same are hereby, reserved for the purpose of being applied to schools in said Territory, and in the States and Territories hereafter to be erected out of the same.

Sec. 35. And be it further enacted, That, until otherwise provided by law, the Governor of said Territory may define the judicial districts of said Territory, and assign the judges who may be appointed for said Territory to the several districts; and also appoint the times and places for holding courts in the several counties or subdivisions in each of said judicial districts by proclamation to be issued by him; but the Legislative Assembly, at their first or any subsequent session, may organize, alter, or modify such judicial districts, and assign the judges, and alter the times and places of holding the courts, as to them shall seem proper and convenient.

Sec. 36. And be it further enacted, That all officers to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, for the Territory of Kansas, who, by virtue of the provisions of any law now existing, or which may be enacted during the present Congress, are required to give security for moneys that may be intrusted with them for disbursement, shall give such security, at such time and place, and in such manner, as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Sec. 37. And be it further enacted, That all treaties, laws, and other engagements made by the Government of the United States with the Indian tribes inhabiting the territories embraced within this act, shall be faithfully and rigidly observed, notwithstanding anything contained in this act; and that the existing agencies and superintendencies of said Indians be continued with the same powers and duties which are now prescribed by law, except that the President of the United States may, at his discretion, change the location of the office of superintendent.

APPROVED, May 30, 1854.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all books, papers, documents, and records, in the Department of the Interior, may be copied and certified, under the seal of that Department, (which is hereby recognized as legal,) in the same manner as those in the other Executive Departments may now by law be, and with the same force and effect; and in all cases where a seal is necessary by law to any commission, process, or other instrument provided for by the laws of Congress, it shall be lawful to affix the proper seal, by making an impression therewith directly on the paper to which such seal is necessary, which shall be as valid as if made on wax or other adhesive substance.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That hereafter the commissions of all officers, under the direction and control of the Secretary of the Interior, shall be made out and recorded in the Department of the Interior, and the seal of the said Department affixed thereto, any laws to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided, That the said seal shall not be affixed to any such commission before the same shall have been signed by the President of the United States.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the compensation of the special mail agent of the Post Office Department in California shall be five thousand dollars per annum; such rate to take effect in virtue of this provision from July first, eighteen hundred and fifty-three.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act, there shall be, in addition to the clerks authorized by the third section of the act of March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, entitled "An act making appropriations for the civil and diplomatic expenses of Government for the year ending the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four," in the office of the Register of the Treasury, three clerks of class three, to include the clerk now authorized to take charge of the redemption of stocks, and in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions in lieu of the temporary clerks now employed therein, five clerks of class two, and fifteen clerks of class three; and said clerks shall be paid, according to the provisions of said section, until the thirtieth of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the portion of the seventh section of the act of twenty-sixth August, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, entitled "An act to provide for executing the public printing and establishing the prices thereof, and for other purposes," which provides "that when any documents shall be ordered to be printed by both Houses of Congress, the entire printing of such documents shall be done by the printer of that House which first ordered the same," is hereby repealed; and when there are different printers for the respective Houses, each shall do the printing which may thereafter be ordered by the House electing him.

APPROVED, May 31, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXV.—An Act regulating the Pay of Deputy Postmasters.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in place of the compensation now allowed deputy postmasters, the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to allow them commissions at the following rates on the postage collected at their respective offices in each quarter of the year, and in due proportion for any period less than a quarter, viz:

On any sum not exceeding one hundred dollars sixty per cent.; but any postmaster at whose office the mail is to arrive regularly, between the hours of nine o'clock at night and five o'clock in the morning, may be allowed seventy per cent. on the first hundred dollars.

On any sum over and above one hundred dollars, and not exceeding four hundred dollars, fifty per cent.

On any sum over and above four hundred dollars, but not exceeding twenty-four hundred dollars, forty per cent.

And on all sums over twenty-four hundred dollars, fifteen per cent.

On the amount of postage on letters and packages received at a distributing office for distribution, twelve and one half per cent. commission may be allowed.

Every postmaster whose compensation shall not exceed five hundred dollars in one quarter, shall be allowed one cent on every free letter delivered out of his office, except such as are for the postmaster himself. But the special allowance now made by law to the postmasters at New Orleans and Washington city, shall not otherwise be either increased or diminished.

Each postmaster who shall be required to keep a register of the arrival and departure of the mails, shall be allowed ten cents for each monthly return which he makes to the Postmaster General.

Each postmaster shall be allowed two mills for the delivery from his office to a subscriber of each newspaper not chargeable with postage: Provided, That to any postmaster of a distributing office at which the commissions, allowances, and emoluments, since the thirty-first day of March, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, have been insufficient to defray the actual and necessary expenses, and afford the postmaster the annual compensation derived from commissions at the office before said thirty-first of March, the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, allow quarterly, from the date aforesaid, out of the postages collected at any such office, an amount sufficient to supply such deficiency: Provided further, That to any postmaster of a separating office, whose commissions, allowances, and emoluments may be found insufficient to provide the extra labor necessary to a prompt and efficient performance of the duties of separating and dispatching the mails passing through his office, the Postmaster General may make such quarterly allowance, out of the postages collected at such office, as he may deem sufficient to compensate such extra labor: Provided further, That the commissions and allowances authorized by this act shall be subject to the provisions of the forty-first section of the act entitled "An act to reduce into one the several acts establishing and regulating the Post Office Department: And provided further, That the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, dispose of any quarterly returns of mails sent or received, which were made up previous to the first day of July, eighteen hundred and fifty, preserving the accounts current, and all vouchers accompanying such accounts, and use such portion of the proceeds thereof as may be necessary to defray the cost of separating and disposing of the same. This act shall take effect and be in force from and after the commencement of the next fiscal quarter after its passage.

APPROVED, June 22, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXVI.—An Act to authorize the Selection of School Districts in lieu of the sixteenth sections within the Twelve Miles Square Reservation, State of Alabama.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the school commissioners of township six south, range one east, townships five and six south, range two east, and townships five and six south, range three east, Huntsville district, Alabama, be, and the same are hereby, authorized to select, respectively, by legal subdivisions, from any of the surveyed public lands, the quantity, as near as may be, contained in the sixteenth sections of said townships, within the twelve miles square reservation; which selections, upon being approved by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be holden by the same tenure, and upon the same terms, for the support of schools, in such townships, as the sections numbered sixteen, within the said reservation, would have been, had not treaty stipulation made other disposition thereof.

PUBLIC, XXVII.—An Act confirming certain Land Claims in Louisiana, in the Bastrop Grant.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That such of the claims entered in the report dated thirtieth of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, of the register and receiver at Monroe, Louisiana, as in their opinion ought to be confirmed, according to the principles recognized in the act of Congress of the third March, eighteen hundred and forty-one, pursuant to which the said report was made, be, and the same are hereby, confirmed for the extent and under the limitations referred to in the opinions of the said officers.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the confirmation by this act shall only operate as a relinquishment on the part of the United States, and shall not affect the right of adverse claimants to the same lands, nor prevent a judicial decision in regard to the same; and upon the rendition to the General Land Office of a proper plat of survey, duly approved by the surveyor general, for any confirmation by this act, the Commissioner shall cause a patent to be issued, if satisfied that the same is confirmed and surveyed according to the true intent of this act: Provided, That if in any case a claim confirmed by this act was not actually located prior to the third of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, no location of the same shall be made to the prejudice of any actual settler, but such floating claim may be located on any public lands in the Ouachita district, to which there may be no existing preemption or other valid claim, under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

APPROVED, June 29, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXVIII.—An Act to reimburse to the Common Council of New York city, Expenditures made for the First Regiment of New York Volunteers.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War, in the settlement and adjustment (under the act of Congress of June second, eighteen hundred and forty-eight) of the claims of the common council of New York, for expenditures made in organizing, transporting, clothing, and subsisting the first regiment of New York volunteers, commanded by Colonel Ward B. Burnett, prior to the mustering of said regiment into the service of the United States, shall be authorized and required to allow such of those claims as may be supported by satisfactory vouchers, showing that such expenditures had been fairly made, and was necessary and proper for the service, notwithstanding that such vouchers may be informal and defective for want of particularity: Provided, That the amount allowed shall not exceed three thousand six hundred and seventy-two dollars and ninety cents.

APPROVED, June 29, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXIX.—An Act to authorize the Issue of Registers to vessels owned by the "Accessory Transit Company."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause registers to be issued in the name of the president of the "Accessory Transit Company," incorporated under a charter from the State of Nicaragua, for the steamboats or vessels owned by said company, and employed in the transportation of merchandise and passengers between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, through or over the territory of the State aforesaid: Provided, That before the granting of a register for any steamboat or vessel owned by said company, to be employed as aforesaid, the president of said company shall swear or affirm that the said steamboat or vessel is owned by said company; that all the officers and at least two thirds of the crew are citizens of the United States, or persons not the subjects of any foreign prince or State; that all the officers and directors of said company are citizens of the United States, and that two thirds of the stock of said company is owned by citizens of the United States; which oath or affirmation shall be deemed sufficient, without requiring the oath or affirmation of any other person interested, or concerned in said steamboat or vessel: And provided further, That a register issued under this act shall continue in force one year, and no longer, unless the president of the company aforesaid shall, within one year from the date of the register, make anew the oath or affirmation aforesaid, and the collector of the customs shall certify the date of said renewed oath or affirmation on the back of said register, which shall continue in force for one year from said date, and the oath or affirmation may be so renewed and the indorsement so made once in each and every year thereafter, and the register shall continue in force accordingly.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That before granting a register to any steamboat or vessel, owned by the company aforesaid, the president thereof shall, together with one or more sureties, to the satisfaction of the collector of the customs, by whom, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, the register may be issued, become bound to the United States in the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, with condition that the steamboat or vessel shall be solely employed in the transportation of merchandise and passengers between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States as aforesaid; that the register shall be solely used for said steamboat or vessel; that it shall not be sold, lent, or otherwise disposed of to any other company, person, or persons; and that in case such steamboat or vessel shall be sold, lost, or otherwise prevented from returning to the United States, the said register shall, within six months thereafter, if preserved, be returned to the collector of the customs who issued it, or to the Register of the Treasury, for cancellation; and on failure to comply with any of the conditions aforesaid, a forfeiture shall accrue to the United States of the entire penal sum named in said bond, to be enforced in any court of competent jurisdiction, and the outstanding register shall be null and void.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That whenever the officer to whom said register had been issued shall cease to be the president of said company, any register which may have been issued in his name shall be void, and a new register must be issued, in compliance with the provisions of this act.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That before issuing any register as aforesaid, it shall be proved to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that the steamboat or vessel for which the register is to issue shall have been built and equipped wholly in the United States; and said steamboats and vessels shall, in all respects, be subject to the laws of the United States in the same manner as vessels built wholly and registered by American citizens.

APPROVED, June 29, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXX.—An Act to enable the President of the United States to fulfill the third Article of the Treaty between the United States and the Mexican Republic, of the thirtieth of December, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, as amended by the Senate of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of ten millions of dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the President of the United States to fulfill the stipulation in the third article of the treaty between the United States and the Mexican Republic, of the thirtieth of December, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, as subsequently amended by the Senate of the United States; of which said sum of ten millions of dollars, seven millions are to be paid on the exchange of the ratifications of said treaty, and the remaining three millions as soon as the boundary line shall be surveyed, marked, and established.

APPROVED, June 29, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXI.—An Act to aid the Territory of Minnesota in the Construction of a Railroad therein.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, granted to the Territory of Minnesota, for the purpose of aiding in the construction of a railroad from the southern line of said Territory, commencing at a point between township ranges nine and seventeen, thence by the way of St. Paul, by the most practicable route, to the eastern line of said Territory, in the direction of Lake Superior, every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers for six sections in width on each side of said road within said Territory, but in case it shall appear that the United States have, when the line of said road is definitely fixed by the authority aforesaid, sold any section, or any part thereof granted as aforesaid, or that the right of preëmption has attached to the same, then it shall be lawful for any agent or agents, to be appointed by the Governor of said Territory, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to select from the lands of the United States nearest to the tier of sections above specified, so much land, in alternate sections or parts of sections, as shall be equal to such lands as the United States have sold, or to which the right of preëmption has attached as aforesaid, which lands (thus selected in lieu of those sold, and to which preëmption has attached as aforesaid, together with the sections or parts of sections designated by odd numbers as aforesaid, and appropriated as aforesaid) shall be held by the Territory of Minnesota for the use and purpose aforesaid: Provided, That the lands to be so located shall in no case be further than fifteen miles from the line of the road, in each case, and selected for and on account of said road: Provided further, That the lands hereby granted shall be exclusively applied in the construction of that road for which it was granted and selected, and shall be disposed of only as the work progresses, and the same shall be applied to no other purpose whatever: And provided further, That any and all lands heretofore reserved to the United States by any act of Congress, or in any other manner by competent authority, for the purpose of aiding in any object of internal improvement, or for any other purpose whatsoever, be, and the same are hereby, reserved to the United States from the operation of this act, except so far as it may be found necessary to locate the route of said railroad through such reserved lands, in which case the right of way only shall be granted, subject to the approval of the President of the United States.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the sections and parts of sections of land, which by such grants shall remain to the United States, within six miles on each side of said road, shall not be sold for less than double the minimum price.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said lands hereby granted to the said Territory shall be subject to the disposal of any Legislature thereof, for the purpose aforesaid and no other, nor shall they inure to the benefit of any company heretofore constituted and organized; and the said railroad shall be and remain a public highway for the use of the Government of the United States, free from toll or other charge upon the transportation of any property or troops of the United States, nor shall any of said lands become subject to private entry until the same shall have been first offered at public sale at the increased price.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That the lands hereby granted to said Territory, shall be disposed of by said Territory only in manner following, that is to say, no title shall vest in the said Territory of Minnesota, nor shall any patent issue for any part of the lands hereinbefore mentioned, until a continuous length of twenty miles of said road shall be completed through the lands hereby granted, and when the Secretary of the Interior shall be satisfied that any twenty miles of said road are completed, then a patent shall issue for a quantity of land not exceeding one hundred and twenty sections, and included within a continuous length of twenty miles of said road, and so from time to time, patents shall be issued in like manner upon the completion of each additional twenty miles of said road, until it shall be completed; and if said road is not completed within ten years, no further sale shall be made, and the land unsold shall revert to the United States.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That the United States mail shall be transported at all times on said railroad, under the direction of the Post Office Department, at such price as Congress may by law direct: Provided, That until such price is fixed by law, the Postmaster General shall have power to determine the same.

APPROVED, June 29, 1854.

[The preceding act was subsequently repealed. See act for relief of Thomas Bronaugh.]

PUBLIC, XXXII.—An Act for the construction of certain Military Roads and Wells in the Territory of New Mexico.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums of money be, and are hereby, appropriated for the construction and repair of roads in the Territory of New Mexico:

From Taos to Santa Fé, the sum of twenty thousand dollars.

From Santa Fé to Dona Aña, the sum of twelve thousand dollars; any portion of which may be applied to the sinking of wells, if required by the necessities of said road. The said sums of money to be expended under the control and direction of the Secretary of War.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXIII.—An Act for the Payment of the Civil Officers employed in the Territory of New Mexico while under military government.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized, from any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to pay to the civil officers employed in the Territory of New Mexico while the same was under military government, the salaries due and payable to them from the twenty-second of September, eighteen hundred and forty-six, until the third of March, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, according to the rate of compensation prescribed by the organic law promulgated by General Stephen W. Kearney for the government of said Territory of New Mexico, deducting therefrom such sums as have already been paid to them from the Treasury of said Territory: Provided, That under the provision of this act, no compensation shall be made to any officer of the Army of the United States for discharging the duties of any civil office in the Territory of New Mexico.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXIV.—An Act to provide for the continuation of the Military Road from Myrtle Creek to Scottsburg, in Oregon.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of twenty thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the extension and completion of the military road from Myrtle Creek, in Umpqua valley, to Scottsburg, in the Territory of Oregon; the said road to be constructed under the direction of the Secretary of War.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXV.—An Act to provide for the construction of a Military Road in the Territory of Utah.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and is hereby, appropriated, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, in the construction of a military road within the Territories of Utah and New Mexico, commencing at Great Salt Lake City, and running by the way of Provo City, Fillmore City, Parovan and Cedar City, to the eastern boundary of California, in the direction of the Cajon Pass.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXVI.—An Act to authorize the President of the United States to cause to be Surveyed the tract of land in the Territory of Minnesota belonging to the half-breeds or mixed-bloods of the Dacotah or Sioux Nation of Indians, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to exchange with the half-breeds or mixed-bloods of the Dacotah or Sioux nation of Indians, who are entitled to an interest therein, for the tract of land lying on the west side of Lake Pepin and the Mississippi river, in the Territory of Minnesota, which was set apart and granted for their use and benefit, by the ninth article of the treaty of Prairie du Chien, of the fifteenth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty; and for that purpose he is hereby authorized to cause to be issued to said persons, on the execution by them, or by the legal representatives of such as may be minors, of a full and complete relinquishment by them to the United States of all their right, title, and interest, according to such form as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office, in and to said tract of land or reservation, certificates or scrip for the same amount of land to which each individual would be entitled in case of a division of the said grant or reservation pro rata among the claimants—which said certificates or scrip may be located upon any of the lands within said reservation not now occupied by actual and bona fide settlers of the half-breeds or mixed-bloods, or such other persons as have gone into said Territory by authority of law, or upon any other unoccupied lands subject to preemption or private sale, or upon any other unsurveyed lands, not reserved by Government, upon which they have respectively made improvements: Provided, That said certificates or scrip shall not embrace more than six hundred and forty, nor less than forty acres each, and provided that the same shall be equally apportioned, as nearly as practicable, among those entitled to an interest in said reservation: And provided further, That no transfer or conveyance of any of said certificates or scrip shall be valid.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be ascertained the number and names of the half-breeds or mixed-bloods who are entitled to participate in the benefits of the said grant or reservation as aforesaid, before the issue of the certificates or scrip provided for in the preceding section.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act, the President is authorized to have the lands within the said reserve surveyed and exposed to public sale at the land offices for the districts in which said lands may lie, according to the boundaries of the several land districts recently established by Congress, in the same manner as other public lands.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXVII.—An Act to amend the act approved September twenty-seven, eighteen hundred and fifty, to create the Office of Surveyor General of the Public Lands in Oregon, etc., and also the act amendatory thereof, approved February nineteen, eighteen hundred and fifty three.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the donations hereafter to be surveyed in Oregon and Washington Territories, claimed under any of the provisions of the act to create the office of surveyor general of the public lands in Oregon, etc., approved September twenty-seven, eighteen hundred and fifty, shall in no case include a town site, or lands settled upon for purposes of business or trade, and not for agriculture; and all legal subdivisions included in whole or in part in such town sites, or settled upon for purposes of business or trade, and not for agriculture, shall be subject to the operations of the act of May twenty-three, eighteen hundred and forty-four, "for the relief of citizens of towns upon lands of the United States, under certain circumstances," whether such settlements were made before or after the surveys: Provided, however, That the period of two years occupancy required of settlers before they can purchase the lands claimed by them under the provisions of the first section of the act of February fourteen, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, above mentioned, shall be, and the same is hereby, reduced to one year.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the proviso to the fourth section of the act of twenty-seventh September, eighteen hundred and fifty, above mentioned, by which all contracts for the sale of lands claimed under that law, before the issue of the patents therefor, are declared void, shall be, and the same is hereby, repealed: Provided, That no sale shall be deemed valid, unless the vendor shall have resided four years upon the land.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the preemption privilege granted by the act of the fourth of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, shall be, and the same is hereby, extended to the lands in Oregon and Washington Territories, whether surveyed or unsurveyed, not rightfully claimed, entered, or reserved, under the provisions of this act, or the acts of which it is amendatory, nor excluded by the terms of the said act of eighteen hundred and forty-one, with the exception of unsurveyed lands as above mentioned; and all settlers on unsurveyed lands in said Territories shall give notice to the surveyor general, or other duly authorized officer, of the particular tract claimed under this section, within six months after the survey of such lands is made and returned. And all persons claiming donations under this act, or the acts of which it is amendatory, shall in like manner give notice to the surveyor general, or other duly authorized officer, of the particular lands claimed as such donations, within thirty days after being requested to do so by such officer; and failing such notice in either case, the claimant or claimants shall forfeit all right and claim thereto: Provided, however, That the time limited by the sixth section of the act of eighteen hundred and fifty-three, in which claimants under the act of eighteen hundred and fifty are required to give notice of their claims, shall be, and the same is hereby, extended to the first of December, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, except in cases where the surveyor general shall request them so to do, as above provided.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That, in lieu of the two townships of land granted to the Territory of Oregon by the tenth section of the act of eighteen hundred and fifty, for universities, there shall be reserved to each of the Territories of Washington and Oregon two townships of land of thirty-six sections each, to be selected in legal subdivisions, for university purposes, under the direction of the Legislatures of said Territories, respectively.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That in any case where orphans have been, or may be, left in either of the said Territories, whose parents, or either of them, if living, would have been entitled to a donation under this act, or either of those of which it is amendatory, said orphans shall be entitled to a quarter section of land on due proof being made to the satisfaction of the surveyor general, subject to the decision of the Secretary of the Interior. Said land to be set off to them by the surveyor general in good agricultural land, not reserved, or otherwise appropriated, under any law of Congress; and, in case of the death of either, or any of said orphans, after their lands shall have been designated by the surveyor general, the right or rights of the deceased shall vest in the survivor or survivors.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That all the provisions of this act, and the acts of which it is amendatory, shall be extended to all the lands in Oregon and Washington Territories; and, for the purpose of carrying said acts into effect in said Territories, the President shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a register and receiver for each of said Territories, whose powers, duties, obligations, and responsibilities, shall be the same as are now prescribed by law for other land officers and for the surveyor general of Oregon, so far as they apply to such officers. They shall keep their offices at such place as the President shall, from time to time, direct; and their compensation shall be twenty-five hundred dollars each per annum, and office rent; but they shall be entitled to no fees, or other emoluments of any kind whatsoever, except the receiver's actual and necessary expenses in depositing; and, on satisfactory proof that either of said officers, or any other officer, has charged or received fees, or other rewards not authorized by law, he shall be forthwith removed from office.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Territory of Washington shall be erected into a separate surveying district, and the President of the United States is hereby authorized to appoint a surveyor general for the same, who shall hold his office at such place as the President may direct, and the location thereof may be changed from time to time, if, in the judgment of the President, the public interest should require it, and the powers, duties, obligations, responsibilities, and emoluments of the said surveyor general shall be the same as are now prescribed by law for the surveyor general of Oregon.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXVIII.—An Act making further Appropriations for continuing the Construction of Roads in the Territory of Minnesota, in accordance with the estimates made by the War Department.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums of money be, and they are hereby, appropriated for continuing the construction of roads in the Territory of Minnesota, to wit:

For the continuation of the road from Point Douglas, on the Mississippi river, to the mouth of the St. Louis river, of Lake Superior, in Wisconsin, twenty thousand dollars.

For the continuation of the road from Point Douglas to Fort Gaines, now Fort Ripley, ten thousand dollars.

For the continuation of the road from the mouth of Swan river to the Winnebago agency, five thousand dollars.

For the continuation of the road from Wabashaw to Mendota, fifteen thousand dollars.

The continuation of the construction of said roads to be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, pursuant to contracts to be made by him, or under his direction: Provided, That so much of any former acts as require the first-mentioned road to terminate at the falls or rapids of said St. Louis river, are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XXXIX.—An Act to refund to the Territory of Utah the Expenses incurred by said Territory in suppressing Indian Hostilities.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to examine into and ascertain the amount of expenses incurred by the said Territory in the suppression of Indian hostilities within said Territory during the years eighteen hundred and fifty and eighteen hundred and fifty-one; and that the amount of such expenses, when so ascertained, be paid into the Treasury of said Territory: Provided, That the sum so paid shall not exceed in amount twenty thousand nine hundred and forty dollars and sixty-five cents, which amount is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XL.—An Act to authorize the Secretary of War to settle and adjust the Expenses of the Rogue River Indian War.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to adjust and settle, on just and equitable principles, all claims for services rendered in the late war with the Rogue River Indians in Oregon—known as the Rogue River war—according to the muster-rolls of the same; also for subsistence, forage, medical stores, and expenditures, as well as for any other necessary and proper supplies furnished for the prosecution of said war; and that, on such adjustment, be paid out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, July 17, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLI.—An Act to Incorporate the Georgetown Gas-Light Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That David English, Robert P. Dodge, Richard Cruikshank, William M. Fitzhugh, Richard Pettit, William F. Seymour, Adolphus H. Pickrell, and William Bucknell, and their present and future associates, are hereby declared to be a body-politic and corporate, by the name and style of "The Georgetown Gas-Light Company," and by the same name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, in all courts of law and equity in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; to make and have a common seal, and the same to break, alter, and renew at pleasure; to ordain and establish by-laws, ordinances, and regulations, and generally to do every act and thing necessary to carry into effect this act, or to promote the objects and design of this corporation.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock of this corporation shall not exceed one hundred and fifty thousand dollars; that a share in the same shall be twenty-five dollars, and books of subscription to the said capital stock, or to such portions thereof, as from time to time may, by the directors, for the time being, be deemed proper and necessary, shall be opened by the appointment, or under the direction, of the directors hereinafter named, subject to such rules, limitations, and conditions as by them shall be prescribed; and the stock of the said company shall be deemed personal property.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the stock, property, and affairs of the said company shall be managed and conducted by and under the direction of a president and seven directors, being stockholders; that the said directors shall be elected on the first Monday of June, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and on the same day in each succeeding year thereafter, and shall hold their offices for one year from the day of their election, and until other directors shall be elected in their place; that such election shall be held in Georgetown aforesaid, at such time and place as a majority of the directors for the time being shall appoint, and notice of such time and place of election shall be given by advertisement in one or more newspapers printed and published in the said town, at least fourteen days before the day of holding such election; and every such election shall be by ballot, and by such of the stockholders as shall attend for that purpose, either in person or by proxy; and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for each share of the stock which he or she may have held, and may continue to hold in his or her own name, for at least fourteen days before the time of voting; and the persons having the greatest number of votes shall be the directors; and if it shall happen that two or more persons shall have an equal number of votes, the directors in office at the time of such election shall, by a plurality of votes, given by ballot, determine which of the persons so having an equal number of votes shall be director or directors, so as to complete the whole number to be chosen; and the directors so chosen shall, as soon as may be thereafter, proceed to elect by ballot one of their own number, or one of the shareholders, to be their president; and whenever any vacancy shall happen in the said board of president and directors, the same shall be filled up by the remaining directors by plurality of votes, until the next annual election: Provided always, That the president of the said company, and at least six of the directors, shall be inhabitants of the said town.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That David English, Robert P. Dodge, Richard Cruikshank, William M. Fitzhugh, Richard Pettit, William F. Seymour, Adolphus H. Pickrell, and William Bucknell shall be the first directors of the said company; the first named of whom shall be their president, and shall hold their offices until the first Monday in June, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and until others are chosen in their places.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That in case it shall happen at any time that an election for directors shall not take place on the day appointed by this act for that purpose, the said corporation shall not for that cause, or for any non-user, be deemed to be dissolved, but it shall and may be lawful to hold an election for directors on any other day, in such manner as shall be provided for by the by-laws of the said corporation.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the directors, or a majority of them, to require payment of the subscriptions to the capital stock of the said corporation at such times and in such proportions as they, or a majority of them, shall deem fit, under the penalty of forfeiting any or all previous payment or payments thereon: Provided, Notice of the installment required to be paid shall have been published at least fourteen days in one or more of the newspapers printed and published in the said town, before the day appointed for the payment thereof.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the President and directors shall have full power and authority to manufacture, make, and sell gas, to be made of coal, oil, tar, peat, pitch, turpentine, or other material, and to be used for the purpose of lighting the city of Georgetown, or the streets thereof, and any buildings, manufactories, or houses therein contained and situate; and to lay pipes for the purpose of conducting gas in any of the streets, lanes, or alleys of the said city: Provided, however, That the said company shall so conduct the manufacture of gas as not to injure private property, or create a nuisance; and that the said pipes shall be laid, subject to such conditions, and in compliance with such regulations, as the corporation of Georgetown, aforesaid, may from time to time prescribe: And provided further, That the right to erect and put up any buildings, works, or apparatus, for the manufacture of gas, shall be subject to such terms, conditions, restrictions, and regulations as the said corporation of Georgetown may, from time to time, prescribe or direct.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons shall wilfully do, or cause to be done, any act or acts whatsoever, whereby the works of the said company, or any pipe, conduit, plug, cock, reservoir, or any engine, machine, or structure, or any matter or thing appertaining to the same shall be stopped, obstructed, impaired, weakened, injured, or destroyed, the person or persons so offending shall forfeit and pay to the said corporation double the amount of the damage sustained by means of such offense or injury, to be recovered in the name of said corporation, with cost of suit in any action of debt, or on the case, to be brought in any court having cognizance thereof.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent any person or persons, nor any incorporated company, hereafter to be created by Congress for that purpose, from engaging in and pursuing the business specified in the seventh section of this act; and that it shall be lawful for Congress, at any time hereafter, to alter, amend, or repeal this act.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to authorize the said Georgetown Gas-Light Company to make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, draft, check, order, promissory note, change ticket, or anything else promising or agreeing to pay money, intended to circulate as money, or the tendency of which shall be to circulate as money or currency, and the violation of any one of the provisions of this section shall be a forfeiture of the charter hereby given, and shall subject each of the directors voting for the same to a fine of fifty dollars.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That each of the stockholders in the Georgetown Gas-Light Company shall be held liable in his or her individual capacity for all the debts and liabilities of the said company, however contracted or incurred, to be recovered by suit, as other debts or liabilities, before the court or tribunal having jurisdiction of the case.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That all right granted to the Washington Gas-Light Company by an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to incorporate the Washington Gas-Light Company, approved July eight, eighteen hundred and forty-eight,' approved August second, eighteen hundred and fifty-two," to lay gas mains or pipes in the city of Georgetown, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, July 20, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLII.—An Act regulating the Time of holding the Sessions of the District and Circuit Courts of the United States in the Eastern District of Louisiana.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there shall hereafter be annually only three stated sessions of the district court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana, which shall be held at New Orleans on the third Mondays of November, February, and May: Provided: That the judge of said court shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to adjourn any stated session to any time or times previous to the next stated session of said district court, whenever he may deem it expedient.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the fall term of the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Louisiana, shall hereafter be held on the first Monday of November, in each year, instead of the third Monday of December, as heretofore provided by law.

APPROVED, July 20, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLIII.—An Act making further Appropriation for the Improvement of the Cape Fear River, North Carolina.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the sum of one hundred and forty thousand dollars be, and the same is hereby, appropriated for the year ending thirtieth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to be expended under the superintendence of the Secretary of War, for the continuation of the improvement of the Cape Fear river, North Carolina, at or near its communication with the ocean.

APPROVED, July 22, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLIV.—An Act to establish the Offices of Surveyor General of New Mexico, Kansas, and Nebraska, to grant Donations to Actual Settlers therein, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a surveyor general for New Mexico, whose annual salary shall be three thousand dollars, and whose power, authority, and duties shall be the same as those provided by law for the surveyor general of Oregon; he shall have proper allowances for clerk-hire, office rent, and fuel, not exceeding what now is or hereafter may be allowed by law to the said surveyor general of Oregon; and he shall locate his office, from time to time, at such places as may be directed by the President of the United States.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That to every white male citizen of the United States, or every white male above the age of twenty-one years who has declared his intention to become a citizen, and who was residing in said Territory prior to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and who may be still residing there, there shall be, and hereby is, donated one quarter section, or one hundred and sixty acres of land. And to every white male citizen of the United States, or every white male above the age of twenty-one years who has declared his intention to become a citizen, and who shall have removed or shall remove to and settle in said Territory between the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, and the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, there shall in like manner be donated one quarter section, or one hundred and sixty acres, on condition of actual settlement and cultivation for not less than four years: Provided, however, That each of said donations shall include the actual settlement and improvement of the donee, and shall be selected by legal subdivisions, within three months after the survey of the land where the settlement was made before the survey; and where the settlement was made after the survey, then within three months after the settlement has been made; and all persons failing to designate the boundaries of their claims within that time, shall forfeit all right to the same.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That, on proof of the settlement and cultivation required by this act, to the satisfaction of the surveyor general, or other officer designated by law for that purpose, subject to the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior, a certificate shall be issued to the party entitled, on presentation of which, if approved by the Secretary of the Interior, a patent shall issue thereon: Provided, however, That on the death of any such settler before the completion of the four years' occupancy and cultivation required by this act, the right shall descend to his heirs-at-law, who shall be entitled to a certificate and patent, as aforesaid, on proof, as before provided, of continued occupancy and cultivation by such settler to the time of his death: Provided, however, That when lands are claimed under any of the provisions of this act by persons who are not citizens of the United States, patents shall not issue therefor until they become citizens.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That none of the provisions of this act shall extend to mineral or school lands, salines, military or other reservations, or lands settled on and occupied for purposes of trade and commerce, and not for agriculture, and all legal subdivisions settled on and occupied, in whole or in part, for purposes of trade and commerce, and not for agriculture, shall be subject to the provisions of the act of twenty-third of May, eighteen hundred and forty-four, in relation to town sites on the public lands, whether so settled and occupied before or after the survey of said lands, except that said lands shall be donated instead of being sold.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That when the lands in the said Territory shall be surveyed, under the direction of the Government of the United States, preparatory to bringing the same into market, sections numbered sixteen and thirty-six in each township, in said Territory, shall be, and the same are hereby, reserved for the purpose of being applied to schools in said Territory, and in the States and Territories hereafter to be created out of the same.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That, when the lands in said Territory shall be surveyed as aforesaid, a quantity of land equal to two townships shall be, and the same is hereby, reserved for the establishment of a university in said Territory, and in the State hereafter to be created out of the same, to be selected, under the direction of the Legislature, in legal subdivisions of not less than one half section.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That any of the lands not taken under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the operation of the pre-emption act of fourth September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, whether settled upon before or after the survey; and, in all cases where the settlement was made before the survey, the settler shall file his declaration within three months after the survey is made and returned; and any person claiming a donation under this act shall be permitted to enter the land claimed by him at any time prior to the four years' occupancy and cultivation required, by paying therefor at the rate of one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and proving occupancy and cultivation up to the time of such payment.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the surveyor general, under such instructions as may be given by the Secretary of the Interior, to ascertain the origin, nature, character, and extent of all claims to lands under the laws, usages, and customs of Spain and Mexico; and, for this purpose, may issue notices, summon witnesses, administer oaths, and do and perform all other necessary acts in the premises. He shall make a full report on all such claims as originated before the cession of the territory to the United States by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, denoting the various grades of title, with his decision as to the validity or invalidity of each of the same under the laws, usages, and customs of the country before its cession to the United States; and shall also make a report in regard to all pueblos existing in the Territory, showing the extent and locality of each, stating the number of inhabitants in the said pueblos, respectively, and the nature of their titles to the land. Such report to be made according to the form which may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior; which report shall be laid before Congress for such action thereon as may be deemed just and proper, with a view to confirm bona fide grants, and give full effect to the treaty of eighteen hundred and forty-eight, between the United States and Mexico; and, until the final action of Congress on such claims, all lands covered thereby shall be reserved from sale or other disposal by the Government, and shall not be subject to the donations granted by the previous provisions of this act.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That full power and authority are hereby given the Secretary of the Interior to issue all needful rules and regulations for carrying into effect the several provisions of this act.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint, by the advice and consent of the Senate, a surveyor general for the Territories of Nebraska and Kansas, who shall locate his office at such place as the President of the United States shall from time to time direct, and whose duties, powers, obligations, and responsibilities, and compensation shall be the same as those of the surveyor general of Wisconsin and Iowa, and who shall be allowed the same amount for office rent, fuel, incidental expenses, and clerk hire as is allowed to said surveyor general of Wisconsin and Iowa.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That said surveyor general shall cause the necessary surveys to be made in said Territories of standard meridian, base and parallel lines, and of township and subdivisional lines, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That all the lands to which the Indian title has been or shall be extinguished within said Territories of Nebraska and Kansas, shall be subject to the operations of the pre-emption act of fourth September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, and under the conditions, restrictions, and stipulations therein mentioned: Provided, however, That where unsurveyed lands are claimed by pre-emption, notice of the specific tracts claimed shall be filed within three months after the survey has been made in the field, and on failure to file such notice, or to pay for the tracts claimed before the day fixed for the public sale of the lands by the proclamation of the President of the United States, the parties claiming such lands shall forfeit all right thereto: Provided, said notices may be filed with the surveyor general and to be noted by him on the township plats, until other arrangements shall have been made by law for that purpose.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the public lands in the Territory of Nebraska, to which the Indian title shall have been extinguished, shall constitute a new land district, to be called the Omaha district; and the public lands in the Territory of Kansas, to which the Indian title shall have been extinguished, shall constitute a new land district, to be called the Pawnee district: the offices for each of which districts shall be established at such points as the President may deem expedient; and he is hereby authorized to appoint, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, a register and receiver of public moneys for each of said districts, who shall each be required to reside at the site of their respective offices, and they shall have the same powers, perform the same duties, and be entitled to the same compensation as are or may be prescribed by law in relation to other land offices of the United States. And the President is hereby authorized to cause the surveyed lands to be exposed for sale from time to time, in the same manner, and upon the same terms and conditions, as the other public lands of the United States.

APPROVED, July 22, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLV.—An Act for the relief of the Widows and Orphans of the Officers and Seamen of the United States schooner Grampus, who were lost in that vessel in March, eighteen hundred and forty-three, near the coast of the United States.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the same provision as is made by the act entitled "An act for the relief of the widows and orphans of the officers, seamen, and marines, of the brig Somers," approved the fourteenth day of August, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, and "An act for the relief of the widows and relatives of certain officers and seamen of the United States brig Washington, who were lost overboard in a hurricane," approved February the third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, be also extended to the widows and orphans of the officers and seamen who were lost in the United States schooner Grampus in the gale of March, eighteen hundred and forty-three, near the coast of the United States.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLVI.—An Act creating a Collection District in New York to be called the District of Dunkirk, and constituting Dunkirk a Port of Entry, and the Ports of Barcelona, Silver Creek and Cattaraugus Creek Ports of Delivery.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the counties of Cattaraugus and Chautauque, and the harbors, rivers, and waters on the southern shore of Lake Erie, in the State of New York, west of and including Cattaraugus Creek, and the shores on each side of said creek, and west along the shore and territory bordering on Lake Erie aforesaid, to the Pennsylvania State line, and the islands in the said lake contiguous thereto, heretofore embraced in the district of Buffalo Creek, shall be, and are hereby, constituted a collection district, to be called the district of Dunkirk; and a port of entry for said district is hereby established at Dunkirk, and the ports of Barcelona, Silver Creek, and Cattaraugus Creek shall be ports of delivery.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there shall be appointed, in the manner prescribed by law, a collector of customs for the aforesaid district who shall thereafter, and during his continuance in office, reside at the port of entry created by this act, together with such other subordinate officers of the customs as are provided for by law, and the compensation of said collector shall be such sum as shall be designated by the Secretary of the Treasury in the classification of the compensation of collectors of customs, not to exceed one thousand dollars per annum: Provided, That in case no classification of the compensation of collectors of customs shall be made, then the compensation of the collector for the port of entry established by this act shall be five hundred dollars per annum, together with such fees and emoluments as are authorized by existing laws.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That deputy collectors of customs for the several ports of delivery constituted by this act shall be appointed and compensated for their services in the mode prescribed by existing laws; and said officers shall exercise all the powers and duties vested in deputy collectors of customs under existing laws.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLVII.—An Act making Appropriations to defray the Expenses of the Cayuse war.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That there be, and hereby is, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the further sum of seventy-five thousand dollars to pay the actual and necessary expenses incurred by the provisional government of Oregon in defending the people of the said Territory from the attacks and hostilities of the Cayuse Indians, in the years eighteen hundred and forty-seven and eighteen hundred and forty-eight, and for such allowances for the expenses of adjusting the claims on that account as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem proper, not exceeding five dollars per day to each commissioner; and that the Secretary of the Treasury pay out of said appropriation so much thereof as may be necessary to liquidate said claims according to the reports of the commissioners heretofore appointed for ascertaining said amounts and of the Governor of said Territory, that have been communicated to Congress. And no claims shall hereafter be allowed on account of this war which are not presented at the Treasury Department of the United States within the next fiscal year.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all of said claims and accounts not heretofore adjusted, shall be settled and adjusted at such place and in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. And the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby empowered to re-examine any award that has been or may be made of said claims, and to reduce the amount, if, in his judgment, founded on proof, it should be too much.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLVIII.—An Act to increase the Salaries of Executive and Judiciary Officers in Oregon, New Mexico, Washington, Utah, and Minnesota.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the annual salaries of the chief justices and associate judges of the Territories of Oregon, Washington, Utah, and New Mexico, be, and the same are hereby, increased to the sum of two thousand five hundred dollars each; and that the salary of the Governor of New Mexico be, and the same is hereby, increased to the sum of three thousand dollars; and that of the secretaries of Oregon, Washington, Utah, and New Mexico, to the sum of two thousand dollars per annum.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the annual salaries of the chief justice and associate judges of the Territory of Minnesota be increased to two thousand dollars.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, XLIX.—An Act making Appropriations for the payment of Invalid and other Pensions of the United States for the year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the payment of pensions for the year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five:

For invalid pensions, under various acts, three hundred and twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For pensions to widows and orphans, under acts of the fourth of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six, and twenty-first of July, one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight, ninety-six thousand dollars.

For pensions and half pay to widows and orphans, under act of the third of February, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, three hundred and seventy-six thousand two hundred dollars.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, L.—An Act making provision for the Postal Service in the State of California and in the Territories of Oregon and Washington.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to empower the special agents of the Post Office Department in the State of California, and in the Territories of Oregon and Washington, to appoint letter-carriers for the delivery of letters from any post office in the said State or Territories, and to allow any letter-carrier so appointed to demand and receive a sum for all letters, newspapers, or other mailable matter, not more than may be recommended by the postmaster for whose office such letter-carrier may be appointed: Provided, That not more than twenty-five cents shall be charged for any letter, newspaper, or ounce of other mailable matter. All such appointments may be determined, and rates of compensation modified within the limits aforesaid, whenever the same is found expedient in the opinion of the appointing agent: And it is further provided, That all such appointments and contracts shall be subject to the approval of the Postmaster General; and upon notice to any carrier of his rejection by the Postmaster General, his appointment and contract shall be determined; and that all letter-carriers appointed in pursuance of this act shall be subject to the provisions of the forty-first section of the act entitled "An act to change the organization of the Post Office Department, and to provide more effectually for the settlement of the accounts thereof," approved July second, eighteen hundred and thirty-six, except as herein otherwise provided: Provided, That no letter or letters or other mailable [matter] shall be delivered by any postmaster to said carriers, unless requested in writing by the person or persons to whom said letters or other mailable matter may be directed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That each and every letter-carrier route which may be established under the provisions of this act, shall be deemed a post route during its continuance; and the provisions contained in the ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, and fifteenth sections of an act entitled

"An act to reduce the rates of postage, to limit the use and correct the abuse of the franking privilege, and for the prevention of frauds on the revenues of the Post Office Department," approved March third, eighteen hundred and forty-five, and the fifth and eighth sections of an act entitled "An act to establish certain post roads, and for other purposes," approved August thirty-first, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, are hereby made applicable to said letter-carrier routes.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause the dead letters which may accumulate in the post offices in said State and Territories after the thirtieth day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, to be returned in periods not less than quarter-yearly to the post office at San Francisco, to be there opened and examined under the direction of the postmaster of that office, who shall, according to such regulations as the Postmaster General may prescribe, return to the Post Office Department such of said letters as shall be found to contain money, valuable papers, or matters of consequence, to be disposed of according to law, and destroy such letters as shall be found to contain nothing of value: Provided, however, That no dead letters shall be opened which the postal arrangements of the United States with foreign countries require to be returned unopened to such countries respectively.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General may allow to the postmasters in said State and Territories, from the first day of July, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, such sums out of the postages collected at their respective offices as will, in addition to the commissions, allowances, and emoluments, be sufficient to defray the actual and necessary expenses of their offices.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, in the settlement of the accounts of postmasters in the State of California and Territory of Oregon, serving as such previous to the thirtieth of June, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and fifty-three, to allow to such postmasters all just and reasonable expenses incurred by them in and about the business of their respective offices, and the discharge of their official duties: Provided, That no allowance shall be made whereby the United States shall be charged with any indebtedness whatsoever.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, LI.—An Act to Ascertain and Adjust the Titles to certain Lands in the State of Indiana.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the register and receiver of the land office at Vincennes, together with a fit and proper person learned in the law, and a citizen of Indiana, to be appointed by the President of the United States, are hereby constituted commissioners to ascertain and adjust the title of any claimant to any tract of land, or any part or subdivision thereof, granted by the resolve of Congress of the twenty-ninth of August, seventeen hundred and eighty-eight, and the act of the third of March, seventeen hundred and ninety-one, entitled "An act for granting lands to the inhabitants and settlers at Vincennes, and the Illinois country in territory northwest of the Ohio, and for confirming them in their possessions," and the several acts in aid of, and supplementary thereto.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That every such claimant to any tract of land so granted, or any part or subdivision thereof, shall, within six months after the publication of the notice hereinafter provided for, file his claim in writing, with the said register, in which he shall specifically set forth such facts as shall be required in the instructions of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That such register, upon the receipt of such instructions, shall give notice, by publication in some newspaper of general circulation in the vicinity of the said lands, of his readiness to receive applications of claimants, to which notice shall be attached the instructions of the said commissioner.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That such commissioners shall meet immediately after the time allowed for filing such claims, and shall hold their sessions in the town of Vincennes. They shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses, administer all necessary oaths, and to hear and decide in a summary manner all matters respecting such claims. Minutes of the proceedings, decisions, meetings, and adjournments of the said board, shall be regularly entered by the register in a book kept for that purpose, together with the evidence adduced in each particular case, upon which their decisions have been made.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That every claimant to any tract of land so granted, or any part or subdivision thereof, who can produce to such commissioners a regular chain of title from the original confirmee to himself, or who can show to their satisfaction a continuous and connected possession in himself, and those under whom he claims, for a period of twenty years or more, next preceding the filing of his claim, or can show such a claim or title as would, in the courts of Indiana, bar an action of ejectment, such claimant shall be confirmed in his title.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That said commissioners shall, on or before the first day of September, eighteen hundred and fifty-five, transmit to the Commissioner of the General Land Office a transcript of their decisions in favor of claimants, which shall contain a fair statement of the evidence on which each respective claim is founded; and also a transcript of their decisions against claimants, with a like statement of the evidence and the reason of such rejection.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the Commissioner of the General Land Office, upon the receipt of such transcript, shall issue a patent to each claimant so confirmed in his title by the said commissioners; and where any such claims have been rejected, the said Commissioner, upon application of the proper person, shall have power to revise such decision of the said board, and may, if in his opinion the evidence warrants it, reverse such decision, and issue a patent therefor to such claimant: Provided, That this right to revise shall not extend to those claims rejected, where the same lands have been confirmed by the said board to some other claimant: And provided further, That the patents so issued shall only be a relinquishment of the title of the United States, and shall not be construed into an abridgment of the rights of third persons.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the commissioner appointed by the President, shall receive a compensation of eight dollars per day, for each and every day he may be engaged in the discharge of the duties imposed by this act, and the register and receiver shall receive such compensation for their services as may be just and proper, in the discretion of the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of the General Land Office to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to give full effect to the provisions of this act.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, LII.—An Act to Incorporate the Proprietors of the Glenwood Cemetery.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Charles B. Calvert, George Parker, William B. Todd, James C. McGuire, William A. Bradley, Charles S. Wallach, Abner Miller, William Banks, Joseph B. Close, William Phelps, William S. Humphreys, Randolph S. Evans, and their successors, be, and they are hereby, created a body-politic and corporate, by the name and title of the proprietors of the "Glenwood Cemetery, in the District of Columbia," and by that name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able and liable to sue and be sued in any court of law or equity, may have and use a common seal, and shall have power to purchase and hold not exceeding one hundred acres of land in the District of Columbia, north of the limits of the City of Washington, to sell and dispose of such parts of said land as may not be wanted for the purpose of a cemetery: Provided, That at least thirty contiguous acres shall be forever appropriated and set apart as a cemetery, with authority to said corporation to receive gifts and bequests for the purpose of ornamenting and improving said cemetery, and to hold such personal property

THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE.

THE OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS, PUBLISHED BY JOHN C. RIVES, WASHINGTON, D. C.

33D CONGRESS, 1ST SESSION.

MONDAY, AUGUST 7, 1854.

NEW SERIES....No. 141.

as may be requisite to carry out the object of this act.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of the said corporation shall be conducted by a president and three managers, who shall be elected annually, by a majority of the votes of the proprietors; the said president and managers to fill all vacancies in their own body, and shall have power to lay out and ornament the grounds, remove and alter old buildings and erect new ones, to lay out and sell or dispose of burial lots, to appoint all necessary officers and agents, and fix their several duties and compensation, and to make such by laws, rules, and regulations as they may deem proper for conducting the affairs of the corporation, for the government of lot-holders, and visitors to the cemetery, and for the transfer of stock and the evidence thereof. In all elections held under this act, each proprietor shall be entitled to one vote for each share held by him or her.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock of said company shall be represented by two thousand shares of fifty dollars each, divided among the proprietors according to their respective interests, and transferable in such manner as the by-laws may direct.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That no streets, lanes, alleys, roads, or canals, of any sort, shall be opened through the property of said corporation, exclusively used and appropriated to the purposes of a cemetery: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall authorize said corporation to obstruct any public road, or street, or lane, or alley, now actually opened and used as such.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall willfully destroy, mutilate, deface, injure, or remove any tomb, monument, grave-stone, or other structure placed in said cemetery, or any fence, railing, or work for protection or ornament of said cemetery, or any tomb, monument, grave-stone, or other structure thereon, or shall willfully destroy, cut, break, or remove any tree, shrub, or plant within the limits of said cemetery, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof before any justice of the peace of the county of Washington, shall be punished by fine, at the discretion of the justice, according to the aggravation of the offense, of not less than five, nor more than fifty dollars.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That until an election shall be held under the provisions of this act, the four last named persons in section first shall be the managers of said corporation.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That burial lots in said cemetery shall not be subject to the debts of the stockholders thereof, and the land of the company dedicated to the purposes of a cemetery shall not be subject to taxation of any kind.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation shall provide for the return, from time to time, to the corporation of Washington, reports of all interments made in said cemetery of persons who may have died within the limits of the said corporation of Washington, in such manner and according to such forms as may be prescribed, from time to time, by the corporation of Washington.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That a certificate, under seal of the corporation, of the ownership of any lot aforesaid, shall in all respects have the same effect as any conveyance from said corporation of said lots would have, if executed, acknowledged, and recorded as conveyances of real estate are required to be.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to authorize the said corporation to issue any note, token, device, scrip, or other evidence of debt, to be used as currency.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect from the passage thereof.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That it may be lawful for Congress hereafter to alter, modify, or repeal the foregoing act.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That each of the stockholders in the said company shall be held liable in his or her individual capacity for all the debts and liabilities of the said company, however contracted or incurred, to be recovered by suit as other debts or liabilities before the court or tribunal having jurisdiction of the case.

APPROVED, July 27, 1854.

PUBLIC, LIII.—An Act supplementary to an act entitled "An act to authorize Notaries Public to take and certify Oaths, Affirmations, and Acknowledgments in certain cases."

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the powers and authority conferred in and by the above-recited act, approved September sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty, upon notaries public in the States and Territories, be, and the same are hereby, vested in notaries public within the District of Columbia.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That notaries public be, and they are hereby, authorized to take depositions and do such other acts in relation to evidence to be used in the courts of the United States, in the same manner and with the same effect, as commissioners to take acknowledgments of bail and affidavits may now lawfully take or do.

APPROVED, July 29, 1854.

PUBLIC, LIV.—An Act making Appropriations for the Current and Contingent Expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling Treaty Stipulations with various Indian Tribes for the year ending June thirtieth, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-five, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of paying the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes.

ized, upon the completion of the light-house and exhibition of the light authorized by the first section of this act to be erected near the entrance to the Southwest Pass of the Mississippi, to cause the present light at that locality to be extinguished, and tower, buildings, and land belonging thereto to be sold, and upon the payments for the same being made, to execute and deliver all needful conveyances therefor; and the jurisdiction of the United States over said land shall thereafter cease and revert to the State of Louisiana.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That if, after a careful hydrographical examination of the locality, and the approaches thereto, shall have been made, it is found that the light at the entrance to Vermillion bay, Louisiana, is not necessary for the navigation of that bay and the adjacent coasts, it shall be extinguished; and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to cause the lands and buildings belonging thereto to be sold, in the same manner as is provided in the fifth section of this bill.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That if preliminary surveys are required to ascertain the necessity for any light-house or other aid provided for in this bill, or to determine the proper site for the same, or to ascertain more fully what the public exigency requires, the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the necessary examinations and surveys on the sea-board to be made under the direction of the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, and those on the northwestern lakes to be made under the direction of the Bureau of Topographical Engineers; and in all cases in which adverse reports are made, they shall be submitted to Congress at its next session; and in all cases in which the objects authorized are favorably reported upon, the works shall be commenced immediately after valid titles and State jurisdiction shall have been obtained to the sites.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXIII.—An Act to authorize the State of Illinois to select the residue of the Lands to which she is entitled under the act of second of March, eighteen hundred and twenty-seven, granting land to aid that State in opening a Canal to connect the waters of the Illinois river with those of Lake Michigan.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Governor of the State of Illinois is hereby authorized to cause to be selected, the balance of the land to which that State is entitled under the provisions of the act of the second of March, eighteen hundred and twenty-seven, granting land to aid that State in opening a canal to connect the waters of the Illinois river with those of Lake Michigan, out of any of the unsold public land in the State subject to private entry at one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, and not claimed by preemption, the quantity to be ascertained upon the principles which governed the final adjustment of the grant to the State of Indiana for the Wabash and Erie canal, under the provisions of the act of Congress approved the ninth of May, eighteen hundred and forty-eight.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXIV.—An Act to amend the provisions of the fifty-sixth section of the act entitled "An Act to regulate the Collection of Duties on Imports and Tonnage," approved the second day of March, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-nine.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That whenever merchandise shall hereafter be imported into any port of the United States from any foreign country, in vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, and it shall appear by the bills of lading that the merchandise so imported is to be delivered immediately after the entry of the vessel, it shall be lawful for the collector of such port to take possession of such merchandise, and deposit the same in bonded warehouse; and whenever it shall not appear by the bills of lading that the merchandise imported as aforesaid is to be immediately delivered, it shall be lawful for the collector of the customs to take possession of the same, and deposit it in bonded warehouse, at the request of the owner, master, or consignee of the vessel, on three days' notice to such collector after the entry of the vessel; and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the foregoing provisions are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXV.—An Act authorizing the Extension of the Alexandria and Washington Railroad into the District of Columbia, and conferring certain Privileges on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company, incorporated by the Legislature of Virginia, on the twenty-seventh of February, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, to construct a railroad from Alexandria, in the State of Virginia, to the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, be, and are hereby, authorized to extend their road from any point on the Virginia side of the Potomac river to which said road may be constructed, at or above the aqueduct of the Alexandria canal, into the District of Columbia, connecting with the Baltimore and Washington railroad depot by the most convenient and practicable route or routes, passing through and along such streets or avenues, except the Pennsylvania avenue, of Washington and Georgetown as the corporate authorities thereof may respectively approve, subject to certain provisions hereinafter expressed.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company are hereby authorized to construct a bridge over the Potomac river, on, or above, or west of the aqueduct of the Alexandria Canal Company: Provided, Said bridge shall only be built on or over the piers of the aqueduct, with the consent of the Alexandria Canal Company: And provided further, In constructing said bridge, and crossing the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, said bridge and railroad shall be so constructed as not to injure or obstruct the use or navigation of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal: And provided further, That this act shall not prevent Congress from giving like privileges to any other railroad company or any other person.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company are hereby authorized to establish depots in the cities of Washington and Georgetown, at such points as the corporate authorities thereof may respectively approve, and to lay a railroad track or tracks to such point or points within said cities, and through and along such streets and avenues, except the Pennsylvania avenue, of said cities, as may be respectively approved of by the corporate authorities of said cities, and to make all necessary turnouts; the said railroad company being subject to such terms, conditions, restrictions, and taxation, and to such rules and regulations relative to the construction, repairs, and working of their road, within the cities of Washington and Georgetown, as the corporate authorities of said cities may, from time to time, respectively prescribe, so far as it may lay within their respective limits: Provided, No higher rate of taxation shall be imposed upon said railroad company than is prescribed by the respective charters of said cities; and said railroad company shall keep an office within the city of Washington or Georgetown, and shall have power to sue and be sued, to make contracts, and to purchase and hold lands, so far as may be necessary for carrying on the operations of the company, and the service of process on the president, or any director of said company, or on the chief clerk in attendance at the office of the company, shall entitle any party complaining to proceed against said company, as authorized under the laws of the District of Columbia to proceed against chartered companies within its limits.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct and extend the Washington branch of said road, according to such route as may be most convenient, through the said District, to some point on the Potomac river opposite to or near the city of Alexandria, in Virginia, for the purpose of forming a connection with the said river, and the lines of railroads running south, subject to the provisions of its present charter; and the said company are hereby authorized to locate, construct, and operate the said extension hereby authorized, through such parts of the city of Washington, or public reservations, as the corporate authorities thereof, or the President of the United States, respectively, may consent to, and also to build a bridge or bridges over the Eastern Branch of the Potomac river, at some point above the navy-yard: Provided, however, That the same shall not obstruct the navigation thereof. And said company shall have power to locate and establish depots, and erect the necessary buildings thereon, and also to erect such wharves or piers into said river as may be necessary, provided the same shall not obstruct the navigation thereof: Provided further, That the said Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company be subject to the same conditions and restrictions in extending their road through any parts of the city of Washington, as are prescribed for the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company: Provided, however, That this section shall remain suspended for two years, from the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five; and if, at the end of that time, the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company shall not have completed a railroad to Alexandria, and have the same in good running order, in pursuance of the requirements of the preceding sections of this bill, then the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company shall have the privilege of extending their road by either of the routes authorized by this act: And provided further, That if said Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company shall not have executed so much of the provisions of this act as relates to their company by the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, then this act shall be void.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXVI.—An Act to constitute Cairo, in the State of Illinois, a Port of Delivery.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Cairo, in the State of Illinois, shall be, and is hereby, constituted a port of delivery, and shall be subject to the same regulations and restrictions as other ports of delivery in the United States; and there shall be appointed a surveyor of customs, to reside at said port, who shall, in addition to his own duties, perform the duties and receive the salary and emoluments of surveyor, prescribed by the act of Congress, approved on the second of March, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, providing for the payment of duties on imported goods at certain ports therein mentioned, entitled "An act allowing the duties on foreign merchandise imported into Pittsburg, Wheeling, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Nashville, and Natchez, to be secured and paid at those places," and the said city of Cairo, and the said port of delivery be, and is hereby, annexed to, and made part of, the collection district of New Orleans, and all the facilities and privileges afforded by said act of Congress of the second March, eighteen hundred and thirty-one, be, and hereby are, extended to the said port of Cairo.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That George H. Calvert, Charles B. Calvert, Roger C. Weightman, Philip Outerback, John Withers, Richard H. Stuart, and Joseph Bryan, and those who may hereafter become members of the company hereinafter mentioned, and their successors, be, and they are hereby, created and declared to be a body-politic and corporate, by the name and style of the National Hotel Company of Washington City; and, by the name aforesaid, to have perpetual succession, with power to sue and be sued, and to make and use a common seal, and to make and repeal rules and by-laws for the good government of said company; and also to hold, use, and enjoy, in fee-simple, or for any lesser estate, the lots and parcels of ground and premises, situated in the city of Washington, being lots 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and parts of lots 7 and 14, in square 491, on the plat of said city, upon which are now erected the house or buildings and appurtenances known and denominated as the National Hotel; and also any additional lots or parts of lots, adjoining the said property, which may be hereafter acquired by said company, and also the improvements, fixtures, conveniences, and advantages erected on said lots or parcels of ground appurtenant thereto.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock of said company shall be five hundred thousand dollars; to be divided into five thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, and shall be distributed among the parties interested in the said lots of ground and premises, in such manner as shall be agreed upon between them; and every person, copartnership, or corporation, who is or shall be a proprietor of one or more shares shall, by virtue thereof, be a member of said corporation, and shall be entitled, at all meetings of the stockholders for the election of officers, or for any other purpose, to one vote, in person or by proxy, for every share of the stock so held.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of the said company shall be conducted by a president and six directors, to be elected by the stockholders present, or a majority in amount thereof, on the first Monday of November, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and on the first Monday of November in each succeeding year, or within thirty days thereafter, and shall continue in office for one year, and until successors are chosen; and that the election in November next shall be held by the persons named in the first section of this act, or a majority of them, and every subsequent election shall be held by the president and directors of said company.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said president and directors shall have power to fill all vacancies which shall occur in their own body during their continuance in office, and to prescribe the evidence of ownership and mode of transfer of shares of stock in said company; and they shall keep full records of their proceedings, which shall be open to the inspection of the stockholders at all times, and shall report at least annually, a statement of their affairs to the stockholders, and shall declare dividends of the profits, or any part thereof, at their discretion, and generally may exercise all the power and privileges of the corporation necessary or proper to promote the objects thereof.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the shares of the capital stock of said company shall be deemed personal estate, and that special meetings of the stockholders may be called by the president and directors, or by any number, not less than one third in amount of shares of the stockholders, at which meeting members present, and representing a majority of the whole capital stock, shall be a quorum for the transaction of business; and the stockholders at such meetings, or at any general annual meeting, where such majority of stock is represented, shall have full power to alter or repeal any by-law or regulation made by the president and directors, and may make new rules and by-laws, which shall be binding on the said president and directors: Provided, That the same be not contrary to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to exempt the property of said corporation from such taxation as similar property, belonging to any other individual or corporation, is subject to.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to authorize the said company to exercise banking privileges, or to issue any note in the form of a bank note, or certificate payable to bearer.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That each of the stockholders in the National Hotel Company of Washington City shall be held liable in his or her individual capacity for all the debts and liabilities of the said company, however contracted or incurred, to be recovered by suit as other debts or liabilities, before the court or tribunal having jurisdiction of the case.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That it may be lawful for Congress hereafter to alter, amend, change, or repeal the foregoing act.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the pay of the non-commissioned officers, musicians, and privates of the Army of the United States, shall be increased at the rate of four dollars per month, and to continue for the term of three years from and after the first day of January next, and until otherwise fixed by law.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That every soldier, who, having been honorably discharged from the service of the United States, shall, within one month thereafter, reenlist, shall be entitled to two dollars per month in addition to the ordinary pay of his grade, for the first period of five years after the expiration of his previous enlistment, and a further sum of one dollar per month for each successive period of five years, so long as he shall remain continuously in the Army; and that soldiers now in the Army, who have served one or more enlistments, and been honorably discharged, shall be entitled to the benefits herein provided for a second enlistment.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That soldiers who served in the war with Mexico, and received a certificate of merit for distinguished services, as well those now in the Army as those that may hereafter enlist, shall receive the two dollars per month to which that certificate would have entitled them had they remained continuously in the Army.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That non-commissioned officers, who, under the authority of the seventeenth section of the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and forty-seven, were recommended for promotion by brevet to the lowest grade of commissioned officer, but did not receive the benefit of that provision, shall be entitled, under the condition recited in the foregoing section, to the additional pay authorized to be given to such privates as received certificates of merit.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to confer the brevet of second lieutenant upon such meritorious non-commissioned officers as may, under regulations to be established, be brought before an Army Board, composed of four officers of rank, specially convened for the purpose, and be found qualified for the duties of commissioned officers; and to attach them to regiments as supernumerary officers, according to the provisions of the fourth section of the act approved April twenty-ninth, eighteen hundred and twelve, entitled "An act making further provision for the corps of engineers."

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the allowance to soldiers employed at work on fortifications, in surveys, in cutting roads, and other constant labor, of not less than ten days, authorized by the act approved March second, eighteen hundred and nineteen, entitled "An act to regulate the pay of the Army when employed on fatigue duty," be increased to twenty-five cents per day for men employed as laborers and teamsters, and forty cents per day when employed as mechanics, at all stations east of the Rocky Mountains, and to thirty-five cents and fifty cents per day, respectively, when the men are employed at the stations west of those mountains.

APPROVED, August 4, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXVIII.—An Act to repeal the first proviso of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain Officers and Soldiers who have been engaged in the Military Service of the United States," approved September twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and fifty.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Repre-

representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That the first proviso of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," approved September twenty-eighth, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, August 4, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXIX.—An Act to Incorporate the Pioneer Manufacturing Company of Georgetown, D. C.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Thomas Wilson, Evan Lyons, Esau Pickrell, and Thomas Brown, their associates, successors, and assigns, be, and they are hereby made and constituted a body-corporate and politic, by the name of "The Pioneer Manufacturing Company of Georgetown, D. C.," to be established at Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, and as such shall have succession, and may sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, in any court of law or equity, and may have and use a common seal, and the same may change and alter at pleasure, and shall have and may exercise all the powers, rights and privileges which are incident to a corporation except as restricted by this act, and which are necessary and proper for manufacturing cotton, woollen, or silk goods or fabrics of various descriptions, and vending the same, and for making and constructing all machinery which may be necessary for the purposes aforesaid; and may purchase, have, hold, use, and enjoy such a quantity of land as may be sufficient for prosecuting the business aforesaid, to erect thereon such buildings and improvements as may be necessary for the purposes aforesaid, and to sell and dispose of the same at pleasure.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock or property already contributed by the parties hereby incorporated, and their associates, shall be divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, to be distributed amongst the said parties and their associates, in proportion to their respective interests; and the capital stock of the corporation may be increased from time to time, in such manner as the stockholders in general meeting may direct, so that the entire capital stock at any one time shall not exceed two hundred thousand dollars; and the said shares shall be deemed and taken as personal estate, and shall be transferable only on the books of the corporation, and in such manner as may be prescribed by the by-laws thereof; and the owner of one or more such shares shall, in virtue thereof, be entitled at all elections, and in all meetings of the stockholders, to one vote for each and every share which may be owned by him, which said vote may be given in person or by proxy, in such manner as the by-laws may direct.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the management of the business and concerns of said corporation, subject, nevertheless, to such restraint and qualifications as may be prescribed by the by-laws or other votes of the stockholders adopted in general meeting, shall be vested in a board to consist of a president and six directors, who shall be elected by ballot, and shall be stockholders at the time of their election; and they, or a majority of them, shall be a quorum for the transaction of business; that the first board shall be elected within six months after the passage of this act; and the subsequent elections shall be made annually thereafter, on the first Monday in May, at a general meeting of the stockholders, to be convened for the purpose at such time and place; and after such notice as may be fixed by the by-laws of the corporation, or by the president and directors in conformity therewith; but if an election shall not be made on the day appointed for the purpose, it may be made at any time thereafter; and the president and directors, for the time being, shall hold and exercise their offices until a new election shall be made; and in case of a vacancy in the office of president or director, the remaining members of the board shall choose a president or director, as the case may be, to serve until the next annual election.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That a general meeting of the stockholders shall be called by the president and directors as often as they may deem expedient, or as the stockholders by their by-laws or other votes may direct, and may likewise be called by any number of stockholders owning not less than one fourth part of the capital stock; and at least five days' notice of the time and place of such meeting shall be given to each stockholder personally, or by advertisement, to be inserted in a newspaper published daily in the City of Washington; and in any meeting of stockholders for the transaction of any business, the owners of the major part of the capital stock present by person or by proxy, shall form a quorum; and every such meeting shall have full power and authority to provide by ordinary by-laws, or by other vote, for transacting the business of the corporation, which by-laws or vote, whilst in force, shall be binding on the president and directors.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to confer banking privileges on the said corporation, or the power of issuing bank notes, or notes in the nature of bank notes or paper intended to circulate as bank notes or currency: Provided, That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as to prevent the Congress of the United States from altering or repealing the same whenever the public good requires it: And provided further, That the stockholders, individually and collectively, shall be responsible for all the acts done, and obligations incurred by the corporation created by this act.

APPROVED, August 4, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXX.—An Act making Appropriations for the Service of the Post Office Department during the fiscal year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, appropriated for the service of the Post Office Department for the year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, out of any moneys in the Treasury arising from the revenues of the said Department, in conformity to the act of the second of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six:

For transportation of the mails, five million two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars.

For compensation to postmasters, two millions of dollars.

For ship, steamboat, and way letters, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For wrapping paper, fifty-five thousand dollars.

For office furniture in the post offices, eight thousand dollars.

For advertising, eighty-five thousand dollars.

For mail bags, fifty-five thousand dollars.

For blanks, sixty-five thousand dollars.

For mail locks, keys, and stamps, twenty-five thousand dollars.

For mail depredations and special agents, sixty thousand dollars.

For clerks in the offices of postmasters, five hundred and sixty thousand dollars.

For postage stamps and stamped envelopes, fifty-five thousand dollars.

For miscellaneous items, one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

For compilation of post routes, as contained in the bill passed at the present session of Congress establishing routes, one thousand dollars.

To enable the Postmaster General to purchase the patent of the clam-shell padlock, should he be of opinion the public service requires it, the sum of five thousand dollars.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be, and is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum not exceeding two million three hundred and forty-four thousand four hundred and sixty-four dollars, to supply any deficiency that may arise in the revenues of the Post Office Department to meet the foregoing appropriations for the year ending the thirtieth of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That hereafter the Postmaster General be authorized and directed to continue the mail service between Charleston, Key West, and Havana during August and September, by a competent steamer, as it is now being performed during ten months of the year, and that to enable him to do so, ten thousand dollars are hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That there be allowed and paid to the postmaster of Washington city, District of Columbia, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a commission of one mill per pound upon the aggregate weight of public documents printed by order of Congress and deposited in the office of said postmaster to be mailed; this allowance to commence with the passage of this act, and to continue for one year only, and to be computed from the ascertained weight for the month of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-four. And that the said postmaster be required to pay out of the said commissions to the clerks and other employees of his office a sum not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars each, per annum, as compensation for the extra labor performed by them in the assortment and mailing of said documents; and that he be required to account for, and settle with, the Post Office Department for the disbursement of these commissions, and any surplus that may remain, in the same manner as is now required in the settlement of his other accounts.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the Postmaster General be authorized and directed to establish a mail on the Mississippi river from Cairo to New Orleans, and from Keokuk, Iowa, to Galena, in Illinois, and that he contract for the same in one lile, or in such divisions or sections, or both, as may be most compatible with the public service; and to facilitate the execution of this section the Postmaster General may make immediate temporary arrangements for carrying said mail by the trip; and if he fails to obtain acceptable bids after advertising for thirty days, he may make private contracts for carrying said mail, and the said mail shall be carried daily from Cairo to New Orleans; but the Postmaster General is authorized, at his discretion, to restrict the delivery of the mail at all other points than Cairo, Memphis, Napoleon, Vicksburg, Natchez, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans, to three mails a week each way: Provided, Nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to impair the rights of parties heretofore contracting for said service.

APPROVED, August 5, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXXI.—An Act to graduate and reduce the price of the Public Lands to actual Settlers and Cultivators.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all of the public lands of the United States which shall have been in market for ten years or upwards, prior to the time of application to enter the same under the provisions of this act, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at the price of one dollar per acre; and all of the lands of the United States that shall have been in market for fifteen years or upwards, as aforesaid, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at seventy-five cents per acre; and all of the lands of the United States that shall have been in market for twenty years or upwards, as aforesaid, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at fifty cents per acre; and all of the lands of the United States that shall have been in market for twenty-five years and upwards, as aforesaid, and still remaining unsold, shall be subject to sale at twenty-five cents per acre; and all lands of the United States that shall have been in market for thirty years or more, shall be subject to sale at twelve-and-a-half cents per acre: Provided, This section shall not be so construed as to extend to lands reserved to the United States, in acts granting land to States for railroad or other internal improvements, or to mineral lands held at over one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That upon every reduction in price under the provisions of this act, the occupant and settler upon the lands shall have the right of preemption at such graduated price, upon the same terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations, upon which the public lands of the United States are now subject to the right of preemption, until within thirty days preceding the next graduation or reduction that shall take place; and if not so purchased, shall again be subject to right of preemption for eleven months as before, and so on from time to time, as reductions take place: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to interfere with any right which has or may accrue by virtue of any act granting preemption to actual settlers upon public lands.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That any person applying to enter any of the aforesaid lands shall be required to make affidavit before the register or receiver of the proper land office, that he or she enters the same for his or her own use, and for the purpose of actual settlement and cultivation, or for the use of an adjoining farm or plantation, owned or occupied by him or herself, and together with said entry, he or she has not acquired from the United States, under the provisions of this act, more than three hundred and twenty acres, according to the established surveys; and if any person or persons taking such oath or affidavit shall swear falsely in the premises, he or she shall be subject to all the pains and penalties of perjury.

APPROVED, August 4, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXXII.—An Act declaring the Southern Boundary of New Mexico.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That, until otherwise provided by law, the territory acquired under the late treaty with Mexico, commonly known as the Gadsden treaty, be, and the same is hereby, incorporated with the territory of "New Mexico," subject to all the laws of said last named Territory.

APPROVED, August 4, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXXIII.—An Act to extend the Right of Preemption over Unsurveyed Lands in Minnesota, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the preemption act of fourth September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, and the acts amendatory thereof, shall be extended to the lands in Minnesota Territory, whether surveyed or not; but in all cases where preemption is claimed on unsurveyed lands, the settler shall file his declaratory statement within three months after the survey has been made and returned, and make proof and payment before the day appointed by the President's proclamation for the commencement of the sale of the lands, including the tract claimed: Provided, however, That if, when the said lands are surveyed, it is found that two or more persons have settled upon the same quarter section, each shall be permitted to enter his improvement, as near as may be, by legal subdivisions.

APPROVED, August 4, 1854.

PUBLIC, LXXXIV.—An Act for the Relief of Thomas Bronaugh, and for the repeal of the "Act to aid the Territory of Minnesota in the Construction of a Railroad therein," approved the twenty-ninth June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to increase the pension of Thomas Bronaugh, who is now on the rolls at four dollars, to the rate of eight dollars per month, to commence January first, eighteen hundred and fifty-four.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the bill entitled "An act to aid the Territory of Minnesota in the construction of a railroad therein," which passed the House of Representatives on the twentieth day of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and which was approved by the President of the United States on the twenty-ninth day of June, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

[2.] And be it further enacted, That the amount which it may be found necessary to pay under the act of twenty-seventh March, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, to the widows and orphans of the United States troops who perished by the recent disaster to the steamship San Francisco, be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

SEC. [3.] And be it further enacted, That the act approved September twenty-eight, one thousand eight hundred and fifty, entitled "An act granting bounty land to certain officers and soldiers who have been engaged in the military service of the United States," the act approved March twenty-second, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, entitled "An act to make land warrants assignable, and for other purposes," and the act approved February third, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, entitled "An act to continue half pay to certain widows and orphans" shall not be so construed as to deprive any widow from the benefits therein granted for the services of her husband, though she may have married again: Provided, however, That the applicant is a widow at the time of making the claim: Provided, Such party shall not receive pension during coverture.

SEC. [4.] And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to receive and cause to be placed on the files of his Department, such additional muster-rolls of the battalion of volunteers commanded by Lieutenant Colonel J. C. Fremont in California, duly authenticated by the proper officers, as have not heretofore been received and filed, and to cause such corrections of the muster-rolls to be made in regard to the periods of enlistment and terms of service, and the omission of names of the members of said battalion as, upon satisfactory proof, he may deem right and proper, and as far as practicable, to correspond with the pay-rolls of Major P. B. Reading, paymaster of said battalion with respect to the period of service, so that all who served in the military service of the United States in California during the late war with Mexico, whether under the command of naval or military officers, may be entitled to all the benefits of all the acts of Congress, providing for the enrollment of volunteers in the Mexican war: Provided, That no payment shall be made in consequence of this section, beyond the sum heretofore appropriated.

SEC. [5.] And be it further enacted, That the joint resolution entitled "A resolution explanatory of the act appropriating money for the removal of the raft of Red river," approved January seventh, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, be, and hereby is, repealed; and that the Secretary of the Department of War be authorized to expend the appropriation in reference to the Red river raft, in such way, and for such purposes as he may approve, having in view the improvement of the navigation of Red river, in and around the said raft.

SEC. [6.] And be it further enacted, That in the event that the Secretary of War shall deem it inconsistent with the interests of the military service to furnish a sufficient portion of the military buildings at Fort Leavenworth for the use of the territorial government of Kansas, the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars shall be, and in that contingency hereby is, appropriated for the erection of public buildings for the use of the Legislature of the Territory of Kansas, to be expended under the directions of the Governor of said Territory.

SEC. 7. [7.] And be it further enacted, That the sums appropriated by the act of March third, eighteen hundred and forty-nine, for the removal and subsistence of the Menomonees, and for the establishment of a manual-labor school, &c., for them, and now remaining in the Treasury, together with the sums for pay of a miller heretofore appropriated, be paid to or expended for the benefit of said Menomonee Indians, according to the stipulations of said supplementary and amendatory articles.

SEC. 2. [8.] And be it further enacted, That of the appropriation of fifty thousand dollars "for continuing the topographical and hydrographical survey of the Delta of the Mississippi, with such investigations as may lead to determine the most practicable plan for securing it from inundation," approved August thirty-first, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, the sum of five thousand dollars may be applied, under the special direction of the Secretary of War, to the payment of any expenses connected with said survey and investigations, incurred prior to the first of July, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two.

SEC. 3. [9.] And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to examine into and ascertain the amount of expenses incurred, and now actually paid, by the State of California in the suppression of Indian hostilities within the said State prior to the first of January, Anno Domini eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and that the amount of such expenses, when so ascertained, be paid into the treasury of said State: Provided, That the sum so paid shall not exceed in amount the sum of nine hundred and twenty-four thousand two hundred and fifty-nine dollars and sixty-five cents; which amount is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

APPROVED, August 5, 1854.

PUBLIC RESOLUTIONS.

No. 1.—Joint Resolution of Thanks to General John E. Wool.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the thanks of Congress are due, and are hereby tendered, to Brevet Major General John E. Wool, for his distinguished services in the late war with Mexico; and especially for the skill, enterprise, and courage which distinguished his conduct at the battle of Buena Vista.

Resolved, That the President be requested to cause a sword, with suitable devices, to be presented to General Wool, as a testimony of the high sense entertained by Congress of his gallant and judicious conduct on that memorable occasion.

Resolved, That the President be requested to cause a copy of the foregoing resolutions to be transmitted to General Wool.

APPROVED, January 24, 1854.

No. 2.—A Resolution authorizing an Increase in the Force in the Office of the Superintendent of Public Printing.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Superintendent of the Public Printing be, and he is hereby, authorized to increase the force in his office by the appointment of two additional clerks, at the same salary per annum now allowed the clerks employed therein.

APPROVED, February 10, 1854.

No. 3.—A Resolution for supplying new Members of the Senate and House of Representatives with such Books of a public character as have been heretofore supplied.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That each of the new members of the two Houses of Congress be supplied with the same number and description of such books of a public character as were supplied to each member of the Senate or House of Representatives during the last Congress: Provided, They be furnished by the publishers at prices not exceeding those at which they have been heretofore supplied for the use of the members of either House.

APPROVED, February 23, 1854.

No. 4.—Joint Resolution authorizing a Supplemental Contract for certain Marble for the Capitol Extension.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause a supplemental contract to be made with the contractors for marble for the Capitol extension, to procure the columns and ashlar in larger blocks than required by the specifications of their present contract.

APPROVED, March 1, 1854.

No. 5.—A Resolution accepting certain Volumes and Medals presented by her Britannic Majesty's Government to the United States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Government of the United States accept the presentation volumes and medals illustrative of the Exhibition in London, in eighteen hundred and fifty-one, presented by her Britannic Majesty's Government, in behalf of her Majesty's commissioners for the said exhibition, and that they be placed in the Library of Congress.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be communicated to the British Government in such manner as the President of the United States may see proper.

APPROVED, March 27, 1854.

No. 6.—Joint Resolution authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury and Light-House Board to determine upon the site, plan, and mode of constructing the Light-House on Cohasset Rocks, and for other purposes.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of the Treasury and Light-House Board be, and hereby are, authorized to determine upon the site, plan, and mode of constructing the light-house upon the Cohasset rocks, on the southerly side of the entrance into Boston harbor. And so much of the act approved August thirty-one, eighteen hundred and fifty-two, and the act approved March third, eighteen hundred and fifty-three, relative to the rebuilding of the light-house on Minot's Ledge, as are inconsistent with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed.

APPROVED, March 27, 1854.

No. 7.—Joint Resolution relative to Bids for Provisions, Clothing, and Small-Stores for the use of the Navy.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all bids for supplies of provisions, clothing, and small-stores for the use of the Navy may be rejected, at the option of the Department, if made by one who is not known as a manufacturer of, or regular dealer in, the article proposed to be furnished; which fact or the reverse must be distinctly stated in the bids offered; that the bids of all persons who may have failed to comply with the conditions of any contracts they may have previously entered into with the United States, shall, at the option of the Department, be rejected; that if more than one bid be offered for the supply of an article on account of any one party either in his own name, or in the name of his partner, clerk, or any other person, the whole of such bids shall be rejected at the option of the Department—and that copartners of any firm shall not be received as sureties for each other—and that whenever it may be deemed necessary for the interest of the Government and the health of the crews of the United States vessels, to procure particular brands of flour, which are known to keep best on distant stations, the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Navy, be, and hereby is, authorized to procure the same on the best terms, in market overt.

APPROVED, March 27, 1854.

No. 58.—An Act to Incorporate the Georgetown Gas-Light Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That David English, Robert P. Dodge, Richard Cruikshank, William M. Fitzhugh, Richard Pettit, William F. Seymour, Adolphus H. Pickrell, and William Bucknell, and their present and future associates, are hereby declared to be a body-politic and corporate, by the name and style of "The Georgetown Gas-Light Company," and by the same name shall have perpetual succession, and shall be able to sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, in all courts of law and equity in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; to make and have a common seal, and the same to break, alter, and renew, at pleasure; to ordain and establish by-laws, ordinances, and regulations, and generally to do every act and thing necessary to carry into effect this act, or to promote the objects and design of this corporation.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock of this corporation shall not exceed one hundred and fifty thousand dollars; that a share in the same shall be twenty-five dollars, and books of subscription to the said capital stock, or to such portions thereof as from time to time may, by the directors, for the time being, be deemed proper and necessary, shall be opened by the appointment, or under the direction, of the directors hereinafter named, subject to such rules, limitations, and conditions as by them shall be prescribed; and the stock of the said company shall be deemed personal property.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the stock, property, and affairs of the said company shall be managed and conducted by and under the direction of a president and seven directors, being stockholders; that the said directors shall be elected on the first Monday of June, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and on the same day in each succeeding year thereafter, and shall hold their offices for one year from the day of their election, and until other directors shall be elected in their places; that such elections shall be held in Georgetown aforesaid, at such time and place as a majority of the directors for the time being shall appoint, and notice of such time and place of election shall be given by advertisement in one or more newspapers printed and published in the said town, at least fourteen days before the holding of such election, and every such election shall be by ballot, and by such of the stockholders as shall attend for that purpose, either in person or by proxy; and each stockholder shall be entitled to one vote for each share of the stock which he or she may have held, and may continue to hold, in his or her own name, for at least fourteen days before the time of voting; and the persons having the greatest number of votes shall be the directors, and if it shall happen that two or more persons shall have an equal number of votes, the directors in office at the time of such election shall, by a plurality of votes, given by ballot, determine which of the persons so having an equal number of votes shall be director or directors, so as to complete the whole number to be chosen; and the directors so chosen shall, as soon as may be thereafter, proceed to elect by ballot, one of their own number, or one of the shareholders, to be their president; and whenever any vacancy shall happen in the said board, of the president and directors, the same shall be filled up by the remaining directors by plurality of votes, until the next annual election: Provided always, That the president of the said company, and at least six of the directors, shall be inhabitants of the said town.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That David English, Robert P. Dodge, Richard Cruikshank, William M. Fitzhugh, Richard Pettit, William B. Seymour, Adolphus H. Pickrell, and William Facknell shall be the first directors of the said company; the first named of whom shall be their president, and shall hold their offices until the first Monday in June, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and until others are chosen in their places.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That in case it shall happen at any time that an election for directors shall not take place on the day appointed by this act for that purpose, the said corporation shall not for that cause, or for any non-user, be deemed to be dissolved, but it shall and may be lawful to hold an election for directors on any other day, in such manner as shall be provided for by the by-laws of the said corporation.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the directors, or a majority of them, to require payment of the subscriptions to the capital stock of the said corporation, at such times and in such proportions as they, or a majority of them, shall deem fit, under the penalty of forfeiting any or all previous payment or payments thereon: Provided, Notice of the installment required to be paid shall have been published at least fourteen days in one or more of the newspapers printed and published in the said town, before the day appointed for the payment thereof.

Sec. 7. And be it further enacted, That the president and directors shall have full power and authority to manufacture, make, and sell gas, to be made of coal, oil, tar, peat, pitch, turpentine, or other material, and to be used for the purpose of lighting the city of Georgetown, or the streets thereof, and any buildings, manufactories, or houses therein contained and situate; and to lay pipes for the purpose of conducting gas in any of the streets, lanes, or alleys of the said city: Provided, however, That the said company shall so conduct the manufacture of gas as not to injure private property, or create a nuisance; and that the said pipes shall be laid, subject to such conditions, and in compliance with such regulations, as the corporation of Georgetown, aforesaid, may from time to time prescribe: And provided further, That the right to erect and put up any buildings, works, or apparatus, for the manufacture of gas, shall be subject to such terms, conditions, restrictions, and regulations as the said corporation of Georgetown may, from time to time, prescribe or direct.

Sec. 8. And be it further enacted, That if any person or persons shall willfully do, or cause to be done, any act or acts whatsoever, whereby the works of the said company, or any pipe, conduit, plug, cock, reservoir, or any engine, machine, or structure, or any matter or thing appertaining to the same shall be stopped, obstructed, impaired, weakened, injured, or destroyed, the person or persons so offending shall forfeit and pay to the said corporation double the amount of the damage sustained by means of such offense or injury, to be recovered in the name of said corporation, with cost of suit in any action of debt, or on the case, to be brought in any court having cognizance thereof.

Sec. 9. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent any person or persons, nor any incorporated company, hereafter to be created by Congress, for that purpose, from engaging in and pursuing the business specified in the seventh section of this act; and that it shall be lawful for Congress, at any time hereafter, to alter, amend, or repeal this act.

Sec. 10. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to authorize the said Georgetown Gas-Light Company to make, issue, or put in circulation any bill, draft, check, order, promissory note, change ticket, or anything else promising or agreeing to pay money, intended to circulate as money, or the tendency of which shall be to circulate as money or currency; and the violation of any one of the provisions of this section shall be a forfeiture of the charter hereby given, and shall subject each of the directors voting for the same to a fine of fifty dollars.

Sec. 11. And be it further enacted, That each of the stockholders in the Georgetown Gas-Light Company shall be held liable in his or her individual capacity for all the debts and liabilities of the said company, however contracted or incurred, to be recovered by suit, as other debts or liabilities, before the court or tribunal having jurisdiction of the case.

Sec. 12. And be it further enacted, That all right granted to the Washington Gas-Light Company by an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to incorporate the Washington Gas-Light Company, approved July eight, eighteen hundred and forty-eight,' approved August second, eighteen hundred and fifty-two," to lay gas mains or pipes in the City of Georgetown, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

APPROVED, July 20, 1854.

No. 59.—An Act for the Relief of Thomas K. Glenn.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General be, and hereby is, authorized to cause the account of Thomas K. Glenn, for carrying the mail from Raleigh to Roxboro', in North Carolina, from the first day of July, eighteen hundred and fifty-one, during the time he has been engaged, and to the termination of his contract, to be settled and paid in such manner as to correct an alleged mistake made in his proposals: Provided, The Postmaster General be satisfied of the existence of such mistake, and that the difference to be paid to the said Thomas K. Glenn, with what he has already received, shall not exceed the amount of the next lowest bid, or the rate of two hundred and seventy-five dollars per annum for the term of the contract, or the actual performance of the service.

No. 61.—An Act to confirm the Claim of Dusuan de la Croix to a Lot of Land therein described.

Whereas, in the supplemental report of the register and receiver at Jackson Court-House, dated twenty-ninth of December, eighteen hundred and twenty, communicated to the Senate twenty-third of February, eighteen hundred and twenty-one, it is stated that claim number four, in said report, was "inadvertently omitted in the general report," made on the eleventh of July, eighteen hundred and twenty, and presented to the Senate the seventeenth of November, same year; and whereas, it is considered by the Commissioner of the General Land Office that, by reason of said omission, the said claim is not entitled to the confirmation contained in the act of eighth of May, eighteen hundred and twenty-two, confirming the general report of eighteen hundred and twenty:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That claim number four, in the supplemental report hereinbefore referred to, be, and the same is hereby, confirmed to Dusuan de la Croix, his legal representatives and assigns, according to the Spanish survey referred to in said claim, as fully, in like manner, and to same effect, as if said claim had been confirmed to said Dusuan de la Croix, his legal representatives and assigns, by the act of eighteen hundred and twenty-two, aforesaid: Provided, That this grant and confirmation shall amount only to a relinquishment on the part of the United States of all its right and title to the lot of land hereby granted and confirmed.

APPROVED, July 24, 1854.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Charles B. Calvert, George Parker, William B. Todd, James C. McGuire, William A. Bradley, Charles S. Wallach, Abner Miller, William Banks, Joseph B. Close, William Phelps, William S. Humphreys, Randolph S. Evans, and their successors, be, and they are hereby, created a body politic and corporate, by the name and title of the proprietors of the "Glenwood Cemetery in the District of Columbia," and by that name shall have perpetual succession; and shall be able and liable to sue and be sued in any court of law or equity, may have and use a common seal, and shall have power to purchase and hold not exceeding one hundred acres of land in the District of Columbia, north of the limits of the City of Washington, to sell and dispose of such parts of said land as may not be wanted for the purpose of a cemetery: Provided, That at least thirty contiguous acres shall be forever appropriated and set apart as a cemetery, with authority to said corporation to receive gifts and bequests for the purpose of ornamenting and improving said cemetery; and to hold such personal property as may be requisite to carry out the object of this act.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of the said corporation shall be conducted by a president and three managers, who shall be elected annually, by a majority of the votes of the proprietors; the said president and managers to fill all vacancies in their own body, and shall have power to lay out and ornament the grounds, remove and alter old buildings and erect new ones, to lay out and sell or dispose of burial lots, to appoint all necessary officers and agents, and fix their several duties and compensation, and to make such by-laws, rules, and regulations as they may deem proper for conducting the affairs of the corporation, for the government of lot-holders, and visitors to the cemetery, and for the transfer of stock and the evidence thereof. In all elections held under this act, each proprietor shall be entitled to one vote for each share held by him or her.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock of said company shall be represented by two thousand shares, of fifty dollars each, divided among the proprietors according to their respective interests, and transferable in such manner as the by-laws may direct.

Sec. 4. And be it further enacted, That no streets, lanes, alleys, roads, or canals of any sort, shall be opened through the property of said corporation, exclusively used and appropriated to the purposes of a cemetery: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall authorize said corporation to obstruct any public road or street, or lane, or alley, now actually opened and used as such.

Sec. 5. And be it further enacted, That any person who shall willfully destroy, mutilate, deface, injure, or remove any tomb, monument, grave-stone, or other structure placed in said cemetery, or any fence, railing, or work for protection or ornament of said cemetery, or any tomb, monument, grave-stone, or other structure thereon, or shall willfully destroy, cut, break, or remove any tree, shrub, or plant, within the limits of said cemetery, shall be considered guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof before any justice of the peace of the county of Washington, shall be punished by fine, at the discretion of the justice, according to the aggravation of the offense, of not less than five, nor more than fifty dollars.

Sec. 6. And be it further enacted, That until an election shall be held under the provisions of this act, the four last named persons in section first shall be the managers of said corporation.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That burial lots in said cemetery shall not be subject to the debts of the lot-holders thereof, and the land of the company dedicated to the purposes of a cemetery shall not be subject to taxation of any kind.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the said corporation shall provide for the return, from time to time, to the corporation of Washington reports of all interments made in said cemetery of persons who may have died within the limits of the said corporation of Washington, in such manner and according to such forms as may be prescribed from time to time by the corporation of Washington.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That a certificate, under seal of the corporation, of the ownership of any lot aforesaid, shall in all respects have the same effect as any conveyance from said corporation of said lots would have, if executed, acknowledged, and recorded as conveyances of real estate are required to be.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to authorize the said corporation to issue any note, token, device, scrip, or other evidence of debt, to be used as currency.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect from the passage thereof.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That it may be lawful for Congress hereafter to alter, amend, modify, or repeal the foregoing act.

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That each of the stockholders in the said company shall be held liable in his or her individual capacity for all the debts and liabilities of the said company, however contracted or incurred, to be recovered by suit as other debts or liabilities before the court or tribunal having jurisdiction of the case.

Sumner fully describes his new method of ascertaining a ship's position at sea, when a meridian observation of the sun cannot be obtained, there be paid, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the said Thomas H. Sumner, or his lawful agent or attorney, the sum of ten thousand dollars.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That after the said transfer shall be made, and the said sum paid, the said copyright shall be deemed extinct, and said book may thereafter be published as if no such right had existed.

APPROVED, August 2, 1854.

No. 138.—An Act to Relinquish the Reversionary Interest of the United States to a certain Reservation therein mentioned, and to confirm the title of Charles G. Gunter thereto.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the right, title, and interest which might accrue or revert to the United States to a certain fraction or [of] section number nineteen of township number sixteen and range number sixteen, including an island in the Alabama river, commonly called Manac's Island, a little below the mouth of Catoma Creek, and being the reservation to which Samuel Manac, a Creek Indian, became entitled under the treaty of Fort Jackson, be, and the same are hereby, relinquished to Charles G. Gunter, his heirs and assigns, and a patent shall be issued to the said Charles G. Gunter, his heirs or assigns, for the same, upon the payment to the receiver of the land office at Cahaba, in the State of Alabama, of the minimum price per acre of the public lands now subject to entry in said State.

APPROVED, August 2, 1854.

No. 139.—An Act authorizing the Extension of the Alexandria and Washington Railroad into the District of Columbia, and conferring certain Privileges on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company, incorporated by the Legislature of Virginia, on the 27th of February, eighteen hundred and fifty-four, to construct a railroad from Alexandria, in the State of Virginia, to the City of Washington, in the District of Columbia, be, and are hereby, authorized to extend their road from any point on the Virginia side of the Potomac river to which said road may be constructed, at or above the aqueduct of the Alexandria canal, into the District of Columbia, connecting with the Baltimore and Washington railroad depot by the most convenient and practicable route or routes, passing through and along such streets or avenues, except the Pennsylvania avenue of Washington and Georgetown, as the corporate authorities thereof may respectively approve, subject to certain conditions hereinafter expressed.

Sec. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company are hereby authorized to construct a bridge over the Potomac river, on, or above, or west of the aqueduct of the Alexandria Canal Company: Provided, Said bridge shall only be built on or over the piers of the aqueduct, with the consent of the Alexandria Canal Company: And provided further, In constructing said bridge, and crossing the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, said bridge and railroad shall be so constructed as not to injure or obstruct the use or navigation of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal: And provided further, That this act shall not prevent Congress from giving like privileges to any other railroad company or any other person.

Sec. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company are hereby authorized to establish depots in the cities of Washington and Georgetown, at such points as the corporate authorities thereof may respectively approve, and to lay a railroad track or tracks to such point or points within said cities, and through and along such streets and avenues, except the Pennsylvania avenue, of said cities, as may be respectively approved of by the corporate authorities of said cities, and to make all necessary turnouts; the said railroad company being subject to such terms, conditions, restrictions, and taxation, and to such rules and regulations, relative to the construction, repairs, and working of their road, within the cities of Washington and Georgetown, as the corporate authorities of said cities may from time to time respectively prescribe, so far as it may lay within their respective limits: Provided, No higher rate of taxation shall be imposed upon said railroad company than is prescribed by the respective charters of said cities; and said railroad company shall keep an office within the City of Washington or Georgetown, and shall have power to sue and be sued, to make contracts, and to purchase and hold lands so far as may be necessary for carrying on the operations of the company; and the service of process on the president or any director of said company, or on the chief clerk in attendance at the office of the company, shall entitle any party complaining to proceed against said company as authorized under the laws of the District of Columbia to proceed against chartered companies within its limits.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company be, and it is hereby, authorized to construct and extend the Washington branch of said road, according to such route as may be most convenient, through the said District to some point on the Potomac river, opposite to or near the City of Alexandria, in Virginia, for the purpose of forming a connection with the said river and the lines of railroads running south, subject to the provisions of its present charter; and the said company are hereby authorized to locate, construct, and operate the said extension, hereby authorized, through such parts of the City of Washington, or public reservations, as the corporate authorities thereof, or the President of the United States, respectively, may consent to; and also to build a bridge or bridges over the eastern branch of the Potomac river, at some point above the navy-yard: Provided, however, That the same shall not obstruct the navigation thereof. And said company shall have power to locate and establish depots, and erect the necessary buildings thereon, and also to erect such wharves or piers into said river as may be necessary, provided the same shall not obstruct the navigation thereof: Provided, further, That the said Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company be subject to the same conditions and restrictions in extending their road through any parts of the City of Washington, as are prescribed for the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company: Provided, however, That this section shall remain suspended for two years, from the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-five; and if, at the end of that time, the Alexandria and Washington Railroad Company shall not have completed a railroad to Alexandria, and have the same in good running order, in pursuance of the requirements of the preceding sections of this bill, then the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company shall have the privilege of extending their road by either of the routes authorized by this act: And provided further, That if said Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company shall not have executed so much of the provisions of this act as relates to their company by the first day of January, eighteen hundred and fifty-nine, then this act shall be void.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.

No. 140.—An Act to Incorporate the National Hotel Company of Washington City.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That George H. Calvert, Charles B. Calvert, Roger C. Weightman, Philip Otterback, John Withers, Richard H. Stuart, and Joseph Bryan, and those who may hereafter become members of the company hereinafter mentioned, and their successors, be, and they are hereby, created and declared to be a body politic and corporate, by the name and style of the National Hotel Company of Washington City; and, by the name aforesaid, to have perpetual succession, with power to sue and be sued, and to make and use a common seal, and to make and repeal rules and by-laws for the good government of said company; and also to hold, use, and enjoy, in fee-simple, or for any lesser estate, the lots and parcels of ground and premises, situated in the City of Washington, being lots eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, and parts of lots seven and fourteen, in square four hundred and ninety-one, on the plat of said city, upon which are now erected the house or buildings and appurtenances known and denominated as the National Hotel; and also any additional lots, or parts of lots, adjoining the said property, which may be hereafter acquired by said company, and also the improvements, fixtures, conveniences, and advantages erected on said lots or parcels of ground appurtenant thereto.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the capital stock of said company shall be five hundred thousand dollars, to be divided into five thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, and shall be distributed among the parties interested in the said lots of ground and premises, in such manner as shall be agreed upon between them; and every person, copartnership, or corporation, who is or shall be a proprietor of one or more shares, shall, by virtue thereof, be a member of said corporation, and shall be entitled, at all meetings of the stockholders for the election of officers, or for any other purpose, to one vote, in person or by proxy, for every share of the stock so held.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the affairs of the said company shall be conducted by a president and six directors, to be elected by the stockholders present, or a majority in amount thereof, on the first Monday of November, in the year eighteen hundred and fifty-four, and on the first Monday of November in each succeeding year, or within thirty days thereafter, and shall continue in office for one year, and until successors are chosen; and that the election in November next shall be held by the persons named in the first section of this act, or a majority of them, and every subsequent election shall be held by the president and directors of said company.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the said president and directors shall have power to fill all vacancies which shall occur in their own body during their continuance in office, and to prescribe the evidence of ownership and mode of transfer of shares of stock in said company; and they shall keep full records of their proceedings, which shall be open to the inspection of the stockholders at all times, and shall report at least annually a statement of their affairs to the stockholders, and shall declare dividends of the profits on any part thereof, at their discretion, and generally may exercise all the power and privileges of the corporation necessary or proper to promote the objects thereof.

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the shares of the capital stock of said company shall be deemed personal estate, and that special meetings of the stockholders may be called by the president and directors, or by any number, not less than one third in amount of shares of the stockholders, at which meeting members present, and representing a majority of the whole capital stock, shall be a quorum for the transaction of business: and the stockholders at such meetings, or at any general annual meeting where such majority of stock is represented, shall have full power to alter or repeal any by-law or regulation made by the president and directors, and may make new rules and by-laws, which shall be binding on the said president and directors: Provided, That the same be not contrary to the provisions of this act.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to exempt the property of said corporation from such taxation as similar property, belonging to any other individual or corporation, is subject to.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to authorize the said company to exercise banking privileges, or to issue any note in the form of a bank note, or certificate payable to bearer.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That each of the stockholders in the said National Hotel Company of Washington City shall be held liable in his or her individual capacity for all the debts and liabilities of the said company, however contracted or incurred, to be recovered by suit as other debts or liabilities, before the court or tribunal having jurisdiction of the case.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That it may be lawful for Congress hereafter to alter, amend, change, or repeal the foregoing act.

APPROVED, August 3, 1854.
